ADMISSION PRICES and FILM RENTALS

Exhibitors say rise in rental charges is not the solution of war problems and object to increasing prices to "pay the freight" for Hollywood.

Production capital takes stock in cost emergency.

Producers, granting 10 per cent wage increase to 11 unions, protest it will cost $5,000,000 in year.

Increased industrial activity to fill belligerents' orders expected to aid theatre attendance.

France resumes production but bars alien workers; Belgium reopens theatres; Five more nations clamp down import and censorship restrictions.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

WHILE the motion picture had plenty of problems in several sectors from labour relations to budgets to consider, the box office outlook this week was generally cheerful. The seasonal upturn appeared to be augmented by increasing employment in industrial centers and crops returns in the big agricultural areas.

As obviously as usual the box office curve was following the employment trend. The motion picture's revenues are all made of payroll dollars, as every showman knows.

Despite the "war babies" anticipations of the Wall Street market, the general business betterment to be noted did not appear to be of a war boom quality. For instance, the Saturday Evening Post, the advertising pages of which are sometimes considered a national business barometer, in reporting "a greater volume of advertising than any issue since September 12, 1931," for its coming October 14th issue, interpreted the figure as reflecting "normal improvement," since all of the space for that issue was placed before the outbreak of the new World War.

Interesting and encouraging, if not exciting, figures appeared in the motion picture business. For example, reports for last Friday, Saturday and Sunday from about 180 Paramount theatres showed an increase over the same days last year of about $80,000, which means somewhere between ten and fifteen per cent upturn for most of the theatres concerned. Conspicuous improvement was to be noted in Detroit where the motor car assembly lines pour out the new season's models. Also the coal and iron regions were doing better.

PERTURBED indeed were the newsreel makers, with a World War and a set of military censorships completely, or all but completely, bottling the material.

It appeared probable that there would be little of actual war action scenes until such time as the propaganda machines of the warring powers should get organized and functioning. At that time there will be in all probability vastly more war films than the American screen will find of value.

The American public interest, waiting to be served, was made manifest this week by continuous lines at the newsreel theatres of New York where the endlessly flowing audiences saw all the war personalities and pictures of planes and ships from the library shelves, along with dialogue and lectures as exciting as could be fabricated from the painfully meager communiques of the press and radio.

"In the last war," remarked Mr. Edgar B. Hatrick, in charge of Hearst newsreel operations from the beginning in 1914, "the newsreels had the greatest stars of the screen, such figures as Foch, Petain, King Albert of Belgium, and the Prince of Wales. We made the statesmen and the military conscious of the screen and gave the motion picture the beginnings of its real international importance."

THE first action material out of the war came from the German propaganda offices, showing scenes in Poland. In the eyes of the editorial experts a certain fabricated quality appeared in portions of the German release, which was nonetheless exciting.

This week the French authorities in Paris began the issue to the newsreels, for syndication, of film showing troops moving up toward the front in various areas, the grim slogging, hard preliminaries of a campaign to come. Extreme caution was taken to make identification of organizations and locales impossible. The material was unromantic, but real war.

Screenwise the British were yet to make war releases. It seemed probable that they might be a long time in doing so. The British appear to have adopted, with reference to such subjects as the Bremen and the submarine campaign, a policy of "keep it dark and make 'em worry." This ties neatly with the British pamphlet bombardment of the German public—but it does not make pictures.

No war pictures, from any war, have ever compared favourably with war as made in Hollywood.

HELLO SUCKERS

JUST a handful of years back, while so many of the ardent juveniles of the pictures columns of the lay press were extolling the extraordinary artistic excellence of Russian films, this page was in the lone position of pointing to their inept technique and crude devotion to the cause of the Red Revolution.

One will recollect such masterpieces of the sickle-and-hammer brand as "Three Songs About Lenin" and "Chapayev" and other expositions of exploits of women in the domestic pursuits of the tractor and machine gun.

Now comes Dr. David H. Dubrowsky of New York, former director of the Russian Red Cross and friend of the early Bolshevists, to testify in Washington to the integration of the picture program with Soviet propaganda, "which the Americans swallowed" and which "they paid for by viewing the films."

It was tough enough for the cinema's critical admirers of the "great Russian adventure" when they found themselves in a Stalin-Hitler bed, but now to be told that that "virile art" they lauded was loaded is tougher.

RESEARCH

THERE'S suggestion of a new daring in the announcement of "Intermezzo, a Love Story" as the title of the next and shortly forthcoming Selznick production. The flamboyant, hellbent conservatism of the motion picture is nowhere more commonly manifest than in its choice of titles, which generally, and possibly correctly, assume that the public is afraid of words. It is to be judged by the movements in this case that there was much prayerful consideration. United Artists admits the employment of Daniel Starch, Ross Federal Service Corporation and a radio survey by George Fisher, commentator on the Mutual network, to find out if picture patrons got anything out of the word "intermezzo." According to the unbiased Mr. Lynn Farnol, eighty per cent of the persons questioned chose the "intermezzo" title out of an offering of eight others. It remains possible that they want to know what an intermezzo looks like. That would be box office, too.

Terry Ramsaye

This Week

Domestic Outlook

With curtailment and retrenchment in the air, the week was marked by the first open notice from Hollywood that American exhibitors must supply additional revenue to compensate for lost foreign markets and by an immediate answer from exhibitors that any attempt to transfer any unfair share of the burden of retrenchment to them would be resisted. It was the exhibitors' stand that the war provided an opportunity for reduction of Hollywood expenditures long felt to be excessive. Most theatre operators saw prospects of increased attendance following upon the upturn in business and industry. The possibility of increased admission prices was under discussion, but no circuit operator would make any definite commitment.

The domestic scene is reported on page 13.

The Last Round-Up

New York's Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia and the two-fisted State of Montana are the final opponents in a two year old dispute between a Missoula, Mont., radio station, charging conspiracy to deprive it of the use of copyrighted music, and ASCAP, NBC and CBS. The mayor has ordered Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine to take up with the city corporation counsel the matter of warrants received from the district attorney of Missoula for the arrest of 11 officials of the music society and the radio networks. They are Lenox Lohr, president, Niles Trammel, vice-preisdent, A. L. Ashby, general counsel, and John Royal, production director, all of NBC; William Klauber, vice-president of CBS; Isaac Levy, station WCAU, Philadelphia; Gene Buck, president, John Paine, general manager, E. C. Mills, executive officer, Louis D. Frohlich, general counsel, all of ASCAP, and John Doe.

The warrants were accompanied by a note from the Montana district attorney asking the New York police not to serve the warrants if any of the defendants resisted arrest or extradition. The radio officials said they would resist. The ASCAP officials said they would go quietly if the others would.

Boots and saddles, Montana!

War and Taxes

Possibilities that the planned revision of the Federal tax laws may be deferred were raised in Washington Tuesday by Representative Doughton (Dem., N. C.), chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, who disclosed that his group had decided upon an indefinite postponement of its projected rewriting of the revenue laws.

Plans made before the adjournment of the last regular session of Congress in August called for the return of the committee to Washington early in November, to hold hearings and write a tax bill to be submitted to the next regular session in January.

War and Mexico

War has put American pictures further out in front in Mexico to the extent of ruling this market 98 per cent. No German pictures are being exhibited, thanks to the prompt ban administered by the Confederation of Mexican Workers, Mexico's strongest labor organization, which has all-say as to what shall and shall not appear on Mexican screens. The Confederation, ardently anti-Nazist for the last three years, is even more so now. Soon after the second world war broke, it decreed that Teutonic films were completely out from now on in Mexico. The Confederation is also directing attention to radio stations that spout German propaganda.

The only competition Americans have in this land is from Mexicans, not very much, and French and British, even less, owing to the difficulty of making deliveries. Only three French films have arrived of late, and it is expected they will be the last of the kind to get into Mexico for some time.

The stronger peso is pleasing American distributors, for the sharp slump since the war started was attributed to heavy peso buying by Germans, who feared an Ameribank embargo on Teuton funds, large gold sales by Spanish refugees who are buying real estate, and anticipatory dollar purchasing by merchants who have big fall commitments in U. S. funds.

Against Censorship

An educator's fight to abolish political censorship of films is presaged, in an annual report of the Columbia University Extension's Division of Motion Picture Study, filed last week by the division director, Dr. Russell Potter.

Dr. Potter asks dissolution of the New York State censor board, and other measures to make films truly "adult." He tempers his attack by declaring that it is directed against state and regional censor boards, not against the Production Code Administration. He is against political censorship, he emphasizes; and the industry self-censorship is an industry matter. Political censorship he calls un-American, stupid, and a hidden tax on all parties in production, distribution and consumption of pictures.

Berman Stays

Pandro S. Berman will remain at RKO Radio until November 1st, although he had asked that his present contract be terminated no later than October 1st. He will stay on with RKO by mutual agreement.

Mr. Berman, who has been in charge of RKO production for the last five years, in February asked for an early release from his contract as executive producer.

Mr. Berman's original plans were to go abroad for a specified time. However, it is unlikely that Mr. Berman will hold to that course.

Amusement Census

Details of the 1939 census of amusements to be taken in January, were made public this week by the United States Census Bureau.

Enumerators going into the field January 2 will visit every theatre, equipped with a form on which they will report, in addition to details of identification, the seating capacity of the house, total 1939 boxoffice collections, amount of amusement tax collected from customers and paid by the theatre directly to any local, state or federal taxing agency, and details of employment. A separate report will be required for each theatre in the case of circuits.

1940 World's Fair

The directors of the New York World's Fair Corporation, meeting Tuesday for the first time since midsummer, voted to notify Robert Moses, New York Park Commissioner, that the Fair desires to exercise its option upon the Flushing Meadow grounds for another year, thereby setting in motion the formal procedure for the 1940 exposition.

Red Revenue

"Amkino Corporation, New York, Soviet-controlled distributor of USSR films in the Americas, collects $1,000,000 annually from American audiences and uses the money to pay for Communist propaganda in the United States."

That was the testimony given last Saturday to the Dies Committee on un-American Activities, at hearings in Washington, by David H. Dubrowsky, of New York, described as former director of the Soviet Red Cross in the United States, friend of many early Bolshevik leaders and once an "ardent" member of the Communist Party, now "disillusioned."

Mr. Dubrowsky, testifying that Red Russia pays its propaganda costs in this country with "U. S. dollars," brought Amkino into the open before the Dies committee for the first time.

Amkino has for years refused to divulge the total or identity of places where its pictures are shown in the U. S. "Show-window" for Red films in this country, however, is generally recognized to be the Cameo*, off Times Square, New York.

Presumably, the $1,000,000 mentioned by Dr. Dubrowsky as accruing annually from American movie fans to Amkino comes from rentals, not box office admissions, the total of which would far exceed the gross rentals for the 20 features sent annually to Amkino for distribution here. (Recent Amkino releases: "Alexander Nevsky," "Ballad of Cossack Golota," "Childhood of Maxim Gorgy," "Lenin in October," "Professor Mamlock," "Soviet Border" and "Young Pushkin.")

Amkino's Soviet films are frequently refused exhibition permits under state and city censorship, police and other powers.

Amkino is headed by Dmitry Vassiliev, as president, and Nicola Napoli, treasurer.

At Amkino's New York headquarters, 723 Seventh Avenue, Thurber Lewis, for the company, answered Dr. Dubrowsky's testimony before the Dies committee with the statement that, "Everybody knows we've been distributing Soviet pictures here for ten years or more. Certainly it doesn't need the Dies committee to point that out."

Amkino this week purchased Universal's "One Hundred Men and a Girl," musical starring Deanna Durbin, for the Soviet.

This is the first American picture to be purchased by Russia since Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times," in 1936. Negotiations have also been under way for the purchase of Walt Disney's "Snow White," and for Warner Brothers' "Juarez" and "Confessions of a Nazi Spy."

Still Unawarded

Hollywood's Motion Picture Democratic Committee is finding it difficult to award its promised scroll to the producer of the motion picture contributing the most to "the democratic ideal."

After three postponements, the award banquet and broadcast set for last Monday evening was called off indefinitely at the eleventh hour due to cancellation by Frank Murphy, United States attorney general, of his acceptance of the Committee's invitation to present the parchment personally at Victor Hugo's cafe in Hollywood.

Officially, no explanation was forthcoming for Mr. Murphy's action. Unofficial reasons heard in Hollywood and Washington varied from "President's orders" to Mr. Murphy's presence being required in the Capital because of the "war emergency" and the special session of Congress.

War and Stories

The second "World War" completes a movement recently affecting the sources of screen material, by virtually bringing to a halt the purchase of foreign plays and stories for the American screen.

Story editors estimate that in the last few years the percentage of their annual purchases provided by material from abroad has dropped from 10 per cent to one or two per cent.

The story is on page 44.

Jury Probe Opens

The Federal grand jury probe of charges of U. S. income tax evasions and labor racketeering in the motion picture industry in Hollywood opened Wednesday morning in Los Angeles, after months of investigation by the Department of Justice, as conducted by Charles Carr, assistant U. S. attorney general assigned to the case.

First testimony was taken from three officers of Hollywood banks: G. M. McLane, Jack R. Holt and F. T. Stimpfig, to be followed by Arthur W. Stebbins, motion picture insurance broker and a nephew of Joseph M. Schenck; J. B. Codd, accountant at Twentieth Century-Fox; W. D. Leahy, bank officer; Richard Castle, real estate agent; Sid Rogell, RKO studio manager; Harland Holmden, vice-president of the International IATSE, and others.

Testimony of federal grand jury investigations is not made public, of course.

U. S. Attorney Carr, at the opening, said that the first testimony would deal with income tax matters.

War and the MPPDA

The board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., met in regular quarterly session Wednesday afternoon at headquarters, 28 West 44th Street, New York.

The subject of discussion was officially disclosed in the bare announcement that "the directors took up the matter of the European war and its effect on the motion picture business, both domestic and foreign."

Following usual procedure, the meeting was adjourned until a week later, same date.

Present were Barney Balaban, president, Paramount; Nate Blumberg, president, Universal; Harry D. Buckley, representing Murray Silverstone, United Artists; Jack Cohn, vice-president, Columbia; E. W. Hammons, president, Educational; Joseph Hazen, vice-president, Warner Brothers; W. C. Michel, vice-president, Twentieth Century-Fox; George Schaefer, president, RKO; Nicholas M. Schenck, president, Loew's, Inc., and Will H. Hays, president, and Major Fred Herron, treasurer, MPPDA.

United Artists, it will be noted, had official representation at the board meeting despite the fact that the corporation had resigned from the MPPDA on August 31st.

Bonuses

United Artists' partner-producers were voted their bonuses, under the company's "incentive plans," at a meeting of the board of directors last Thursday in New York.

The "profit-sharing" plan had been agreed upon last year.

EXHIBITORS PROTEST THEY WILL NOT "PAY THE FREIGHT" FOR HOLLYWOOD BY INCREASING ADMISSION PRICES

Theatre Executives Say Rise in Rentals Is Not Solution of War Problems; Point to Opportunity of Neutral

Economic reverberations, immediate and potential, from the big guns booming along the Maginot-Siegfried frontiers in Europe's second "world war," are being heard in increasing volume in conversations and actions of the American motion picture industry, in the home offices on Broadway, the studios of Hollywood, distributing centers in the field and in theatres.

The main subject of the week was: Hollywood's first open declaration for more revenue from U. S. exhibitors to make up for lost European markets, and the almost immediate answer, a very definite one, from exhibitors that they would resist any attempts by producers to have them "carry the freight."

Next in importance was the subject of admission price changes and what might be expected in increased attendance as a result of manufacturing and production spurts in heavy industries growing out of the expected demand for war materials, if and when Congress permits sales abroad to belligerents, plus the acceleration growing out of increasing production of materials for this country itself because of the international emergency.

General Optimism Registered

With theatre heads reporting business about the same as that of the corresponding period last year, and some others finding a fall-off, in general a hopeful feeling was registered for the immediate future at least.

The demand of at least some of the majors for increased rentals to offset losses sustained by producer-distributors as a result of the curtailment of markets abroad, as evidenced by a statement made Sunday by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox and president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, was felt by theatre men to be a step in the wrong direction. They pointed out that the war provided an opportunity for Hollywood to do some pruning of its own expenditures.

Calls It Task for All

In his statement, made in Hollywood prior to his departure for Mexico and South America, Mr. Schenck said: "Theatre operators of America must do their part in helping producers of pictures to overcome the crisis caused by the loss of revenues from war-torn Europe. Producers have signified their intention of continuing to make big pictures of highest quality despite the European situation. The responsibility of making these efforts successful now lies entirely with exhibitors."

Harry Brandt, for his Independent Theatre Owners Association, said Sunday that admission prices will not be raised despite the fact that film rental prices have increased considerably since the outbreak of the war. Elsewhere, some exhibitors were planning increases, others were planning decreases; while Loew's, RKO and National Theatres reported that, for the present, no changes in admission prices would be made.

The rise in industrial activity has made prospects for theatre business in the Midwest exceedingly bright, according to Harry Ross, president of Ross Federal Service.

STORM HALTS COAST HEAT

The record eight day heat wave in Southern California ended Sunday with violent winds and torrential rains. The storm, in which 30 persons were believed to have lost their lives, caused no damage to studio properties, but at the height of the gale, Harry Rapf, producer, and a party were marooned in a small boat off Malibu. It rode out the storm until Mr. Rapf and his guests were rescued Monday morning.

Parties of guests on yachts owned by Errol Flynn, Frank Morgan, Victor McLaglen, John Ford and Frank Borsage were similarly marooned off Catalina by the high winds and seas, preventing landing until Monday. More than five inches of rain fell in downtown Los Angeles within six hours.

Schenck Asks Theatres To "Share Responsibility"

Mr. Schenck's statement continued as follows: "It is no longer a question of profits, but of the preservation of the present quality standards of the entire industry, theatres as well as studios. Millions of dollars invested in theatres throughout America would be just so much brick and mortar if the structure of film production collapsed. Exhibitors must therefore share the responsibility of seeing that the studios derive enough rentals to permit them to continue in operation.

"First of all, it is essential that exhibitors do everything possible to extend the playing time of pictures whenever public patronage justifies it. Those pictures which have been showing for one week should, whenever possible, be held over for a second week, and a picture which definitely rates a two-week run should be extended for a third week. Likewise, in subsequent runs, three-day pictures should be held over for five or six days.

"In order to justify this, exhibitors will find it necessary to display greater showmanship and introduce new ideas. It can and must be done to insure a return to the producer that will compensate for decreased revenues elsewhere, for only by increased rentals from the theatres of this country can producers be assured of revenues commensurate with the bigger type of pictures. Producers are willing to go to any length and expense to make greater pictures, and they have every faith that the public will support them.

"A high standard of quality in production has been attained, as evidenced by the fact that American-made films are recognized as the finest by the amusement public of the entire world. This leadership must not be sacrificed, nor can standards be permitted to be lowered.

"For their part, producers are keeping operating costs as low as possible, but no operating measures by studios alone could offset the great loss of European revenue if the high standard of quality is to be maintained. It is, therefore, up to the exhibitor now to make this high standard of quality possible."

Theatre Leaders Against Increased Prices

A large circuit operator, who because of his distributor affiliation insisted upon anonymity, countered this week by saying: "The war has brought this business into a position to do what it should have been done long ago. Hollywood salaries should be adjusted to bring them into line with present conditions, and the war is a good opportunity to correct this from the top, not the bottom.

"As to increased rentals, where are they to come from? With the average rental now being 32 per cent (of the theatre's income) and with union wage scales what they are, the only opportunity for the theatre man's profit would have to come by cutting down on cashiers, ushers and others essential to adequate servicing of the public."

Walter Vincent, vice-president of Consolidated Film and of the Wilmer and Vincent Circuit, said this week that producers would get increased revenue out of this country if good pictures continued to be produced.

Mr. Vincent said that if the producers would "continue putting ability, the right stories and the right stars in pictures, they will get increased revenue out of this country. I think war always improves the theatre business in neutral countries such as ours," Mr. Vincent, who has been in the theatre business some 50 years, continued. "Extended playing time, especially in smaller cities, does not hold up. Typically, in one week, you get all you can." Mr. Vincent recalled that during the last war there had been very few raised admission prices.

Charles C. Moskowitz, Loew's vice-president in charge of all theatres in Greater New York, said that "It's still too early to tell about the effects of the war on theatre business." However, it is reported that no price increase has been planned for Loew's theatres; while it is pointed out that the Government tax on tickets selling for over 40 cents may tend to freeze prices at present levels. The tax, which is 10 per cent of all prices over 40 cents, would tend to give exhibitors raising their prices to, say, 50 cents, only five cents out of the 10-cent raise.

Spyros Skouras of National Theatres is hopeful of increased business in the near future, although reporting that "the last three weeks have not been as good as the corresponding period last year; it will take a little time for people to adjust themselves to present conditions." Mr. Skouras also said that there was "nothing definite on the status of admission prices yet."

Brandt Bars Rise In Admissions

Saying that "motion pictures are a poor man's amusement," Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, Sunday stated that admission prices would not be raised, even though, he said, producers and distributors were trying to obtain higher rental prices due to the loss of European markets occasioned by the war. This loss of revenue should be made up by economies in production, rather than in higher admission prices, he added.

CITE INCREASED INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY

Exhibitors were assuming an attitude of "watchful waiting," due to the higher prices asked by distributors, Mr. Brandt continued, adding that "Some one has to give in. I think it will be the producers. It won't be the public."

Ross Optimistic on Return from Midwest

Harry Ross, president of Ross Federal Service, checkers of attendance and receipts for distributors on percentage pictures, said that the upswing in box office grosses is general through the Midwest, from which he returned to New York this week.

There is a general feeling of optimism through the industrial sections, and Detroit is booming with automobile production at a high level, while Pennsylvania steel mills are back to their 1925 level of prosperity with thousands being reemployed, he said.

RKO Attendance Normal; Salaries Are Reduced

While RKO theatres reported that with the exception of the first three days of the war, business was unchanged, and that things would "have to boom" before admission prices were raised; a strongly pessimistic note in the industry, resulting from the war, was sounded by George J. Schaefer, president of RKO.

In a statement released Monday, Mr. Schaefer said that company executives and employees earning more than $4,500 a year would take salary cuts ranging up to 35 per cent in the highest brackets, so that the company would be able to complete its entire new season production schedule without any impairment of its quality or entertainment.

"I have withheld any comment on RKO plans to meet the emergency created by the war in Europe until I could review the situation thoroughly. I was unwilling to make a statement that we would not curtail production unless I was reasonably confident that such a course was possible.

"Already there has been a drastic falling off in foreign revenue, which I believe will continue throughout the duration of the war. In view of the drop in foreign exchange and possible restrictions on transfer of funds, the limited reopening of theatres in England and France leads to no certain conviction that substantial revenues will be available from these countries and we in RKO have felt it necessary to find means of effecting economies at home which will enable us, without dependence on income from the United Kingdom and France, to maintain our production program with quality and entertainment value unimpaired.

"I now believe we have plans which will permit this to be done and done effectively. As part of our broad program temporary reductions in pay are unavoidable, but such reductions will be confined to employees in the higher brackets. No employee receiving $4,500 per year or less will be affected. From this point upward a graduated scale will apply so that the largest salaries will receive the largest percentage cuts. Some salaries will be cut over 35 per cent.

"The program which we have devised to meet the war emergency, including the salary reductions, has been approved at meetings of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and RKO Service Corporation.

"It is my confident belief that with the fine morale now being shown throughout the organization our plans will be successful and that the RKO program will be completed without the least sacrifice of quality or entertainment value."

"CODE" CHANGES IN UNIVERSAL CONTRACTS

Disclosure last week that Universal is drafting a plan for arbitrating contract disputes with its exhibitor customers, in line with the trend toward individual action by majors to inject "code" concessions independently in their product dealings, was followed this week by the admission from William A. Scully, Universal's general sales manager, that the company also is endeavoring to complete contract changes in its 1939-40 license agreements, chief among which will be a graduated cancellation concession. Warners, Paramount and MGM have to date effected contract revisions of one kind or another, for the benefit of exhibitors—following the recent "killing" of the majors' trade practice program by the Department of Justice.

Any contract innovations decided upon by Universal will be retroactive for all new season deals and will conform with existing company policy and the limitations imposed by the recent Department of Justice prohibition upon an industry code, Mr. Scully said.

Revisions of the license agreement will not be extensive, the Universal sales head pointed out, inasmuch as Universal has not collected a score charge for years, nor has it made the licensing of shorts and newsreels a condition for licensing of its features. Moreover, the company does not produce trailers.

The optional arbitration clause will, of necessity, be applicable only to disputes arising out of performance of the contract and cannot be employed in any complaint involving a third party.

The company has no serious problem stemming from designation of play dates, it was said, and does not refuse to negotiate for its product with any responsible exhibitor for all or part of its output and for some time past has permitted cancellation of pictures on justified grounds of unsuitability for local exhibition.

"Staples" Will Rise, Declares Golden

Edward A. Golden, Monogram vice-president, addressing the Independent Theatre Owners' Association of West Virginia at its convention Tuesday at Clarksburg, said that "In the midst of a panic, staples rise. In the present crisis, all companies are talking about concentrating on the American market, and our company has concentrated on staples for that market."

Calls "Super" Films Vulnerable to Cuts

Turning to the situation in Hollywood, the Wall Street Journal observed Monday that "with the European war apparently certain to cut heavily into revenues of many major motion picture companies, the industry is attempting speedy adjustment of expenditures. . . . Roughly speaking, about 25 to 35 per cent of gross film rentals come from foreign sales. Of this, about one-half comes from Great Britain."

The paper continued: "The reduction of profit margins as a result of dwindling foreign markets will be felt mostly in the field of the 'superproductions' where, despite heavy costs, showing abroad, particularly in the British Empire, made these ventures profitable.

Goldwyn Idea Premature: Schenck

In an answer to the suggestions advanced last week by Samuel Goldwyn for the creation of a committee to study industry problems created by the war, and sent to Joseph M. Schenck, Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and to executives of the Screen Writers', Actors' and Directors' Guilds, Mr. Schenck said that it was too early for "the setting of a definite policy." Mr. Schenck, in a letter to Mr. Goldwyn, said:

"I feel that you are entirely correct in your analysis of the situation caused by the war in Europe and that your estimate of losses is conservative. I am sure that all producers are agreed that the first requirement is to give the public the very best in pictures. Nothing must be permitted to weaken that requirement.

"However, it is my present belief that your suggestion for creation of a fact-finding committee is somewhat premature. The extent of losses in revenue is not sufficiently apparent to permit setting of definite policies."

The Screen Actors' Guild, through Ralph Morgan, president, had offered its cooperation to Mr. Goldwyn late last week, while the Screen Writers' Guild replied that it wished to get facts regarding a possible increase in domestic revenue, while agreeing on the need for cooperative action.

"Republic Doesn't Fear War"—Herbert Yates

War or not, Republic will go ahead, according to H. J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries, who is on the coast this week. The company has 11 pictures on the new season schedule and five now in production; and it will soon start 10 more features and two more serials, Mr. Yates said.

Mr. Yates cited the less than 20 per cent of total revenue which the company receives from abroad, as a factor which discounts the present war. About Great Britain, he remarked that it was the company's "biggest foreign market," and that the company had been unable to get money from the country for a month—but that the British Government has ordered eight Gene Autry pictures for exhibition to its armed forces.

Eastman Self-Sufficient, Says Notice to Staff

The Eastman Kodak Company, by notices to its employees on its Rochester factory bulletin boards, revealed last week that the present European War leaves it practically untouched.

The company is virtually self-sufficient, was the assurance.

Some foreign optical glass is still used, the company said; but added that the quantity was minute, and the stock on hand ample.

FRENCH STUDIOS RESUME; NEW LAWS IN CANADA, GREECE, TURKEY, AUSTRIA

France Bars Alien Workers; Theatres Reopen in Belgium on Limited Scale; British Exhibitors Seek Concessions

War promises to be a No. 1 subject of conversation and action in the motion picture industry for a long time. The news grist of this week alone showed these developments:

Hollywood and New York were turning to the business of possible economic effects, on production budgets, distribution rentals and admissions. See page 13.

Hollywood's retrenchment moves and reaction to demands for maintenance of quality production through elimination of waste and inefficiency are reported on page 17.

Production in France, completely halted at the outbreak, is about to be resumed. Stars are being called to the colors, however. Employment of all alien workers, including those in motion pictures, both old and new, has been forbidden.

Theatres in Belgium have reopened, on a limited daily schedule.

London exhibitors still are attempting to get Governmental approval for staggered operations.

New film import rules have been adopted in Greece.

Turkey has imposed regulations governing the censorship of all films and scenarios.

Canada has set its rules for wartime censorship, prescribing penalties for infractions and naming film censors.

Vienna regulations curb all foreigners, including those in motion pictures.

Censorship was lifted in Bolivia.

Latvia has imposed censorship on cables, Switzerland and Rumania have relaxed communications strictures—all involving the motion picture business as in other lines.

Twentieth Century-Fox has decided to push its overseas sales drive, despite the war.

Reports that the war has given Hollywood a virtual monopoly in the Balkan states were brought to New York by M. J. Soukias, of Columbia.

French Production Resuming

Jean Renoir, French director, is understood to have been put in charge of a resumption of French production "along propaganda and artistic lines," by the French Ministry of Information. Many French stars are in the army, but may be recalled, if Renoir wishes them for the new work.

Cable dispatches to New York newspapers said that Charles Boyer and Fernandel Boyer are in uniform. Albert Prejean, former air ace, is again in the same role. Jean Gabin is in the marines. Pierre Blanchar is an infantry officer; Raimos and Raymond Cordy are driving trucks; Rene Dary and Paul Cambo are awaiting assignments; Bernard Lancret is in the artillery; Gilbert Gillis is in the anti-aircraft defense. Feramus, a star of the silent days, is an air force officer. Charles Tenet is also in the air force.

A new government decree in France bars aliens from employment anywhere, including motion pictures, except by special permission. Those now employing foreigners must show reasons why they cannot be replaced with Frenchmen.

Belgium Reopens Theatres

Belgium theatres, closed at the outbreak, have been allowed to reopen, from 11 A.M. to 10 P.M. daily. Attendance is reported returning to normal, and the only difficulty is now that of obtaining prints.

British Censorship Set Up

The Censorship Division of the new British Ministry of Information has issued a detailed statement regarding arrangements for the application of special "security" censorship of films during the war. Basically the decree makes it an offense to influence public opinion in a manner likely to be prejudicial to the efficient prosecution of the war.

From diplomatic sources in London it was learned on Tuesday that the British quota act is not likely to be altered drastically as a result of the war. American producer-distributor interests were said to have approached a high Government authority with a suggestion that it might be politic to suspend the Films Act and to have been told that this move probably would not be considered. A further indication was given by Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade.

A deputation of London West End theatre operators met on Wednesday with officials of the Home Affairs secretariat and were promised a decision soon on a plan for reopening their houses. It was predicted that the Home Office would agree to the trade scheme under which 15 news theatres and six smaller houses would be reopened. Staggered operations by which six first run houses in the Leicester Square, Piccadilly area would remain open until 10 P. M. one week and six others the following week, may be allowed, it was said.

The Greek Government has established new regulations for the importation of motion picture films, effective immediately, it was announced at Washington this week, after a report from the United States Commercial Attache in Athens.

The regulations set an annual world quota of 370 films, from July 1 to June 30th. Of this, 250 may be exhibited in first run houses with orchestras, with admissions over 17 cents. The remaining may be shown in houses with lower admissions.

Features have been shifted from the free to the general quota list. Additional prints of features already imported may be imported free of quota restrictions. Shorts and newsreels not exceeding approximately 1,500 feet in length are also free of restrictions.

The average royalties payable on features imported are fixed at $1,200 for the first group of 250, and $300 for the second group of 120.

Czech Rules Follow German

Correlating rules of the Czechoslovakian film industry with those obtaining in Germany, the Prague Ministry of Trade this week virtually barred "non-Aryans" and Freemasons from working in motion pictures.

The rules provide that no Czechoslovakian theatre may screen a picture in which a "non-Aryan" or Freemason has a lead; that films in which such persons appear may not receive the approval of the Trade Board's Film Advisory Board, and shall not receive Government recognition or subsidy; that stories purchased for film production must be approved by the national culture bureau.

New Turkish Regulations

The United States Department of Commerce Commercial Attache at Istanbul, Turkey, reports the application of new censorship laws. A special board of censors, presided over by the city's Mayor, will pass on films. The board meets four days weekly and cannot censor more than two films at one meeting. The new regulations are lengthly prescriptive; among the provisions is one requiring that all foreign films must be supplied with Turkish subtitles. Another one bars the passage of films "which tire the eyes."

Canada Appoints Censors

Claude Melancon, of the Canadian National Railways, and L. Clare Moyer, Clerk of the Senate, will work with Walter S. Thompson, newly created Chief Censor, as the Canadian Government's new censor board for the duration of the war. Mr. Thompson is chief censor; Mr. Moyer will be Federal censor for films; and Melancon will probably censor French language films.

Mr. Thompson this week revealed some censorship regulations, among them:

Persons cannot make, or publish, "adverse or unfavorable statements, reports, or opinions, likely to prejudice the defense of Canada or its prosecution of the war."

Nor can they do the same, if such should prejudice the recruiting, training, or administration of the country's armed forces.

The regulations provide for the seizure, suspension, and impounding of such radio stations, films, or publications which break regulations.

The penalties, of fine and imprisonment, apply not only to publications, films and radio, but to persons who speak at public meetings.

Bolivia Lifts Censorship

In Bolivia, the new president, Carlos Quintanilla, has suspended censorship, removed all restraints on freedom of the press and the filming of newsreels, and announced plans for a general election.

Cable Restrictions

The Latvian Government has imposed a censorship on cablegrams. None is allowed in code.

22 COUNTRIES WITH MONEY RESTRICTIONS

Foreign departments of the majors, in New York, this week estimated that 17 countries, many in Europe, had currency restrictions, and that the war has added five more to the list.

The countries with currency restrictions are Germany, Poland, Latvia, Esthonia, Jugoslavia, Lithuania, Hungary, Greece, Bulgaria, Turkey, Argentina, Spain, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, Rumania, and Japan. Those in which the war has made necessary restrictions of currency are France, England, Australia, New Zealand, and Canada.

the beginning of the War, now allows code from the United States and other non-belligerents.

Canada has imposed cable restrictions on messages to and from all countries except the United States.

Rumania briefly suspended transatlantic phone service last week, then resumed it.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company reports that transatlantic service to Spain and Portugal had not been re-established.

Fox to Push Sales

Undaunted by European hostilities, the foreign department of Twentieth Century-Fox will carry on its S. R. Kent "Overseas Drive." Leslie F. Whelen, of the department, is leader.

Great Britain, it was announced, this week delivered a little more than 55 per cent of the accumulated two weeks' drive quota. This was declared very good, in consideration of the war.

Revenue from European countries has been estimated by transatlantic phone conversations with Ben Miggins, Continental European manager, in Paris. It is admitted that countries from that continent are trailing in the drive. Japan is leading.

No information is forthcoming from Germany, Poland, and Rumania, the Paris office being cut off from these countries.

The company's Scandinavian branches report business slightly better than the same period last year.

To help offset foreign losses occasioned by the involvement of France and Great Britain in the war, Twentieth Century Fox is driving ahead in South America.

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, left Los Angeles this week for a Mexican and South American survey.

Mr. Hutchinson arrived at the New York home office this week, from Havana. He had been in Latin America.

Mr. Hutchinson placed the Caribbean offices under the direct supervision of the home office, with William J. Sullivan supervising the Central American branches.

Previously listed war films available to U. S. exhibitors, as newly released and reissued, and previously listed, were augmented this week by another half dozen.

There is "The Battle Fleets of England," the latest issue of the March of Time, which, according to RKO, its distributor, is a complete and uncensored exposition of the British Navy's role in the defense of England and in the plans of the Allies to win against Germany.

Also being released by RKO is the March of Time's "Soldiers With Wings," a "complete and authentic," according to RKO, story of the United States Army Air Corps.

A. L. Rule, independent distributor of war films, has announced the release of "When Germany Surrendered," in early October.

Mayer & Burstyn have acquired "That They May Live," French war film for U. S. release.

John Mednikow, of Chicago, has acquired the Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri rights to the picture. Capitol Pictures of Omaha will distribute the film in Nebraska and Iowa. John Ludwig, theatre operator of Milwaukee, has the rights for Washington, Oregon, California, and Arizona.

The picture, which carries the PCA seal, has been tried out in Milwaukee, New Orleans, and Los Angeles.

Mr. Rule's office is in Hollywood.

Al Selig, of New York, this week released a French-made feature, "Double Crime on the Maginot Line," through Tower Pictures.

Lieutenant Harry J. Lewis, of the United States Army Signal Corps, arrived in Hollywood last week to begin training, under the cooperative program, carried on between the War Department and the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the training of officers in film production, studio operations, and sound and laboratory techniques.

British and French troops with tanks, railway guns, and motorized units streaming to the front give a war-time tone to all of the U. S. newsreels, and are being featured in all issues.

U. S. Gains in Balkans

The European War has given American motion pictures a virtual monopoly in the Balkan European market, but it has also made exceedingly difficult the importation of films into that market, according to M. J. Soukias, franchise holder for Columbia and United Artists in

AUGUST BROADWAY TAX REVENUE OFF

Federal admission tax collections in the Broadway District dropped to $336,191 in August, from $397,415 in July, but were well above the $282,513 record for August, 1938, it was reported this week by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Losses from July were shown in all categories except admissions to roof gardens and cabarets, where tax collections jumped from $34,519 to $40,431, it was shown.

Taxes collected at the box-office dropped from $344,694 in July to $287,463 in August, the bureau announced, while receipts from free or reduced rate admissions decreased from $7,192 to $3,950; from tickets sold by brokers from $8,162 to $4,346; from tickets sold by proprietors in excess of the established price from $181 to nothing, and from permanent use or lease of boxes and seats from $2,666 to $1.

Evacuating London with the first bark of the war guns, American branch offices moved from Wardour Street to the quiet of the countryside. Paramount settled in a 30-room mansion at Shenley, Herefordshire, which rejoiced in the name of Pinks Farm. Front and rear views of the building are shown in photographs 1 and 8. In 2 Roger C. Clement and John A. Ojerholm, Americans remaining for the time being with the British crew, install sandbags at strategic points. The publicity department is shown at work in 3. Photographs 5 and 8 show the construction of an air raid trench and a bombproof shelter in the gardens. At left in 6 is David E. Rose, managing director, with C. G. Dickinson, general sales manager, at right, and P. D. Cornwell and Fred Chandler. Mr. Clement and Mr. Ojerholm, relaxing after their sandbag activities, are shown again in 7 with Tony Reddin and Mr. Cornwell.

HOLLYWOOD CONSIDERS ITS CRISIS OF COSTS IN WORLD WAR MARKET

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

Hollywood's realization that it was standing on the threshold of a crisis, provoked by the war in Europe, has come slowly. Now it is convinced that the war is real, that it will last a long time, and there is a strong feeling that the United States eventually will be drawn into it. Certain that the Continental market has vanished and not sure what influence future events may have on the domestic market, Hollywood seriously is going about the business of making tremendous readjustments. The prospect of what must be done has stunned the town, but it hasn't panicked it. Rather it is giving evidence that it is honestly and earnestly gearing itself to do its duty to the American exhibitor.

Already things have happened. The number of persons who have been lopped off payrolls may be conservatively estimated at between 2,500 and 3,000. This is only the beginning. The purgees ranged in caliber from moguls to minions. Many were just plain luxuries. Fat cat salaries have been ruthlessly slashed and eliminated. In the fields of production and physical operation an amazing amount of corner cutting is being done. Silly things are being done, too, and it could not be otherwise but that a lot of buck passing is going on which seeks to place responsibility for what is wrong on the shoulders of others.

Shorter Features Proposed

But for things that are more practical. Actual plans are underway to reduce the length of pictures. A running time of 80 minutes has been suggested for Class A pictures, 60 for B's. This would effect savings in every department from creative to mechanical and thus reduce costs. Non-essentials are being eliminated all the way down the line. Budgets of pictures in work and slated for production are being pruned.

The week's news brought the intelligence that Columbia's Harry and Jack Cohn had voluntarily taken salary reductions, and the high placed RKO-Radio executives would receive lower pay checks henceforth.

Special impact on the Hollywood scene was made by the editorial expression of Martin Quigley, publisher, in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD of September 16 under the title of "The American Theatre Owner has a Right to Expect . . . "

The expression made articulate and particular the pressures of the problems before the industry upon its production machine.

Comment about Mr. Quigley's observation was considerable, in the main concurring and occasionally at sharp variance. With a majority expressing an awareness of the situation recorded, there were also those who, typically, but anonymously, wished that the subject had not been mentioned.

"Martin Quigley hit the nail on the head," was the comment of W. Ray Johnston of Monogram. "Picture quality must be kept up and costs must come down. That may seem contradictory, but if the big executives will cut their own exorbitant salaries and stars will work for figures that conform to the world market conditions it can be done. Executives should have their entire staffs concentrate on ideas that have showmanship value, that mean money at the box office. The motion picture industry in my opinion is big enough to adjust itself to the present situation."

URGES EXTENSION OF PLAYING TIME

"First of all, it is essential that the exhibitors do everything possible to extend the playing time of pictures whenever public patronage justifies," according to Joseph M. Schenck, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association in Hollywood and head of Twentieth Century-Fox." Those pictures that have been showing for one week should, whenever possible, be held over for a second week, and a picture which definitely rates a two-week run should be extended for a third week. Likewise, in the subsequent runs, three-day pictures should be held over for five or six days.

Asks Exhibitors To Help

Characteristically, Walter Wanger didn't pull any punches when he had his say. "The editorial 'The American Theatre Owner has a Right to Expect' is one of the best I have read in a long time. I concur that Hollywood must quickly adjust itself to the new order of things without lessening the quality of its product. I am certain that Hollywood will meet the demands of the situation with intelligence despite the difficulties it is facing aside from the diminishing world market resulting from the war. There is a great deal more to making hit pictures today than most exhibitors believe. While producers are enforcing judicious economies to make their investment in talent show to more advantage on the screen, the exhibitor and distributor must take inventory of their stocks." Thereupon urging exhibitors to overhaul their merchandising methods and adapt more enthusiastic and up-to-date showmanship, Mr. Wanger maintained that "a closer bond of understanding between theatre men and those who make their entertainment merchandise is most essential."

Wants Constructive Action

While Mr. Wanger suggested closer producer-exhibitor cooperation, Samuel Goldwyn, who usually gets down to cases when others temporize, advocated it strongly. "I am heartily in accord with Mr. Quigley's editorial," he said. "I recommend it as constructive reading to all people engaged in the show business. At this moment I am making every attempt to bring into conference all creative elements engaged in making films, this with the hope that something constructive along the lines of Mr. Quigley's editorial might result. I also believe that a good deal of benefit might come from a practical round table discussion attended by theatre and production interests."

"He's right," wrote Leo McCarey, producer-director. "Production costs can be cut in places where they'll prove least noticeable and certainly in such a manner that wages of workers won't be affected. Greater concentration must be placed on story material. Magnificence of sets must be toned down. Other shearable corners can be cut if sincerely sought. This industry has grown up. It's about time it proved it. Apparently this is the time."

Urges "Soft Pedal"

In discussing Mr. Quigley's editorial, director Clarence Brown urged use of the soft pedal with the remark "Let's keep our troubles to ourselves."

"The war emergency has provided an opportunity to get rid of a lot of dead wood," he continued, "but panic grips this industry quicker than it does others when even the smell of an emergency arises. With this panic always comes a veritable blast of written comment issued by the studios themselves.

"The result is a temporary loss of confidence in one of America's leading fields of endeavor which can only result in loss at the box office."

William LeBaron, Paramount production chief considered public confidence from another angle. Concurring in the conclusion that the war emergency is a challenge to industry management, intelligent acceptance of which may place the business on a stabilized basis, Mr. LeBaron pointed out, "Costs should be cut in every place but in wages. As in any big business, this industry has its deadwood and that is where the cuts should come—mercilessly. Otherwise public confidence will be shaken, and when that happens the industry is in a precarious situation."

Wants Strong Minds

"Hollywood is prone to hysteria and old fashioned jitters," said Sam Wood. "We need strong minds now; men who can't be easily flustered, men who, like Mr. Quigley, have the courage to speak their convictions. We need men who can take command with calmness and confidence."

Solicitude for exhibitor interests was bespoken in the comments of Hal Roach, Edward Small and Jack L. Warner. Reavowing adherence to a 25 year old policy, Mr. Roach said, "It has been our constant endeavor in almost a quarter of century of picture making to achieve as near perfection as was physically possible in the type of entertainment emanating from our studio. In trying times, such as these, good business dictates that we adhere closer than ever to that policy . . . and by good business I have in mind the interests of exhibitors, so sharply pointed out by Mr. Quigley, because the exhibitor is the fountain head from which good business for the producer flows."

"When Mr. Quigley discussed 'What the American Exhibitor has a Right to Expect'," said Edward Small, "he warned Hollywood that it must put its house in order. The arguments he presents are sound. The remedies he suggests are sane and practical. But when Mr. Quigley addressed Hollywood, he also spoke to the exhibitors. A big gamble is being taken. The exhibitor has a large stake in it. They must protect that stake with the same spirit of earnestness that is now inspiring every producer I know."

Reading of the editorial was the occasion for Jack L. Warner to make a pledge. "Mr. Quigley definitely points out that we have a big obligation to the theatre owners of America. Those thousands of exhibitors depend upon us for their livelihood and we pledge to them that there will be no curtailment whatever in our plans. We will make every picture we have announced since the convention and even add several more to the program."

Urges Exhibitors To Act

Joseph M. Schenck of 20th Century-Fox maintained that the success of the efforts of producers to continue a high level production standard in the face of lost European returns depended entirely upon the support given by exhibitors.

"The millions of dollars invested in theatres throughout America would be just so much brick and mortar if the structure of film production collapsed," said Mr. Schenck. "The exhibitor must therefore share the responsibility of seeing that the studios derive enough rentals to permit them to continue in operation. . . .

"For their part the producers are keeping operating costs as low as possible. But no economy measures by the studios alone could offset the great loss of European revenue if a high standard of quality is to be maintained.

"It is therefore up to the exhibitor now to make this high standard of quality possible."

Sol Lesser, whose interest in the subject awakened memories of 25 years ago when a similar condition confronted a practically new industry, remarked, "Martin Quigley lays it on the line—and he's right!" Reminding oldtimers that out of the turmoil of the World War pictures grew to be something more than a non-essential industry, Mr. Lesser was confident that the industry of today would realize its opportunity and reorient its affairs.

Said Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of studio operations at Paramount: "Martin Quigley's analysis of the situation of the moving picture industry in the light of the emergency created by the European war is a sound and common sense summing up." Repeating a statement issued in New York a few days ago that there would be no deviation from the announced 1939-40 Paramount program and that the company had the largest backlog of pictures ready for release in its history, he further declared, "At the same time, it is absolutely imperative that realistic adjustments of production costs be made to meet the altered situation in foreign markets. We hope this can be accomplished sanely and calmly, as well as promptly. Every move is being given the most careful consideration. A crisis has arisen, the seriousness of which may not yet be fully realized by some of us."

Pioneers Invited to "Cavalcade" Showing

Members of Motion Picture Pioneers, Inc., an organization of men who have served 25 years or more in the film industry, have been invited to attend the trade showing of "Hollywood Cavalcade," Twentieth Century-Fox color production at the Ziegfeld theatre, New York, next Tuesday morning.

The trade screening at the Ziegfeld is one of 37 that are being held simultaneously in Twentieth Century-Fox exchange cities throughout the country. Others who have been invited to the New York showing of the picture include prominent exhibitors in that territory, newspaper and magazine writers and radio commentators.

Television's Role in Detecting Planes, U-Boats, Mines, and Guns Is Envisaged

Devices based on television principles, to detect enemy planes, dirigibles, and submarines, which would permit airplane pilots to pick up images of the terrain while lurking behind clouds, and which would even detect mines, have been patented, the New York Times declared on Sunday.

Enemy guns hidden behind masonry and embankments would become visible on television receiving cameras, according to the patents. Television would pierce darkness, smoke screens, and fog, to reveal the lurking enemy.

John Hays Hammond, noted inventor, is reported to have patented a device to "scramble" television images. Maps, photographs, and other graphic intelligence can be thus telecast; but, to the enemy, the images would be blurred.

Mr. Hammond also has a television navigation system for landing a plane, guiding a submarine, or piloting a ship, in a fog.

One Hans Hartman has a patent for "submarine television"—that is, for being able to sight objects, by television, beneath the water.

R. A. Fliess of New York City has a device which is called the "tele-detector"; this will spot enemy dirigibles and planes hidden behind clouds.

Albert A. Arnhym of Chicago has patented "television spectacles" sensitive to infra-red rays. People wearing these, on the ground, will be able to know the approach of an enemy plane by the infra-red radiations from its engine.

Air and artillery forces of the European belligerents have been reported, from time to time, experimenting with television in observation planes. Thus, artillery would be able to observe, at the moments of fire and impact, the course and accuracy of its shell-fire.

Greece, for MGM in Rumania, and for United Artists in Bulgaria. Mr. Soukias arrived in New York last week on the Washington, having obtained the last boat train from London to Le Havre. (Picture on page 10).

He is in this country to "wait," to see what can be done to ship films directly from the United States to the Balkan territory—perhaps through Italy—and to hear from his brother, V. Soukias, who operates the Bucharest office. Mr. Soukias' companies, the Meva-Film and Astoria-Film, have offices in Bucharest, Paris, Sofia, and Athens.

Mr. Soukias had been in Paris since April; and shortly before the war's outbreak, had gone to London to negotiate a new United Artists contract for 1939-40 product, for Bulgaria. The war interrupted these talks. He had, however, concluded agreements with MGM for 1939-40 product, and with Columbia, for 1938-39.

His offices in the Balkans have a supply of films ample "for some time," Mr. Soukias seemed assured. However, he noted that future supplies must come directly from the United States.

"Up to the war, American films had the preference in the Balkan market," Mr. Soukias said. "Now they will completely control it.

"It might have been said that the one exception was Greece, where the people like the French language very much. However, we got around that by importing the American films from France, where they had been dubbed in the French language."

Bulgarians and Rumanians, he said, like their American pictures with the English language, but fitted with Rumanian titles.

Whatever competition existed in the Balkans, to American product, was from the French, Mr. Soukias stated. German pictures had, before Hitler, some audience; and, also, German newsreels. But, since the advent of Hitler, German films were virtually boycotted, especially in Rumania he said.

Before Mr. Soukias left France, he noted that some French theatres were being allowed to remain open till 8:30 in the evening, and he predicted that the British and French governments would find it imperative to use the motion picture theatre as a morale factor. More than anything else, people need entertainment in war time, he said; and the most popular entertainment was the "movies," he said.

Mr. Soukias was born in Istanbul, Turkey, of Armenian parents. He was educated in the American college there. In 1911, he came to New York, and spent 17 years there.

In 1923, he formed Astoria Films, in New York, exporters of independent American product, to the Balkans. In 1927, he went to Bucharest, as a franchise holder for American companies, and then expanded to Sofia, Athens, and Paris. He is co-owner of the Cinema Capitol and Roxy theatres, Bucharest.

He is an American citizen.

Paramount's "Disputed Passage" had its first public screening last Saturday in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, at the annual convention of the National Wholesale Druggists Association.

Lloyd Douglas, author, was the guest of honor. A special drawing was held after the screening, the winner receiving from Mr. Douglas the original manuscript.

The film stars Lorothy Lamour, Akim Tamaroff, and John Howard.

LAEMMLE'S DEATH TAKES PIONEER 'INDEPENDENT' OF IMP FILM DAYS

Started Out to Buy Clothing Store, Wound Up with Theatre, Exchange System, Producing Company, Universal

Carl Laemmle, Sr., pioneer "independent" of the motion picture's early years, and one of the founders of Universal Pictures Corporation, died Sunday at his home in Hollywood. He was seventy-two years old.

All Hollywood's studios, and the offices of Universal around the world, stood silent for five minutes at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, when funeral services, attended by 2,000, began at the Wilshire Temple, B'nai B'rith, Rabbi Edgar Magnin officiating. Private services were held later at Temple of Peace Cemetery for members of the family, where temporary entombment was made in the House of Peace Mausoleum.

Active pallbearers were David Tannenbaum, Ben Straus, Herman Einstein, Jack Ross, Sam Van Ronkle, Dr. Leland Hawkins, Sam Behrendt and Fred S. Meyer. Honorary pallbearers included a score of Hollywood producers and production executives.

Station KFWB (Warner Brothers) broadcast a memorial program from Los Angeles Tuesday evening.

Surviving are Mr. Laemmle's two children, Carl, Jr., and Mrs. Stanley Bergerman, and two brothers, Louis and Siegfried.

The Laemmle estate was estimated at more than $4,000,000, from a will read immediately after the services Tuesday. Annuities amounting to $500,000 revert to his two children.

In Nickelodeon Days

Mr. Laemmle came into the motion picture industry in its second wave of development as the films broke the thralldom of service to vaudeville and began with the nickelodeon to win a place of their own. He had been manager of the Stern haberdashery in Oshkosh, Wis., when, out of differences with the owner, he cast loose with $3,000 in pocket to look for something to do on his own.

He went to Chicago and there made his first call on the Cochrane advertising agency, from which he had been getting a syndicated advertising cut service for clothing stores. He wanted to buy into a small clothing store and the agency set out to find an opportunity for him.

Meanwhile Mr. Laemmle did some looking about for himself and discovered an amazing flow of dimes into a Hale's Tours & Scenes of the World picture show in the Chicago Loop. He decided that would be a business to get into. In sequel came the White Front theatre in Milwaukee Avenue on Chicago's West Side, and in time a film exchange, more exchanges, production, by his Independent Motion Picture Company, the once famous "Imp," and in turn Universal Film Manufacturing Company, engaged in world wide distribution, ancestor of today's Universal Pictures Corporation, from which Mr. Laemmle withdrew in 1936, with some three and a half millions of dollars for his controlling interest.

The early operations centering on him, and centering for reasons of aggressive personality, brought in many names of importance in the early chapter of the rise of the motion picture, among them as associates in varying degrees of association the late Mark Dintenfas, the late William Swanson, the late Lewis J. Selznick, and Patrick Powers, and such directors as Edwin S. Porter and the late Thomas Ince.

In the development of his career Mr. Laemmle was most intimately and closely associated with Robert Cochrane, variously his vice president and advertising manager in general. How much was Laemmle and how much was Cochrane will never be sorted out. It was Mr. Cochrane who wrote the "straight-from-the-shoulder" talks by Carl Laemmle, but it was probably Mr. Laemmle who felt that way.

Selznick's Diamonds

The contact between Mr. Laemmle and Mr. Selznick was one of the classic chapters of early picture history. Mr. Selznick had come to failure in the jewelry business in Sixth avenue and had saved out of it only a few papers of unset diamonds. A dozen years before he had met Mark Dintenfas when Mark was selling herring for his father and he and Lewis, then a jeweler's clerk in Diamond Alley, off Smithfield street in Pittsburgh, had met at a delicatessen in that blithe town. Mark introduced Lewis to Pat and, after a sale of diamonds, Pat introduced Lewis to Carl, who also bought some diamonds. Lewis sold not only the diamonds, but also the idea that it would be good for Carl if he had desk room at the Universal offices. Then Lewis sent out a letter saying he was Universal's general manager—and made it stick for a while. Eventually Mr. Laemmle wrote a letter severing the connection and took the Century to Chicago while it was being delivered. That put Mr. Selznick on his own, which he attended to as all know.

The Patents Company Tilts

Mr. Laemmle's Universal, being out in front among the independents, enjoyed—along with William Fox—much of the brunt of issue in the courts with the Motion Picture Patents Company, and the court controversies were extensive, expensive and considerable. When finally a decision in "the Latham loop case" came along, the issue between the "trust" and the independents had actually been decided commercially in terms of product, and the market.

Notable among the early Universal prod-

CARL LAEMMLE—as the boy from Laupheim, as he was in his middle years when Universal was a-building, and in one of his most recent appearances.

EXPRESSIONS on the death of Mr. Laemmle came from an array of leading personages and contemporaries both across America and overseas. Typical, and representative, was the statement from Will H. Hays:

In almost three-quarters of a century, Carl Laemmle traveled far. He crossed the Atlantic to the United States to become a fine American citizen. He crossed the United States to the Pacific to become a great distributor and a producer who helped set the motion picture stars in their courses.

The services of Carl Laemmle to the motion picture industry were distinguished. He had courage and vision and he kept his honor bright. He fought for what he believed to be right and kept his plighted word. He gave more than he asked. His friendship braved the storm.

Carl Laemmle had and deserved the deep personal affection of all who knew him.

ucts was the feature length picture, one of the first "independent" features, entitled "Traffic in Souls," which Jack Cohn, now of Columbia, and George Loane Tucker made after hours as a surprise to the company. It was. Also it made money.

It was Universal, too, which broke the Patents Company dam of anonymity by taking Florence Lawrence, the dominant feminine star of the day, from Biograph with much ballyhoo. The subsequent acquisition of Mary Pickford has had more publicity.

Through its silent picture era probably the most notable picture of the Laemmle regime in Universal was "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" with Lon Chaney. In the sound era the high mark was "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Mr. Laemmle was notable for his eleventh hour decisions and the frequent swift rallies of his company from Despond to Prosperity.

The Howey Incident

Influences and excitements growing out of his activities were many and sometimes remote. One among them was the career of Walter Howey, that famed and fabulous city editor of the Chicago Tribune, about whom "Front Page" was written. Mr. Howey, through sources best known to the present writer, got wind of a deal by which John M. Burnham & Company of Chicago was to buy, for three millions, and re-sell for what, Mr. Laemmle's interest in Universal in 1916. Joseph Medill Patterson, then with the Tribune, said the story was not so good and Mr. Howey went to the Hearst papers. All that Mr. Laemmle said was that three million was not enough. A lot of newspaper history happened after that. It is to be recorded that Mr. Laemmle bought Mr. Howey several robust dinners—two steaks was a dinner for Mr. Laemmle unless he was hungry.

It was notable of Mr. Laemmle that he was generous with those with whom he was generous. He rebuilt a cathedral in his ancestral Germany, he took care of his friends and his relatives, abundantly. It is reported that he left an estate of four millions. He gave away more than that before.—TR.

Warners Set Release Date on Nine Films

Warner Brothers-First National has set nine releases through November 25th. The films and the release dates are: "Espionage Agent," September 30th; "Pride of the Blue Grass," October 7th; "On Your Toes," October 14th; "Smashing the Money Ring," October 21st; "The Roaring Twenties," October 28th; "Kid Nightingale," November 4th; "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," November 11th; "Lady Dick," November 18th, and "We Are Not Alone," November 25th.

SMPE To Attend Fair for Session

One of the evening meetings of the fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers is to be held at the New York World's Fair so that members may witness special photographic and sound recording demonstrations at two of the largest exhibit buildings.

W. C. Kunzmann is convention vice-president, and D. E. Hyndman, chairman of the Atlantic Coast section, is in charge of local arrangements.

On Monday evening, October 16, the opening day, the delegates will convene at the Chrysler exhibit for a demonstration of stereoscopic pictures by Jack Norling, of Laucks and Norling. This will be followed at 10 P. M. by a demonstration of "Two channel recording and reproduction with steel tape" in the American Telephone and Telegraph exhibit. Efforts are being made to arrange a special television showing for the delegates between the two demonstration periods.

The afternoon and evening of the convention's second day have been left open to permit delegates to visit the Fair again.

The program of papers promises a wide assortment of subjects, including sound recording and reproduction, scientifically produced studio reverberation, television projection problems, and others. The four-day convention will be held at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, October 16th to 19th, inclusive.

Another feature will be the election of four officers for 1940. The terms of engineering vice-president L. A. Jones; financial vice-president A. S. Dickinson; secretary J. Frank, Jr., and treasurer L. W. Davee, expire at the end of the year. Nominees for the positions include Mr. Dickinson and Mr. Frank, to continue the same duties, and D. E. Hyndman, of Eastman Kodak, for engineering vice-president, and R. O. Strock, of Eastern Service Studios, for treasurer.

The semi-annual banquet and dance will be held in the grand ballroom of the Pennsylvania Hotel, October 18. At that time the Society's Progress Medal and Journal Awards will be presented, and the officers-elect will be introduced.

LeBaron in New York

William LeBaron, Paramount production head, arrived in New York this week from the coast for home office conferences and a brief vacation in the east. He will return to Hollywood in about two weeks.

'All Quiet' Joins War Reissues

The European conflict has promtped Universal to reissue "All Quiet on the Western front." Adapted from the Erich Maria Remarque novel by Maxwell Anderson and George Abbott, directed by Lewis Milestone and produced by Carl Laemmle, Jr., the film when originally released in 1930 was a preachment of the futility of war in its description of the horrors of war. To the original version have been added a prologue and an epilogue, scenes culled from old newsreel issues, edited to show the events that led up to the 1914-18 period and the postwar period up to the time the German Fuehrer ordered that all books not conforming to the Nazi philosophy be burned.

John Deering's narrative accompanies the prologue and epilogue and occasionally the narrator breaks into the picture itself to comment on the tragedy of conflict. As propaganda against war the film makes a strong case.

In a review of the production in its original form, following are excerpts from the review of Douglas Fox, which appeared in Exhibitors Herald-World (predecessor of Motion Picture Herald), issue of May 10, 1930, page 31:

"'All Quiet on the Western Front' is a great picture because it is the human document, magnificently done, of the inhumanity of war.

"The photography, the hand to hand fighting, the bigger battle scenes, the little flashes here and there are simply magnificent....

"Which is all by the way of saying that I consider 'All Quiet on the Western Front' the greatest war picture ever filmed."

In its first two showings since being reissued, at the Rivoli, Toledo, and the Adams, Detroit, Universal reports new records. The company prepared a 16 page press book with special ads and featuring a war map.

"All Quiet," which has a cast headed by Lew Ayres, Louis Wolheim, John Wray, Raymond Griffith, Slim Summerville, Russell Gleason, William Bakewell, Ben Alexander and Beryl Mercer, grossed $1,500,000 (exclusive of intermittent playdates since its first release period), according to the "All-Time Best Sellers" in the Motion Picture Almanac, being bracketed at that figure with such pictures as "Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The Champ," "Daddy Long Legs," "City Lights" and "The Sheik."

20th-Fox Plans 17 for Quarter

With three color pictures, "Hollywood Cavalcade," "Drums Along the Mohawk" and "The Bluebird" heading the list, Twentieth Century-Fox on Tuesday announced 17 pictures for release in the next three months.

The October releases were: "The Escape," "Hollywood Cavalcade," "The Road to Glory," "Pack Up Your Troubles," "Shipyard Sally," "20,000 Men a Year" and "The First World War."

November releases are planned as: "Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence," "Drums Along the Mohawk," "Too Busy to Work" and "Daytime Wife." Scheduled for December are "Charlie Chan in the City of Darkness," "Inspector Hornleigh on Holiday," "He Married His Wife," "The Honeymoon's Over," "The Blue Bird" and "The Adventurer."

IATSE DEFEATS CIO, GETS INCREASE; TELEVISION DELAYS "ONE BIG UNION"

Ten Per Cent Pay Increase to Eleven Studio Locals Will Cost Up to About $5,000,000 a Year, Say Producers

Nine hours before the IATSE would have called its projectionists from every affiliated theatre in the United States, Hollywood producers at 3 A.M. Tuesday announced they were granting "with reluctance" a 10 per cent wage increase to the 11 Alliance studio locals, composed of 12,000 members.

Total annual cost to Hollywood studios of the pay increase which was made retroactive to August 12, when Alliance obtained a new closed shop agreement, will be $5,000,000, producers declared at the conferences, and they presented charts and figures to support the contention. The current increase makes the third raise of 10 per cent since Jan. 2, 1936. The next date for negotiations is March 15th.

The producers agreed to negotiate on working conditions for workers in several weeks. Each Alliance unit has drawn up various demands concerning such subjects as overtime conditions and when salaries should be paid for occasional workers.

It was no pleasant meeting at which the agreement was made, it was indicated by the producers' statement released to a score of waiting newspapermen at 3 in the morning, reporting that the producers had agreed "reluctantly" to the increase, that this figure was a compromise from the original 20 per cent demand, and that the producers had agreed only because they felt a strike would be catastrophic.

Mannix Scores Use of Force

In a much more strongly worded public statement issued later Tuesday, E. J. Mannix, leader of the producers' negotiating committee, excoriated the methods of the IATSE in forcing the 10 per cent increase at this time.

"It would be unfair to motion picture producers, to our employees and to the industry as a whole," he said, "if the feeling is allowed to prevail that the producers are proud of or satisfied with their action early this morning in agreeing to an increase of 10 per cent in wages to members of the IATSE. The action taken was not voluntary; it was forced. Not only was it enforced with a reckless disregard of possible consequences; it was exacted arbitrarily by those who used the threat of an immediate strike to accomplish their demands.

"Knowing that a strike in the motion picture industry at this critical time would bring economic disaster to upwards of 200,000 workers and might spell ruin to the industry itself, the producers felt they had no choice but to yield. . . . It cannot be said the producers granted the increase or that they were persuaded that one was fair or economically possible; they merely surrendered. What the consequences will be we are not now in a position to know. . . .

"It should be known by all that reduction, not expansion in industry costs is the only possible road by which the industry can be saved. . . .

"Despite knowledge of such (war) conditions, despite an earnest plea by the producers for at least four or five weeks of delay in which to survey the situation . . . the studio heads were forced to concede to demands which in the long run will prove injurious to those who made them as well as the rest of the motion picture organization.

"This statement is not made in the spirit of resentment, but is presented solely for the purpose of making clear to all concerned that hard decisions and conditions are sometimes accepted by those who must submit to force rather than to fairness and logic".

William Bioff, who earlier had announced an advance of the strike deadline from midnight Tuesday to noon Tuesday, appeared at the producers association office at 11 P. M. Monday accompanied by a delegation of representatives of the 11 locals, determined to push through his increase demands. Last Friday he delivered an ultimatum to producers that an agreement must be reached by Tuesday "to avert any possibility of long drawn out temporizing over the just and long due demands of our studio local unions."

Informal conferences were held Sunday night and virtually all afternoon Monday as producers sought to work out the problem. A formal meeting of the association started at 8 p.m. with the entire membership present. The negotiating committee, consisting of E. J. Mannix, Y. Frank Freeman and Mendel Silberberg, who were appointed by Joseph M. Schenck prior to his departure for Mexico City last week, explained the situation to the members. Then Ralph Morgan, president of the Screen Actors Guild, and William Wyler, W. S. Van Dyke, J. P. McGowan and John Cromwell of the Screen Directors Guild conferred with the producers, who presumably wished to sound them out concerning eventualities. The directors later conferred with Mr. Bioff, seeking to extend the strike deadline but the IATSE representative refused.

"Purging" Locals

Mr. Gatelee meanwhile resumed the task of "purging" the membership rosters of the suspended Studio Technicians Local 37 and the five new locals created to take its place of "radicals and subversive elements" who had taken part in the revolt against the Alliance and formed the United Studio Technicians Guild, CIO-financed organization which last week overwhelmingly lost the NLRB consent election to determine the collective bargaining agency. Of 7,790 voters eligible, 6,904 voted. The IATSE received 4,460 and the USTG 1,967.

Locals affected by wage increases are Photographers Local No. 659, Sound Men No. 695, Laboratory Workers No. 683, Makeup Men No. 706, Costumers No. 705, Studio Projectionists No. 165, Prop Men No. 44, Set Electricians No. 728, Grips No. 80, Laborers No. 727 and the remnant of Studio Technicians No. 37 in which are 300 members who have not transferred to recently created units.

HEED NEW YORK UNIONS' "BOYCOTT" WARNING

The seven-day music festival to mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, to start on October 1st, in New York City, nearly was boycotted by music unions last week, when they learned the Society planned to have the Boston Symphony play. The Boston orchestra is non-union.

The controversy was settled by the promise to use the New York Philharmonic instead of the Boston organization.

Jurisdictional Tilt Over Performers in New Entertainment Field Delays Equity Move to Organize Field

The "one big union" idea of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, which last week appeared to be taking specific form at inaugural meetings among the executive secretaries of the Four A's component unions, seems delayed by a jurisdictional squabble over television performers among three Four A unions, the American Federation of Radio Artists, the Screen Actors Guild and Actors' Equity.

What They Claim and Propose

Equity claims jurisdiction by a 1931 charter clause. The Actors Guild and the Radio Artists Federation have proposed a tri-union committee. The Equity is reported agreeable to a compromise, but not to one in which it would surrender its authority to a committee.

The Equity was reported this week ready to organize the television field, and awaiting only the clarification of jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, one union fight was ended when Sophie Tucker, former president of the American Federation of Actors, which was supplanted by the Four A's with the new American Guild of Variety Artists, joined the new organization last week, after threats of penalization by the Equity, the Actors Guild and the Radio Federation.

Maida Reade, AGVA executive secretary, resigned over the weekend. She was succeeded by a temporary committee, comprising Paul Dullzell, Equity executive secretary; Florence Marston, eastern representative of the SAG; and Emily Holt, executive secretary of the radio actors.

Departure of Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, from New York for the coast on this Monday, postponed the negotiations between newsreel cameramen and the five Eastern newsreel companies for one month.

The Hamrick-Evergreen theatres in Portland, Oregon, will now operate under union terms, with pay increases for all employees and a 40 hour week. About 100 doormen, cashiers, and usherettes are affected.

Representatives of New York projectionists' local 306 and those of the city's major circuits were attempting this week to choose a neutral arbitrator for their negotiations on the union demand for a 25 per cent wage increase, and a two weeks' vacation.

The Illinois State Federation of Labor, last week, at its annual convention in Springfield, voted an investigation into the use of janitors and high school students as stagehands and projectionists in high school auditorium screenings

The Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers' Union struck briefly—two hours last Friday afternoon—at the League of New York Theatres, to secure signature of a contract for company managers and press agents. The strike succeeded; the pact was signed, continuing, with a few minor changes, a contract in force last year.

NO NEELY BILL ACTION IN CONGRESS; UA ATTACKS FEDERAL COMPLAINT

No New Drive in Prosecution of Film Industry Is Intimated but Justice Department Pushes New York Case

War talk and anti-war action in Washington, official and otherwise, may even touch the motion picture industry, and beneficially, for intimations are coming from the Department of Justice that because of the times no new drive in prosecution of the film industry is contemplated at this time.

Having virtually promised a dozen anti-trust suits against the majors and circuits, and having filed but six to date—in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Gloversville, N. Y., Tennessee and Oklahoma—the indications pointed to a cause for a bit of relaxation by the industry.

No Letdown in New York Case

There is, however, no signs of a letdown in the Department's prosecution of its "key" case, in New York, against the majors, with both sides continuing maneuvering for strategic position. This week, it became known that the majors will answer the Government's demand for answers to 66 questions, with a fight in the courts against any such interrogation. And United Artists, acting individually, drafted its own questions to ask the Government in connection with the action.

Regardless of any letdown by the Government in its pressure on films in suits in the field, independents continue their attacks charging anti-trust violations by the "Big Eight." This week the independent State Theatre Corporation, of Erie Pa., added an action to the long list of trust suits naming all of the majors defendants.

Majors Confer

Counsel for defendants in the Government's New York anti-trust suit, conferred in New York late last week on procedure in connection with answering the 68 detailed interrogatories recently served upon them by the Department of Justice.

Indications following the meeting were that most defendants will oppose answering the interrogatories on the grounds that they are too broad, or that the Government already has the information or that defendants are not in possession of some of the information sought.

The last-named procedure was resorted to frequently by the Department of Justice when it was required by the Federal Court in New York to answer bills of particulars served upon it by the defendants.

Attorneys assert that to answer the interrogatories in any comprehensive fashion would require many months and would entail a cost of about $50,000 to $100,000 per company.

Defendants are scheduled to appear in Federal court, New York, on October 7 in the proceedings on the interrogatories.

U.A. Asks Own Questions

United Artists filed a list of 38 interrogatories in United States District court, New York, last Friday which confronts the Government with almost as detailed a quiz of its information relating to the pending New York anti-trust suit as the Government imposed upon all of the major defendants two weeks ago in serving them with its 68 interrogatories.

The Government will be required to answer the interrogatories served by United Artists within 20 days or obtain a modification of them from the court.

The United Artists' interrogatories, filed by O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery, counsel for the company, for the most part seek the identity of all Government witnesses having knowledge of the acts charged against defendants in the Government's anti-trust suit complaint.

The company asks the Department of Justice for the names of those having knowledge of the victims of compulsory block booking imposed by United Artists, of instances of its having forced short subjects and newsreels on independent exhibitors; of its having arbitrarily designated play dates; or having imposed unreasonable clearance and zoning schedules; of having permitted overbuying by affiliated theatres or of its having discriminated in the matter of rentals between independent and affiliated theatres.

The interrogatories also ask the Government for the identity of those who have knowledge of United Artists having prohibited an independent from double featuring while permitting an affiliated theatre to do so; of its having collected score charges; of its having imposed minimum admissions on exhibitors; of its having allowed material alterations of contracts by affiliated theatres or authorized them to adopt "move-overs."

The interrogatories ask also for the identity of persons having knowledge of the commission of acts of conspiracy alleged by the Government, and those having knowledge of exclusion by United Artists of product from first run houses; of the company's having contributed to a monopoly of exhibition in first run metropolitan houses; of its having participated in any acquisition of theatres with other defendants to effect a division of an exhibition territory and its having had a part in other acts of conspiracy or restraint of trade alleged by the Government.

Independent Suit in Erie

The major distributors and a number of Erie, Pa., theatres were named defendants in a suit filed in Federal Court by the State Theatre Corporation of Erie, charging illegal agreements prevented the concern from buying first-run films.

Named defendants in the suit, which asked $450,000 damages, were Paramount, Inc.; Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Columbia Pictures, Universal Film Exchange, Monogram Pictures, Republic Pictures, The RKO Distributing Company and RKO Pictures, besides the Erie theatres.

The plaintiff accused the distributors and theatres of preventing the State theatre from getting the best pictures by assigning them to local theatres which do not show them. The suit also asserted admission prices there are unreasonable and that one theatre is operated at a loss to keep the State from getting films.

Oklahoma Action October 2nd

On October 2nd, in Oklahoma City, Federal Judge A. P. Murrah will hear the application by Oklahoma Theatres, Inc., for a temporary injunction against the major distributors. The injunction suit is by A. B. Momand, operator of the Oklahoma Theatres, Inc., which runs the Odeon Theatre, in Shawnee, same state. The theatre, Mr. Momand says, is unable to obtain second run product.

20 Days to Answer

The Griffith Amusement Company, its subsidiary circuits, United Artists Corporation, Universal Film Exchange, Inc., and Columbia Pictures were given 20 days to file an answer to the Government brief, in the latter's suit against them for violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws, by district judge Edgar S. Vaught, in Oklahoma City, early this week.

Sponsors of Measure to Abolish Compulsory Block Booking Not Expected To Act Unless Session Is Lengthy

The special session of Congress, now on in Washington at the call of the President to act on neutrality and other emergency legislation, will not take action on the Neely anti-blocking selling and blind buying bill—unless and until the debate over the necessary legislation is prolonged to great length.

No Likelihood of Consideration

Failing undue prolongation of the special sitting, legislation left over from the last regular session, including the Neely proposal, will have no chance of consideration during this special session, it was held by observers in Washington this week, in dismissing a report, described as "a wish giving father to the thought," that Neely bill proponents might attempt to inject consideration of the block selling measure into the special session.

At the last regular session, the Senate passed the bill, but the House did not act. The bill did not die as the special session and the regular midwinter session are continuations of the 76th Congress.

The Washington view was based on an agreement of House leaders not to permit any legislation other than that dealing with neutrality to come up during the session, made in response to a request by President Roosevelt that the activities of the session be as circumscribed as possible, with adjournment at an early date.

Says No Meeting Will Be Called

Further, Representative Clarence F. Lea (Dem., Cal.), chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, where the Neely bill is pending, said this week that no meeting of his committee had been called and none would be called during the special session.

It was admitted that these agreements will be enforceable only if the length of the session is strictly curtailed. If debate over neutrality and other necessary legislation extends over any great length of time, it is probable that the question will be re-examined and some of the legislation left over from the regular session may be brought up.

So far as the Neely bill is concerned, however, it is not believed that it would benefit from any such decision, since Chairman Lea has said that he will not ask his committee to report on the measure until it has held hearings and been given an opportunity to investigate the industry.

Home Press Says Neely "Laid an Egg"

The Wheeling Intelligencer, of the native West Virginia of Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely, the proponent of anti-block selling legislation in Congress, comments editorially that passage of the bill by the Senate last summer did more harm than good to the sponsor "and left him with an egg that has already spoiled," basing its conclusion on the fact that the bill has been "kicking around" Congress for 12 years.

The newspaper, in an article written by Bill Blake, questions "just whom the Neely bill is supposed to benefit, or rather, just whom the bill is supposed to hit," observing that while the basic idea of the bill may sound good, "from the practical standpoint of the producing and exhibiting ends of the industry it is a bad deal and for the public as well."

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production as Usual

In a week that saw Hollywood realize the full impact of the European war upon it, and take the first concrete steps to realign its affairs in accordance with the changed world and domestic conditions, picture production continued at a pace about normal for this season of any year. Ten films were started; six were finished. It will be noted in the following breakdown that none of the newly started efforts involves an extravagant budget. It will be further noted that the new pictures, so far as story content and entertainment appeal are concerned, are based on light thematic ideas or are action adventure films. Similarly the completed films are entertainment of popular character. There does not seem to be any intention in Hollywood to load programs with war inspired films, things that might be topical of war or even be considered propaganda.

Three at Republic

Three pictures were started at Republic. Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle and Douglass Dumbrille are the principals in "Rovin' Tumbleweeds." The cast for "Zorro's Fighting Legion" is headed by Reed Hadley, William Corson, Jim Pierce and Charles King. James, Russell and Lucille Gleason, with Harry Davenport, Tommy Ryan, Mary Beth Hughes and Maude Eburne, will be seen in "Covered Trailer," a Higgins Family episode.

MGM started two productions. "The Secret of Dr. Kildare" will feature Lionel Barrymore and Lew Ayres with Laraine Day, Nat Pendleton, Lionel Atwill and Helen Gilbert. "A Call on the President," based on a Collier's Magazine story, will present Ann Sothern and William Gargan with Marsha Hunt and Walter Brennan.

Other Product

Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy, Helen Mack and Ernest Truex are the lead names in Columbia's "His Girl Friday." Dick Purcell, Bernardene Hayes and Charles Quigley head the cast of "Heroes in Blue," Monogram.

For RKO-Radio distribution, Sol Lesser started "Escape to Paradise." Bob Breen is the star. Kent Taylor, Marla Shelton and Joyce Compton head the support.

Universal's starter, "Test-Driver," is a series picture for Richard Arlen and Andy Devine. "The Enemy Within," Warner, will feature Ronald Reagan and Lya Lys.

Columbia is credited with two of the six finished pictures, "Renegade Law" and the Larry Darmour production, "Illicit Cargo."

The most important picture of the week is MGM's "Remember?" in which Grear Garson, Robert Taylor and Lew Ayres are the stars. Monogram completed "Scouts of the Air" while Paramount finished "Campus Wives" and Universal checked "Vigilante War" off the active shooting list.

Yates of Republic

"It is difficult to look further than January 1st. What will happen after that is anyone's guess." The speaker was Herbert J. Yates, whom Republic studios calls its "guiding hand."

"What has happened in Europe to date has already disrupted the moving picture industry. The repercussions are only beginning to be felt in Hollywood. But we at Republic are going to meet the situation as best we can. We're not going to eliminate personnel. We hope that it will not be necessary to cut anyone's wages. Republic has always operated on an economical scale. We don't have very many fancy folderols with which to dispense. Nevertheless we are preparing ourselves to meet any eventuality.

"We've already completed 11 of our 1939-1940 pictures. We have five in work right now. That's a greater number than at any other time in our history. We will complete 10 more pictures and two serials before January 1. That leaves us a balance of 24 pictures and two serials to make during early 1940 to complete the program announced at our convention.

"We have decided to postpone production of the musical, 'The Hit Parade.' The element of costs involved and the uncertainty of the market were influences leading to this decision. But we will start production of 'Wagons Westward,' a picture comparable in size and scope to our last season's 'Man of Conquest,' about October 25. John Wayne will be the star. We will go outside our own studio for 'name' players to appear in support."

Mr. Yates is only recently returned from Europe. With Gene Autry, he travelled extensively in England, Ireland and Scotland. He says that the British public is determined to prosecute the war to a finish. And it is his personal opinion that it is inevitable that every nation of any consequence will eventually be forced into war.

"There is no such thing as British production now, but this does not mean that there is a great opportunity for the exhibition of American made pictures in the British Isles. Some theatres are permitted to open, but the men who might have patronized them have been called to military service. All the children and a great many women, who are not engaged in war industry, have been transported to rural sections. The potential audience for going theatres is very small. It will grow smaller."

Cash Shipments Halted

While Great Britain was the big foreign market for Republic pictures with the Gene Autry films especially popular, Mr. Yates said that its loss was not a serious blow to the company. "Not over 16 per cent of our revenue came from England, Ireland and Scotland, and while we have not been able to get any cash money out of Great Britain for four weeks, we nevertheless have received an order from the government for eight Autry pictures to be exhibited to soldiers in camps, in rest areas behind the fighting lines and to the sailors of the fleet."

To recoup whatever foreign revenue losses that will ensue, Republic plans a greater concentration on the American market. Thus it is probable that an additional Gene Autry picture will be made either before or after the leading western star goes on his loan-out to 20th Century-Fox. Republic does not plan to make any war or propaganda pictures inasmuch as Mr. Yates believes that the authentic war pictures that shortly will be arriving in this country, either as newsreels or specials, will give the American public all that it wants of real war without anyone bothering to make up imagined, no matter how realistic, stories of it.

SHIRLEY ON AIR FOR FIRST TIME

Twentieth Century-Fox's Shirley Temple—ranking star for four consecutive years in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S exhibitor poll of "Money Making Stars"—will take to the air waves for the first time on Christmas Eve, on the Screen Guild Show, in behalf of the Motion Picture Relief Fund, Hollywood charity organization, which receives all payments to stars appearing on the Guild weekly program.

In the six years Shirley Jane Temple has been starring in Fox features, and winning box office honors, she has received numerous offers for air appearances, all of them refused by Shirley's mother, Mrs. George Temple. Twentieth Century-Fox disclosed this week that their child star only recently was offered $35,000 to appear on a national commercial broadcast Christmas Eve.

The Guild-Temple broadcast will be "piped" over Columbia Broadcasting networks from Hollywood at 4:30 on the afternoon of Sunday, December 24th.

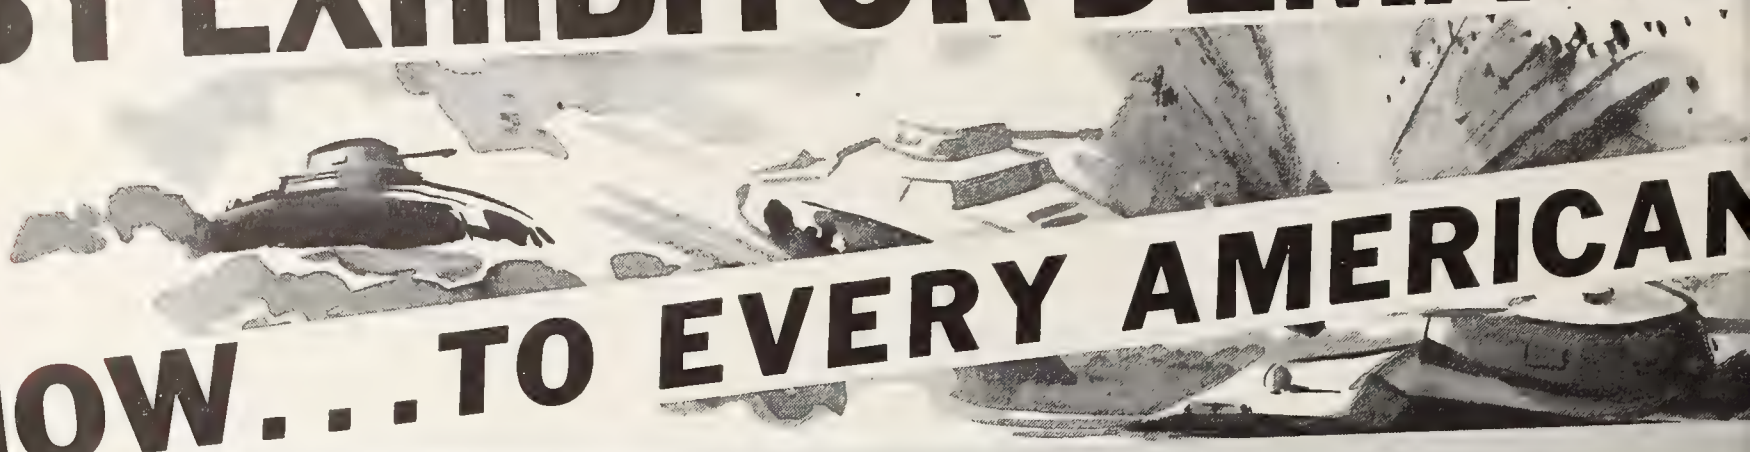
Participating in the arrangements were Jean Hersholt and James Roosevelt, for the Relief Fund; Shirley's parents, and Joseph M. Schenck, Sidney Kent and Darryl Zanuck, for Fox.

Shirley probably will sing and do a scene from the Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird."

"Discovering a Star"

Every film commentator in Hollywood last week committed an act that, to say the least, seems to border on collusion.

Each, almost without exception, placed himself on record as the discoverer of a new star to join the already imposing MGM roster of luminaries. Her name is Lana Turner and the writers saw her in an unpretentious but amusing film titled "Dancing Co-ed."



The almost unanimous mass approval contained in the reporters' written records makes it apparent that the public at large had already discovered the young woman's possibilities.

A Studio Policy

It seems that letting the press and public discover stars is in keeping with the long established policy of MGM. No tricky catch phrases such as "The It Girl," "The Oomph Girl," "The Red Flame" preceded her debut.

Handling such events sensibly is not a new idea at MGM. It may be remembered that without any advance ballyhoo a few years ago a gentleman by the name of Clark Gable slapped, pushed and otherwise manhandled Norma Shearer in "A Free Soul." He woke up the next morning after the preview to find himself one of filmdom's outstanding stars.

NEBRASKA CHARGES ASCAP CONTROLS 90% OF USABLE AMERICAN MUSIC

Judges Take Test Action Against State's Law Under Advisement After Denials of Monopoly and Price Fixing

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers is continuing its defense against attacks by public performers of music, principally broadcasters, who seek the outlawing of the society by state laws (there have been 40 different anti-ASCAP bills filed in 25 states to date). The music performers are striking at ASCAP's forced royalties for the performance of music of its song writing and publishing members. Exhibitors frequently have attacked the society, but the fight now is being conducted for the most part by radio broadcasters.

The defense this week came in Nebraska, where, after four days of debate and cross examination of nine witnesses, a three-judge Federal court in Lincoln took under advisement the constitutional test of the anti-ASCAP law. Supplemental briefs were asked for, along with findings from each of the legal battery, to be filed not later than October 6. Specifically, the court is asked to determine whether the state can outlaw ASCAP.

The state charges that ASCAP is a monopoly controlling 90 per cent of usable American music.

Seek Early Decision

The three judges, Gardner, Munger and Donohoe, indicated they wished to rush the case to an early decision, since it had been hanging fire since the injunction was granted, under which ASCAP has operated in Nebraska, in the summer of 1937. The decision might be made as early as November 1.

Appeal from that decision is likely, direct to the United States supreme court.

It was 12:30 p.m. on Thursday, when the legal tussle halted. Louis Frohlich, ASCAP's lawyer, of New York, and William Hotz, Omaha attorney for the state, had each been given an hour and a half to develop arguments.

Monopoly and Constitutionality

Mr. Frohlich said only two points had entered the case—the question of monopoly, which he did not think was proven or had place in the case, and the question of constitutionality of the law, which he said was not possible since it denied property rights guaranteed citizens under the copyright laws passed in 1909.

Mr. Frohlich asked the court in deference to the Society's having done business "in a creditable manner, protecting its members for 25 years," that it be given a certificate of character. He said the Nebraska law called for the impossible, asking a publisher today to affix prices on a piece of music for all uses, also asking him to look 56 years (life of copyrights) into the future and fix prices for all music uses which are not known today, but which might develop in the meantime.

"ASCAP, in my opinion," said Mr. Frohlich, "has done more to foster entertainment than any other single organization in the history of the United States."

Attorney Hotz brought to the floor his opinion that ASCAP controlled 90 per cent of the usable American music, was a monopoly and as such had no standing in court, and also was a price fixer and an unfair competitor.

He made the point that a composer does not need ASCAP to protect his performance rights, that three or four cents added to the price of a piece of sheet music, collected by the publisher, would bring in as much money as ASCAP now collects.

ASCAP, he said, does not only force itself into radio via the network demands for performance rights clearance by member stations, but also forces the networks to play its members' numbers which keeps their network credits up and forms a basis for classification status which keeps certain music producers in big money.

Of the nine witnesses heard, six spoke for ASCAP: Gene Buck, Society president; E. C. Mills, administrative secretary; John G. Paine, general manager; Mrs. Ethelbert Nevin, widow of the composer who died in 1901; and two Omahans, Ernest Priesman, orchestra leader, and Henry Taylor, Ritz theatre manager and operator of the dancery, the Music Box. Three were used for the state: Johnny J. Gillin, Jr., general manager of Station WOW, Omaha, and Don Searle, general manager of the Central States Broadcasting Co. (KFAB, Lincoln; KOIL, Omaha; and KFOR, Lincoln), and Joseph Malec, owner-operator of Peony Park, and organizer of the 240-member association of amusement men set up to fight for the enactment of the anti-ASCAP law.

Cites Royalties Paid

Mr. Gillin was the most fiery witness, saying his station never had been able to come to an agreement with ASCAP, always signing with no recourse. WOW paid $22,800 royalties in 1938, he said, figured on the basis of time sale (5%), exclusive of political speeches, or religious broadcasts, otherwise whether music was used or not. Mr. Searle offered that his stations had paid ASCAP $21,700 during the same time.

Mr. Malec's testimony was directed not against payment of the music fee, but against what he called an intimidating manner used in collection of the license fee.

Obvious about the trial was that other irons were in the fire than mere constitutionality of the bill. Although the state was listed as defendant, the attorney general's office, represented by Assistant Attorney General John Riddell, was almost wholly silent. William Hotz, Omaha, who kept talking up the hotel argument against ASCAP licensing (only three of the 391 contracts were hotels), and Andrew Bennett, Washington, as a friend of the court, talked about dealings with the Broadcasters Association, which introduced a great deal of matter irrelevant to proof of constitutionality or otherwise.

ASCAP counsel demanded that Mr. Bennett identify himself with the broadcasters' association before he be allowed to speak.

Points to Radio Audits

ASCAP ran through its side of the testimony in two days. The gist of its officers' testimony was that the Society was the only means and the least expensive system for protecting the rights of its members and licensing users. The Omaha witnesses for the Society testified that the Society simplified matters of music reproduction handling, Mrs. Nevin adding that it was the only way she could protect herself.

Mr. Paine, for ASCAP, rocked radio when he testified that two audits of 200 radio stations, selected at random, since 1934, had shown a deficiency of $1,138,000 in income figures from which ASCAP's royalty percentage had been estimated.

Mr. Mills declared that complaining users of music didn't need ASCAP music, and if they used the same initiative to arrange programs with non-ASCAP music as they used to beat ASCAP members of their rights, they might get non-ASCAP programs.

Broadcasters Pick Enforcers of Their Code, Which Becomes Effective Sunday

Appointment of a committee headed by Edgar Bill of radio station WMBD, Peoria, Ill., to interpret and administer the recently adopted code of standards and trade practices for radio was made Thursday in Washington by the National Association of Broadcasters, Neville Miller, president, announced. The code becomes effective at midnight Sunday. Its administering group will be known as the Committee of Audience Relations.

The code requires that radio stations shall provide free time for the discussion of controversial public issues in such a way that conflicting viewpoints in public matters have a fair and equal opportunity to be heard. In no event will time be sold for such purpose, except for political broadcasts.

"The new N. A. B. policy insures that radio will remain a free and democratic forum for the fair and many-sided discussion of all public matters," said Mr. Miller.

The code further requires that news broadcasts be factual and presented without bias or editorial opinion. It also provides that children's programs be based upon "sound social concepts" and that radio stations continue to cooperate with educators in the further development of radio as an educational adjunct. The religious plank asserts that no one shall be permitted to use radio to "convey attacks upon another's race or religion."

While the full code becomes effective on October 1st, the board ruled that existing commercial contracts shall be respected for their duration, provided they do not run for more than one year. New business, competitive with existing accounts, may be accepted with the same length of commercial copy as is permitted existing accounts.

JUBILEE OBSERVANCES UNDERWAY OVER U.S.

Hays to Pay Tribute to Thomas Edison at West Orange Ceremonies

The celebration of the motion picture industry's fiftieth anniversary, the Golden Jubilee, gets well underway next week with local observances in all parts of the country, according to reports received by the Fiftieth Anniversary Committee. Luncheons, dinners, meetings, radio, broadcasts, school, library and club activities are included on the various programs.

The newsreels will film the visit of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, to the Edison laboratories in West Orange, N. J., this weekend to pay the industry's tribute to Thomas A. Edison's memory for his invention of the Kinetoscope.

Campaign Details

Details of special campaigns prepared by the majors' committee for exhibitors were outlined in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on August 5th, page 33. Special campaigns by Schine Theatres were published on August 19th, page 59 and by RKO and Loew's on August 26th, page 40, while 213 circuits notified the MPPDA of plans for campaigns, September 9th, page 56, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer devoted much space in its institutional press sheet to the jubilee, September 23rd, page 26.

The completion of the Kinetoscope on October 6, 1889, has been used as a news peg for theatre advertising and publicity campaigns to attract attention to this season's outstanding films as the embodiment of half a century of motion picture progress.

In response to many requests, the Fiftieth Anniversary Committee prepared a radio script containing background material for local broadcasts. It brings in some of the highlights of motion picture history, which, by inserting local reminiscences, can be adapted for use by a member of the station staff and a film pioneer, exhibitor, or a leader in film activities. Or the chairman of the local motion picture council can do the interviewing with an exhibitor or some one connected with motion pictures to give the answers. Copies of the script are being sent out this week.

Another radio script has been prepared by Mrs. Malcolm Parker MacCoy, chairman, Department of Motion Pictures of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, for the use of local chairmen. These have also been shared with other state federations.

Cleveland Celebrates

The celebration in Cleveland centers on the fact that motion pictures were originated by Ohio men. As C. C. Deardourff, one of William R. Ferguson's MGM exploitation men, pointed out, "The father of motion pictures was Thomas Alva Edison, native of Milan, Ohio—just 50 miles from Cleveland. The father of the sound picture and president of Warner Brothers is Harry Warner, from Youngstown, Ohio—about 70 miles from Cleveland."

Among the political figures invited to take part are Governor John W. Bricker, Senator Robert Taft and Mayor Harold H. Burton.

The campaign made the most of Clevelanders and Ohioans who have made good in motion pictures including Bob Hope, John Howard, Eleanor Whitney, Alan Baxter, Adolphe Menjou and Clark Gable.

The large exhibit space in the Terminal Tower is devoted to an exhibit portraying the history of motion pictures through 50 years. Old theatre equipment is contrasted to new. A number of behind-the-scenes displays have been set up including costumes, props, jewelry, lights, cameras, projectors, strips of film. Considerable use is being made of trailers. Women's organizations are cooperating.

Exhibit at New York Library

Beginning next Monday the main New York public library at Fifth Avenue will have on display a large exhibit from the motion picture collection of the theatre division, assembled by George Freedley. The collection is the most complete of its kind in any public institution.

Since the entire season is Fiftieth Anniversary year, activities will continue.

A special poster has been prepared by Walt Disney for Children's Book Week, November 12-18, which shows Pinocchio turning the world. In front of the globe are two small characters from Pinocchio reading classics of literature on which photoplays have been based. A number of books to be produced as photoplays this season are illustrated, including "Pinocchio," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Swiss Family Robinson," "The Deerslayer," "Ivanhoe," "Little Orvie," "Anne of Windy Poplars," "Tom Brown's School Days," "Allegheny Frontier," based on "First Rebel." A total of 20,000 posters will be distributed to book stores, libraries and committees organizing programs for Children's Book Week.

National Decency Legion Classifies 16 Pictures

Of 16 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week nine were listed as unobjectionable for general patronage, four were classed as unobjectionable for adults and three were found objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Call a Messenger," "A Chump at Oxford," "Disputed Passage," "Everybody's Hobby," "$1,000 a Touchdown," "Riders of the Black River," "Rulers of the Seas," "Straight Shooter," "Wall Street Cowboy." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Bombs Over London," "The Escape," "Espionage Agent." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The End of a Day" (French), "Heartbeat" (French), "Song of the Street" (French).

Warner Men Told To "Buckle Down"

Managers and executives of the 26 Warner theatres in upstate New York met at the Ten Eyck hotel in Albany late last week at the call of M. A. Silver, zone manager, to discuss fall policies and operating plans. Addressing the meeting with Mr. Silver was Harry Goldberg, national director of advertising and publicity for Warner theatres of New York.

"These are trying times throughout the world," Mr. Silver said, "and unsettled conditions make it necessary for us to get right down to business and work hard at our own individual jobs instead of speculating, worrying and wondering about the fate of the world. I am calling upon every Warner manager in the circuit for concentrated selling of every picture, for a greater showmanship and for even stricter economy in operation. An impending shortage of product will make it necessary to get extended runs on all pictures that can possibly be stretched through the managers' increased efforts."

Managerial shifts announced by Mr. Silver were: Al Beckerich from the Palace, Jamestown, to Haven, Olean; F. M. Westfall from the Haven, Olean, to the Keeney, Elmira; Bill Leggiero from the Keeney, Elmira, to the Hornell; Al Newhall from the Majestic, Hornell, to the Palace, Jamestown.

Philadelphia Museum Is Presenting Film Series

The Philadelphia Museum of Art is presenting two weekly film series, one for children and one for adults. The Fall and Winter schedule as announced by the education division of the Museum will present on Saturdays and Sundays, milestones in the development of the documentary film, ranging from newsreels, March of Time subjects and short human interest subjects to travel, semi-fictional and advertising films.

To be screened in the Transient Galleries of the Museum the adult series on Sundays will include the documentary films, "The Private Life of the Gannets," "Night Mail," "Moana," "Nanook," "North Sea," "The River," "The Plough That Broke the Plain," "400 Million," "The Wave," and "The Wedding of Palo."

Warners Win Championship

The soft ball team of the New York exchange office of Warner Brothers has won the championship of the Motion Picture League by defeating Twentieth Century-Fox in the playoff game.

Cinecolor Process Ready

Cinecolor's new process for making 16 mm. reduction prints from 35 mm. color negative is now ready, A. L. McCormick, president, has announced in Hollywood.

David Bader, story editor for Lichtig and Englander in Hollywood, arrived in New York Tuesday in connection with new season's material.

Ted Gamble of the Parker Theatres, Portland, Ore., for the last three years head of the program committee of the annual Rose Festival, has been named president of the fiesta for 1940.

OWNERS IN 8 COAST STATES MERGE; SEVEN OTHER STATE UNITS MEET

Three Associations Combine under Board; Kuykendall Protests Against Outside Interference; Combine Discussed

The Independent Theatres Owners of Southern California and Arizona, the Independent Theatre Owners of Northern California, and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Pacific Northwest, covering eight Far Western states and approximately 2,000 theatres, this week combined in an as yet unnamed Pacific Coast organization, without national affiliation.

Other Associations Meet

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee opened their convention at Memphis, last Sunday; the Oklahoma Allied Theatre Owners opened its convention Tuesday, in Oklahoma City; the Independent Theatre Owners Association of West Virginia also met Tuesday, at Clarksburg, West Va.; the Independent Theatres' Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan convened in Milwaukee on Wednesday and Thursday; New York Allied set a meeting of its state units for October 17th, in New York City; Connecticut Allied scheduled an election luncheon for October 3rd in New Haven; the ITA of Ontario met Thursday in Toronto to set a date for its annual convention; and Michigan Allied's convention was set for October 3rd and 4th in Kalamazoo; Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania meet Tuesday; Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana this week set October 23-24 as its annual convention dates, and the Ohio ITO set November 13-14 for its meeting.

Board Represents Three Units

The Coast combination of the three large exhibitor organizations provides for representation by a board of trustees, consisting of two members from each of the three units. The Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners is the name of the combination.

South California-Arizona ITOA named Hugh Bruen of Whittier and Jack Berman of Los Angeles as representatives, and Mrs. Jenne Dodge of Ventura, as an alternate.

The MPTO group named L. O. Lukan and William Ripley as delegates; and the Northern California group was scheduled to name its representatives soon.

Robert Poole, of the ITO of Southern California, is temporary executive secretary of the combine.

Kuykendall Hits Outside Regulation

At the convention of the MPTO of Arkansas, Mississippi, and Tennessee in Memphis, Ed Kuykendall, president of the national MPTOA, criticized interference with the motion picture industry by reformers, taxes, and governmental regulation.

M. A. Lightman praised the Variety Clubs.

R. X. Williams, the president, who is mayor of Oxford, Miss., advised exhibitors to ascertain prices in other towns than those in which they operate; and to keep in touch with their legislators.

Mr. Williams was reelected president. Other elections were R. S. Cox, L. F. Haven, W. F. Ruffin, regional vice-presidents; W. S. Tyson, secretary-treasurer; M. A. Lightman, chairman of the board of directors; W. L. Landers, K. K. King, J. F. Norman, M. S. McCord, Cecil Cupp, Sydney Wharton, board for Arkansas; W. Earl Elkin, W. S. Taylor, Dave Flexer, board for Mississippi; Fred Ford, Joseph Wheeler, Cecil Vogel, directors for Tennessee.

Oklahoma Meeting

A limited number of Oklahoma exhibitors were at the Oklahoma Allied convention, in Oklahoma City. Among the speakers were National Allied States Association president Colonel H. A. Cole, and State Representative George Miskovsky, the latter speaking on his chain store tax bill.

Colonel Cole warned against use of buying pools, as an adoption of the same methods Allied has been criticizing.

The proposed Oklahoma buying pool was dropped.

Orville Vongulker was elected president and chairman of the board, Sam Caporal vice-president, and C. E. Norcross secretary-treasurer.

The name of the organization was changed from Allied Theatres of Oklahoma to Allied of Oklahoma. The group voted to affiliate with National Allied.

A special bulletin preceded the convention, urging legislation as the method by which industry evils can be cured.

The bulletin commended the Neely Bill and the Department of Justice anti-trust actions.

Edward Golden, vice-president of Monogram, was the guest speaker at the first annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of West Virginia, at the Waldo hotel, Clarksburg, West Va., this Tuesday.

The organization went on record for the Neely Bill, after hearing another guest speaker, Abram F. Myers, general counsel to National Allied, discuss the bill and the code.

New officers elected are: Richard D. Marks, of Clarksburg, president; George Sallows, of Morgantown, vice-president; Garland West, of Buckhannon, treasurer; and I. D. Davis, of Lumberport, executive secretary.

Mr. Golden asked for encouragement of "the little fellow" in business. He said that independent exhibitors and an independent company such as Monogram, had "much in common."

Booking Combine Discussed

Effects of the war and activities on a new booking combine were considered by the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan at the convention in Milwaukee on this Wednesday and Thursday.

The new combine is the Theatre Service Agency, recently formed by the organization's president, Edward Maertz, and by Max Weisner.

Max A. Cohen, president of the New York Allied, has called the meeting of the state units for October 17th, in New York City. Future action will be considered, this being necessary because the National Allied has expelled the New York unit, and may invade the state with a replacement.

Mr. Cohen this week declared that a fair trade practice code will not be available to the industry for several years. It will be delayed by the slowness of the Government's New York anti-trust action, which in turn will be delayed by the war, he believes. He blamed the national Allied leaders for the rejection of the code at their national convention.

Connecticut Allied Meets

The Connecticut Allied election luncheon in New Haven on October 3rd will be at the Hofbrau Haus Restaurant, with Maurice Shulman presiding.

Nominations for officers are, for president, Martin Keleher, of the Princess, Hartford; Charles Repass, of the Crown, Hartford, and A. M. Schuman, of the Black Rock, Bridgeport; for vice-president, the same persons, and Samuel Handelman, of the Capitol, Bridgeport; for treasurer, Jack Schwartz, of the West End, Bridgeport, and Leo Schapiro, of the Guilford Theatre; for executive secretary, Lawrence C. Caplan; for chairman of the board of directors, Maurice Shulman, of the Webster and Rivoli, Hartford, and Dr. J. B. Fishman, of the Fishman Theatres, New Haven.

The ITA of Ontario meeting in Toronto this Thursday was expected to result in the setting of the first week of October as the organization's annual convention week.

The Michigan Allied meets in annual convention at the Burdick Hotel, Kalamazoo, on October 2nd, 3rd and 4th. From it, may come some definite action for a new trade code, or for a renewal of efforts to have the present one accepted, even in part. A public declaration by Ray Branch, leading figure in the organization and several times its president, sheds light on the organization's probable attitude.

Mr. Branch declared that he was "keenly disappointed" that the code was lost. He added that he thought the distributors were sincere in offering their program, and that he felt they could "again sit down and bring order out of chaos."

The effort to have a program of industry self-regulation, he said, "came the nearest to anything that has ever been attempted to correct the evils of the industry; and it is a matter of public record that such an admission has been made, several times."

Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania met in Philadelphia Tuesday and discussed the possible effect of the war on product and box office.

Non-Theatricals Attacked

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania this week was reported seriously perturbed over the growth of non-theatrical showings in its territory, in industrial firms, schools, churches and clubs.

An instance of this competition is the H. J. Heinz Company shows, in its plant on the North Side section of Pittsburgh. The pictures are shown free. The showings affect the business of six motion picture theatres in the neighborhood, owners said.

Plans of Canadian independents for a national clearance board have been sent to the general managers of all the country's exchanges, to Colonel John A. Cooper, head of the Motion Picture Distributors, and to N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation. These persons are asked to join in the formation of such a board.

MPTOA BOARD WILL MEET OCTOBER 23-24

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America board of directors will meet on October 23rd and 24th in White Sulphur Springs, Va., to consider the problems of the industry, as enumerated by president Ed Kuykendall, in his bulletin. The problems, as seen by the organization, and Mr. Kuykendall, arise now out of the government's disapproval of the trade practice code.

The Private Lives of ELIZABETH and ESSEX

(Warner Brothers)

In Technicolor

Romance with Historical Background

To the great and dominant majority of the box office customers here is a plushly deluxe picture of Bette Davis and Errol Flynn, on the ornate and historically glamorous scene for 102 minutes. It is somewhat incidental that they are in the role of Elizabeth, the authentically redheaded and reputedly virgin queen of England, and the role of the Earl of Essex, authentically handsome and somewhat more than merely reputedly a man of parts and power in that England of then.

To showmen, more especially those who remember older, golden days of the motion picture, there will be warming recognition of this as a star picture, a vehicle devoted to personality exploitation in terms that have been, probably unfortunately, too much forgotten in the rush of Hollywood to the stupendous and colossal, etc.

We can all well remember when pictures began to get so big that they obscured the stars. "Grand Hotel" and "Dinner at Eight" were examples. "Elizabeth and Essex," despite the fact that it pertains to the probably fading era of the utterly stupendous, ably arranges to let the stars shine all the while. They are together or separately in almost every scene.

The story is in sum the fact that Elizabeth and Essex are in love with each other, tremendously, but even more with themselves, and that while Elizabeth has the throne and crown, Essex wants it just a hair's breadth, maybe, more than he wants Elizabeth. It is indicated that he does very well with Elizabeth-the-woman and not so well with Elizabeth-the-queen. He won the woman and crossed the queen and jolly well and handsomely lost his ambitious damned fool head. That's history, too, although the approach to the final accounting diverges, for dramatic purposes, a bit from the facts here and there. The telling of this version is, however, so plausible that one might fancy that both Elizabeth and Essex, if cognizant, would wish that they had done it by the Warner script than the way they did.

To this reviewer there was special satisfaction in certain phases of possibility that were not developed in behalf of the sadists. Dramatic intensities are abundantly realized without the bloody assault on the attentions and emotions that history could have permitted.

The august and entirely dignified production permits itself one utterly gorgeous piece of utter slapstick, when the Earl, in seeming joyous provocation, smacks Elizabeth on her royal pants. And they sit down on the stairs to talk about things. The moment is delightfully outrageous, and conceived by a dramatist.

It is entirely accidental that a story so very British in its connotations should just now in the early weeks of a world war come off the assembly line. There has been in the picture, however, not a little of political consciousness. There is under it all that which bespeaks the spirit of the Britain that was to become an empire. Also the politically and socially conscious will be after discovering a "hedge" in the grim humor of the lines given to Alan Hale in his role of the Earl of Tyrone, making the Irish both sharply humorous and no little the victor. There's a bet coppered, neatly, even if obviously.

In terms of color the over-all effect is handsome and convincing and tends toward that ultimate eventuation when color will, it seems, be so matter of fact in terms of audience acceptance that the audience will be unaware of it. Some of the exteriors, alleged, are less fortunate in their color treatment, or color consequences, partaking more of painting than picture. And that brings one also to the unimportant observation that Erich Wolfgang Korngold's able musical treatment was here and there so forceful as to suggest the picture was the accompaniment. This is not much for the showman to worry about. This paragraph is for Hollywood.

The work of director, script writer and camera have been more than usually well fused in this job. If they are looking for favorable mention they can examine the list of credits. The cast generally does so good a supporting job that it gets from the spectator just exactly the attention the role demands. Probably Michael Curtiz, the director, saw to that, because after all scene-larceny is almost automatic in movieland.

It is suggested that showmen and exploiters who have this picture to sell, take a look—the routine attention by the old formulae will not be the best that can be done.—TERRY RAMSAYE

Intermezzo, a Love Story

Romance

(UA-Selznick)

This is seriously predicated entertainment designed to engage the attention of intelligent persons. It is not meant for those who expect their screen merchandise always to be as crowded with spectacular action as a combined rodeo and multi-ringed circus. In brief, it is the story of a man who erred but did not completely disabuse his loyalty to his family.

Well acted, expertly written, staged and photographed, it does not, however, provide the values of spectacular names. Nor does the theme permit fireworks showmanship. Rather, its appeal is to the narrow segment which understands and appreciates the worth of a fine thing, finely wrought. Yet it deals in those elements common to all who know the adventure of living beyond the strictures of rule and rote.

Name value is represented by Leslie Howard, stage actress Edna Best, John Halliday, who was a principal in "Hotel for Women," Enid Bennett, onetime star of the silent screen, and newcomer Ingrid Bergman.

As is true of most Selznick pictures, "Intermezzo" is exceptionally well staged; also, like other Selznick productions, it is freshly styled.

As its secondary title denotes, it is a love story. His home, wife and children are the idols of concert violinist "Holger Brandt," to whom the world's applause is dreary. But like many another man in real life, temptation comes from another woman. A near tragedy, involving the almost fatal injury of his beloved daughter, "Ann Marie," is required to reawaken him to his domestic responsibilities.

There are no hysterics in the production, nor is there any of that vivid exhibitionism that sometimes draws the impressionable. Instead, there is an unvarnished study of a man and his experiences. The press of the day in practically every community is replete with reports of similarly premised happenings. Thus, in a way the "Intermezzo" story is close to all.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Hollywood. The power of the story caught the audience's attention early and held it. The crowd, however, was not representative of that which would be found every day in the average theatre, but rather of a limited group. In any case, "Intermezzo" is adult entertainment and by no means anything that would interest youngsters.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Produced and distributed by Selznick International Pictures. Producer, David O. Selznick. Associate producer, Leslie Howard. Director, Gregory Ratoff. Screen play, George O'Neil. From the original scenario by Gosta Stevens and Gustav Molander. Photographer, Gregg Toland. Music director, Lou Forbes. Art director, Lyle Wheeler. Special effects, Jack Cosgrove. Espionage Agent

(Warner Brothers)

Spy Melodrama

"Espionage Agent" might be called a sequel to "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." But where the last-named was all documentary the new product is so only in part and in addition has a love story. The picture begins as a preachment against alien spy activity in this country and the lack of laws to cope with it, but soon it develops into a melodrama in which the leading man and woman break up a ring operating in Geneva. The finger is not pointed against any one country in "Espionage Agent"; this spy ring sells to the highest bidder.

Warren Duff, Michael Fessler and Frank Donoghue adapted the screen play from a story by Robert Henry Buckner. It was directed by Lloyd Bacon.

Starred are Joel McCrea and a newcomer, Brenda Marshall, who appeared on the stage, in the Federal Theatre. Included in the cast are Jeffrey Lynn, George Bancroft, Stanley Ridges and James Stephenson.

"Barry Corvall," an American attache in a North African city, meets "Brenda Ballard" at the consulate. They sail for America on the same boat, fall in love and marry after their arrival. "Corvall," whose family have long been in the consular service, completes a course in a school for aspiring young diplomats and is assigned a European post, but is compelled to resign from the State Department when he discovers that his wife formerly engaged in espionage work.

"Corvall" decides to do something about the spy ring for which "Brenda" worked. They go to Geneva, where the ring's headquarters are. "Brenda" convinces them that her husband and she are willing to sell U. S. military and industrial secrets for a price. In a fast-paced climax "Corvall" gets the evidence.

Reviewed at the Strand theatre, New York. A capacity afternoon audience, with quite a few jitterbugs there to hear the music of Artie Shaw, appeared to enjoy the picture.—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Three Sons

(RKO Radio)

Family Drama

Edward Ellis is the star of this story of a successful yet frustrated career. It also has Edward Gargan, Kent Taylor and J. Edward Bromberg for principal names, and the winners of Jesse Lasky's second "Gateway to Hollywood" radio talent quest, Virginia Vale and Robert Stanton.

"Three Sons" is a new version of the Lester Cohen novel, "Sweepings." John Twist did the current screen play and Jack Hively directed.

Beginning after the Chicago fire, "Daniel Pardway" started to build a mercantile business and rear a family. Prosperity came with the passing years and "Pardway" dreamed that his three sons, "Gene," "Bert" and "Freddie," would carry the store to greater heights after his passing. But three boys turned out to be worthless spendthrifts, with only the youngest, "Freddie," showing any signs of regeneration to give the old man comfort in his dying moments.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre in Hollywood. The audience did not seem to think the picture carried a convincing ring or have sufficient dramatic punch to make it inspiring preachment.—G. M.

Here I Am a Stranger

(20th Century-Fox)

Problem Play

In character and appeal, "Here I Am a Stranger" is a variation of the father and son theme. Actually, however, it is a sometimes forceful demonstration of the theory that life without honor is empty and futile. The picture, produced by Harry Joe Brown, stars Richard Greene, who has drawn a wide following, and Richard Dix, who appears to have entered a new phase in his career. It features such capable performers as Roland Young, Gladys George, Russell Gleason, George Zucco and Henry Kolker. The picture also gives audiences their first real look at one of Darryl Zanuck's young hopefuls, the tomboyish Brenda Joyce.

The Gordon M. Hillman original and adaptation by Milton Sperling and Sam Hellman, which are the bases of the photoplay, contain much meaningful material as well as some that is hardly relevant. Yet, as directed by Roy Del Ruth, the situations that have significance are expertly arranged to erect the climax.

"David," child of divorce, learns after entering college that shabby, irresolute "Duke Allen" is his real father. After effecting the regeneration of his parent, the boy finds himself in a situation that really tests his character. A student hit-and-run driver kills a woman, and "Dave's" mother, step-father, big business man "Bennett," as well as "Duke," try to influence him to protect "Lester" and let poor student "Sortwell" take the blame. The lad, nonetheless, stands firm in his purpose to tell the truth.

Mademoiselle Ma Mere

(J. H. Hoffberg)

French Bedroom Farce

"Mademoiselle Ma Mere" is a "naughty French bedroom farce"—thus read the publicity—imported into this country for distribution by J. H. Hoffberg and starring Danielle Darrieux as the irascible society girl whose number of male admirers is not lessened by the bans of marriage. Taken from the Louis Verneuil novel, which was one of the better sellers in France, and directed by Henri Decoin, the picture gives a slightly different twist to the triangle story.

Intelligent superimposition of English titles by Charles Jahrblum helps to maintain attention upon a picture which depends so largely upon dialogue.

"Georges," the step-son, has "Jacqueline" trailed by a detective to get information on his stepmother's transgressions, if any. Fate brings "Jacqueline" and "Georges" together and they find they are in love. The two elope, leaving a note for the father-husband, who is comforted with the thought that they have found real happiness.

The supporting cast of Marcel Simon, Alerme, and Pascali, who provides comedy as the hired detective, handle their parts well, but the word "risque" fits the dialogue and some of the action, limiting the picture definitely to adults.

At the 55th Street Playhouse in New York the early afternoon audience reacted as might have been expected to such material.—GEORGE SPIRES.

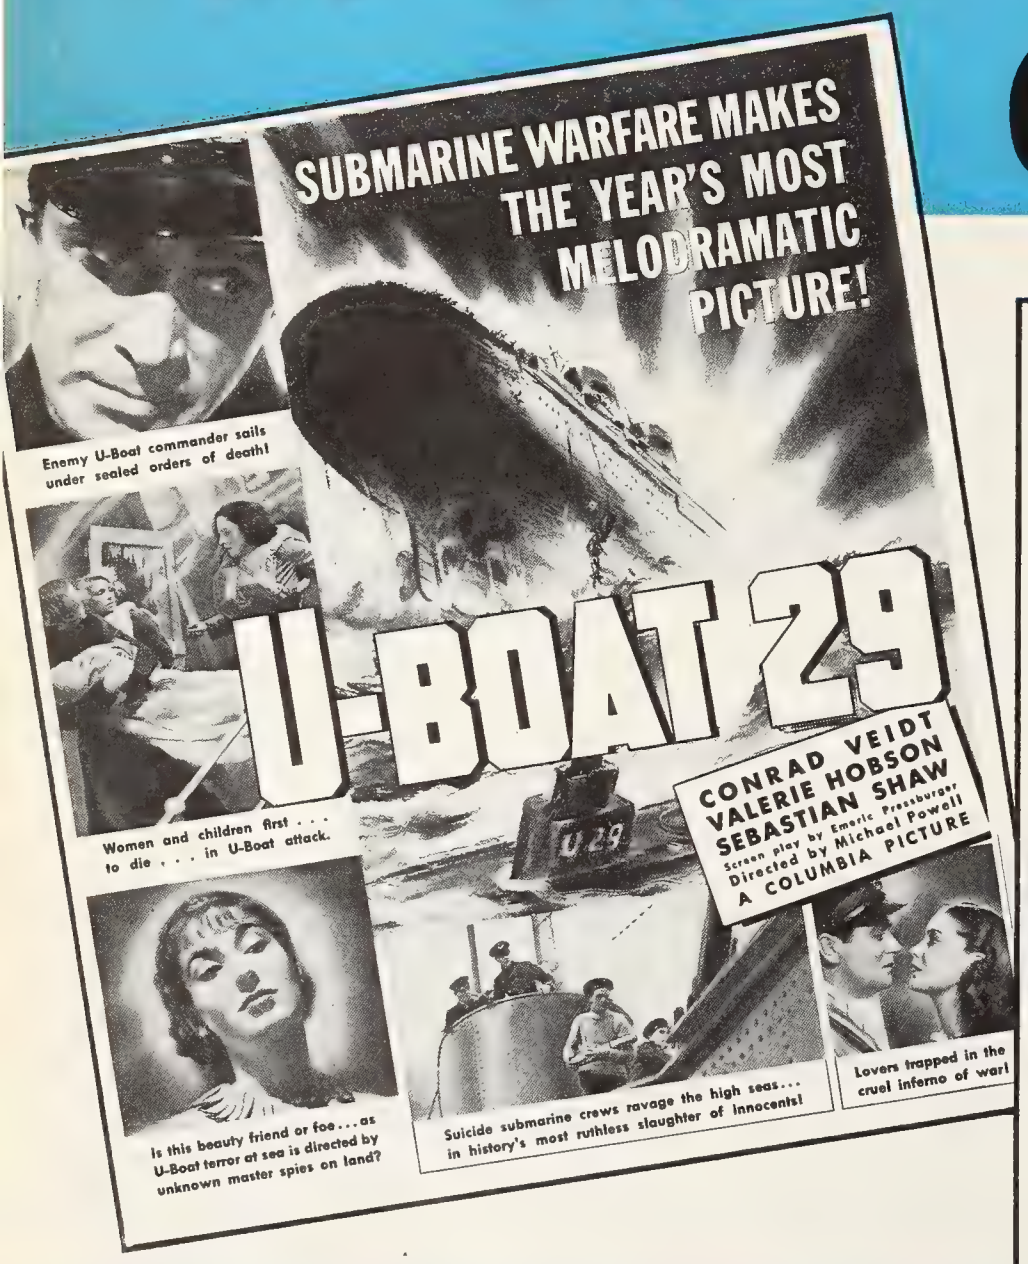
Comedy

This piece of nonsensical farce is the kind of show to which persons go when they feel the need of relaxation. It's a burlesqued college football story and that's one exploitation asset. It stars Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye, and that's two more exploitation assets. It made the preview audience, which, incidentally, was almost suffocated by heat, laugh heartily.



The whole thing is unadulterated comedy. The characterizations, dialogue and situations

Madison College, "Martha's" inherited family relic, is a deserted place until broken down actor "Booth" takes a hand, hires a football team and loads the campus with cute coeds. No other colleges will play the team, which president "Booth" is coaching by remote control, and desperate "Martha" engages a pro eleven to play a game. This is riot of action, fun and suspense, with "Martha's" plan of paying off the mortgage by hedged bets threatening a debacle until "Booth" enters and wins the game to the tune of wild slapstick.

The Man They Could Not Hang

(Columbia)

Back from the Beyond with Karloff

Apparently possessed with as many screen lives as are reputed to the longevity of a feline, Boris Karloff again defies death as the titular gentleman that the forces of law and order could not suspend from a gallows tree. The thesis is smooth and sure screen stuff, readily adaptable for "boo" ballyhoo. On the other hand, a more temperate approach may be had by utilization of the reams of popular and scientific publicity afforded the Carrel-Lindbergh mechanical heart apparatus.

If the spectator accepts the Karloff death defying machine on its face and film value, he will find the macabre plot manipulations, which Karl Brown has concocted from the original of Leslie T. White and George W. Sayre, first rate thrill and chill entertainment. Director Nick Grinde has mixed murder, melodrama and slices of science into a suspenseful pattern. Mr. Karloff plays his assignment, both in the earlier portions as one of the living and later as the man who came back from the beyond, with an understanding of both sides of his dual existence. However, the script creators, with an eye more on sensationalism than on logic, have pictured "Dr. Savaard" (Boris Karloff) on his return from the other world as a man whose heart may not have been affected by his experience but whose brain was considerably changed.

"Dr. Savaard" is given the death penalty for the accidental death of a volunteer assistant in experimentation with a mechanical heart apparatus. After the doctor has been pronounced duly dead, the body is claimed by a colleague who, using the cardiac device, restores him to life. The doctor, thereupon, forsakes his scientific program for a plan of revenge and corrals at his home a party of persons most responsible for his conviction. He then proceeds to eliminate them individually, but his daughter, trying to rescue the intended victims, is mortally injured. The doctor revives the girl, destroys his heart machine and dies of a wound received in the murder mixups.

The inspection includes sights of the amusement areas, the water ways, the foreign buildings and the garden spots. "Do It Now"

(G.P.O. Film Unit - British)

Civil Defence Propaganda

Made before the outbreak of war and then titled "If War Should Come," this one-reeler, slightly amended to fit existing conditions, is an essay in civil defence propaganda. It instructs the public in what they should and should not do in wartime, illustrates pictorially, so to speak, the numerous ARP (Air Raid Precautions) pamphlets issued by the Government before and since the outbreak of war.

Into the compact dimensions of 1,000 feet, the film, a vivid and arresting effort, tells the people how to set up their splinter proof shelters, how to darken windows, and what to do when the air raid siren shrieks and the air raid wardens hustle them to shelter. It is a concise and compelling piece of propaganda without any arty frills or impressionist's technique, appreciable by the adult mentality and, withal, not above the lowest common denominator of intelligence.

Though the film is designed for propaganda use in Britain, and was showing in cinemas in London on the reopening, it should probably prove of no small interest to American audiences, as an example of the conditions under which the British nation is at the moment laboring.

Good Excursion

The stopoff for this particular excursion in the Going Places travelogue is at the cultivated nature's wonderland in the Florida citrus belt near Vero Beach. Started several years ago by Arthur McKee, a Cleveland industrialist, and a Florida fruit grower, Waldo Exton, the garden spot has been nurtured to become a paradise for rare and exotic plant life. The floral specimens are many and odd and the accompanying commentary remarks are intelligently worded down to the lay non-horticultural level of understanding. Together with the plant parade is some interesting and amusing shots of the animal denizens of the agricultural wonder spot. The botany angle of the matter makes the subject of some scholastic interest to school groups pursuing this subject. The animal pictures fashion the miniature into a general and well rounded pictorial pattern well worth the interest of any average audience.—Running time, nine minutes.

WAR CUTS FOREIGN STORY BUYING, ALREADY AT LOW EBB, TO NOTHING

Story Editors Report Foreign Purchases Greatly Reduced in Recent Years; Propaganda Increases; Many Writers Flee

by WALTER SELDEN

With Europe in the grip of the second "World War" this week, American film companies were turning practically entirely away from the continent as a source of motion picture material.

Foreign sources of material for the American screen as provided by European plays and books have been declining steadily over the last few years, the decline coinciding to great extent with the increased importance put by Europe on its political beliefs, which it injects into play and story.

From 10% to One or Two

New York and Hollywood story editors this week estimated that the percentage of their total yearly purchases accounted for by foreign books and plays has dropped from approximately 10 per cent of the total used to 1 or 2 per cent. Even this represents more than will be provided by a Europe at war and aided by its playwrights and authors through propaganda.

At the same time, many of the more famous Continental authors have fled from Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia and Hungary to England, France and America, thus making it necessary to familiarize themselves with a strange language.

In addition, the present needs of warring nations for material of a political nature bring to a head a trend in that direction in the field of American, English and European plays and books which has been a major concern to story departments of the American film companies, still almost entirely unanimous in their determination to keep propaganda off the screen. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has recently dropped its plans for the production of Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here," while Paramount is reported to have shelved its plans for the filming of "Heil America," "Invasion" and "Air Raid."

Vienna and Budapest Once Sources

Columbia's story editor, Sam Marx, now in New York from the Coast, said: "In the last few years there has been a drastic drop in the amount of material coming from European cities that were formerly great sources; chiefly Vienna and Budapest. The writers have shifted their base of operations due to political pressure in many cases, and are in the position of having to learn a new language.

"We don't even consider the amount of foreign material we used to at Columbia," added Mr. Marx, who estimated the drop in Columbia's purchases of foreign books and plays in recent years as from 10 to approximately 1 per cent of the total purchased yearly, or some 40 properties out of about 15,000 examined.

Bertram Block, former Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer dramatic editor and now head of the Samuel Goldwyn eastern story office, characterized contemporary English material as being "either one of two kinds—political or fantasy," neither being especially adapted to American film use. Mr. Block also said that motion pictures in this country did not use much French material, with its series of long and bitter family chronicles.

Out of 20,000 Examined

At Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, William J. Fadiman, eastern story editor, defined the situation by saying that "the spiritual unrest prevalent in Continental Europe will inevitably result in a literature and drama that will either be fantastic in its escapist tendencies or grimly realistic and defeatist; either quality being unsuitable for the entertainment standards of the American audience."

Prior to 1933, Mr. Fadiman said, between 5 and 10 per cent of all MGM purchases were of foreign origin, while the figure today is between 1 and 2 per cent. The company, which buys between 75 and 80 properties a year, examines some 20,000 annually.

Mr. Fadiman added that MGM's "coverage is still as intensive as formerly in the European markets, although the findings are measurably less." This was before the outbreak of war.

Story Offices Abroad Closed

Before leaving his office as eastern story editor of Paramount to take charge of the company's editorial offices at the studio recently, Richard Halliday reported that Paramount's story offices have been closed in Berlin, Prague and Vienna, and that Russia had no properties of use to as international an industry as motion pictures and that Italy had very little.

In 1933, of approximately 60 films released by Paramount, the story content in about 8 per cent had come from abroad; while in the 58 pictures planned for the 1939-40 release, there will be only some 4 per cent based on foreign stories, exclusive of England.

John Byram, head of the Paramount play department, and formerly dramatic editor of The New York Times, said with regard to the increased political content in story material that "we are still trying to make films which will entertain, while realizing that you can't work in a vacuum. We are still in the entertainment business."

15 to 20 from London

Mr. Byram returned last June from a five week survey of the theatre abroad and at that time said that "With every increase in the power of the totalitarian states, additional sources of material are cut off." Mr. Byram cited, as an example of the direct bearing of politics on potential screen material, "The Two Dozen Red Roses," a play by Alvo de Benedetti, which was held back from the French stage due to the French feeling against the Italians at the time. The play was to have had Pierre Fresnay and Yvonne Printemp, well known to both French and American film audiences, as its stars.

Paramount examines approximately 20,000 pieces of material a year; including plays, novels, magazine stories and radio programs. Of these London provides from 12 to 20 properties a year suitable to the American market, while all foreign sources were called of decreasing importance.

RKO Radio no longer covers German or Italian material; its foreign coverage, however, remaining as about as intensive as formerly, with the emphasis being shifted to different locales. Leda Bauer, of the eastern story office, pointed out that "Three of the largest German publishing houses have moved to Amsterdam and Stockholm and, as they publish the work of writers who are voluntary or involuntary exiles from Germany, this material is still covered."

Katherine Brown, Selznick-International story editor, who purchased "Gone with the Wind," and, more recently, "The Flashing Stream," an English play by Charles Morgan, used to receive German and Viennese reports in common with the majority of other film company story editors.

Twentieth Century-Fox said that submissions of foreign material have fallen off this year, although in the past several years it has had many films among its higher budgeted productions based on foreign stories. The company does not cover Italian or Russian sources any longer, and notes a great increase in the number of political and sociological themes current both here and abroad.

Writing Staff Increased

Universal recently has increased its writing staff on the coast as a means of combating the growing paucity of foreign material. Larney Goodkind, eastern story editor, ascribes the discontinuance of the London story office as due to the facts that "The material was getting too political," and "too extreme—either political or else completely escapist and so also unfit for the world market at which American films aim." The company, of course, continues to subscribe to foreign services.

In the seven years from 1930 to 1936, Universal's foreign purchases accounted for about 5 per cent of its total story acquisitions. Since 1936 the percentage has fallen considerably below that figure.

At Warner Brothers the same situation was reported. Prior to 1933 seven or eight per cent of all story purchases made in a year were of foreign origin. Today, this has fallen to practically nothing, out of some 17,000 to 20,000 pieces of material examined each year.

Meanwhile, even before the outbreak of the War, which of necessity dictates that national effort be canalized into propaganda as well as munitions, there had been a startling growth both here and abroad in the number of books and plays dealing with political, sociological or economic themes, which typically rendered them unfit for film purposes.

Half Political

Mr. Halliday, before leaving for the Coast and being succeeded as eastern story editor by Richard Mealand, said that "about half the material coming out of England at present is of a political and economic nature," and cited in addition the increasing number of books in England and America dealing with the foreign situation, including many from newspaper correspondents.

Mr. Byram said that the "London theatre has been more and more concerned, of late, with sociological trends," giving as examples the following: "The Corn Is Green," by Emelyn Williams (who wrote "Night Must Fall"), the former being a play about Welsh mining life. Also about Welsh life is "Rhondda Roundabout" by Jack Jones. "World's End Cafe," by Anthony and Philip Gibbs, is tragically timely, being about the "next" war, and a peace movement by radio which overcomes dictatorships.

FOREIGN PROPAGANDA INCREASED

"Follow My Leader," written by Terence Ratigan and Maurice Anthony, is a satire on dictatorships. Mr. Ratigan wrote "French without Tears," which Paramount had planned as an English production. A satire on the League of Nations was the summer's production of George Bernard Shaw's "Geneva." Mr. Shaw, this year, lent his weight to the film industry with "Pygmalion," while his "Doctor's Dilemma" and "Saint Joan" have been planned as pictures by Gabriel Pascal.

Even such writers as E. Philips Oppenheim and H. G. Wells with, respectively, "The Brothers" and "The Holy Terror," have been writing about dictatorship, while Clemence Dane, who wrote "A Bill of Divorcement," "Broome Stages" and many other plays and novels, has done the same in her most recent work, "The Arrogant History of White Ben."

Undercurrent on French Stage

Although the French drama has not recently reflected the preoccupation with current political and sociological ideologies to the extent that the English has, the past few years have witnessed a steady undercurrent of this type of material on the French stage.

Typical of the trend through the years, with respect to this type of play, were the 1937 production of "La Paix Est par Demain" ("Peace Is Due Tomorrow") by Andre Lang, which was about war and possible means of prevention; the 1938 production of "La Guerre sans Armes" ("War Without Arms") by Charles Mere; the 1939 production of "Rien Qu'un Homme" ("Only a Man") by Paul Levy, which was about dictatorships, past and present, and "La Terre Est Ronde" ("The Earth Is Round") a story of Savonarola, linked up with modern dictatorships, by Armand Salacru. The last named play was one of the two great Paris stage successes of the past season. Most of the theatres in Paris have been closed during the summer, including the annual closing of the Comedie Francaise, the Odeon and the Opera Comique.

Dearth in Italy

In Italy the past few theatrical seasons have been marked by a dearth of new and original material; being chiefly concerned with propaganda plays and constant revivals of the works of Pirandello, D'Annunzio, Praga, Rovetta, Giacosa and Goldoni. The WPA National Play Service Bureau, reporting on the theatre abroad, says that the past season in Italy was chiefly notable for the production of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" and D'Annunzio's "Francesca da Rimini."

The productions given by the German theatre in recent years have been described as being either "innocuous, or else museum pieces," while the French press in recent months has commented on the fact that German films, as well, have ceased to be interesting or to have much artistic value. Also pointed out was the fact that many of the better known directors and actors are now living abroad, while the Nazi party has been using the cinema chiefly as a means of propaganda either for its ideology or as an incitement to war.

Even before the outbreak of the second World War, many film writers, directors and stars had fled from Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia and Hungary to England, France and America.

Organize in England

In England, these groups have established the Free German League of Culture, which has as patrons and honorary members, among others, Anthony Asquith, Sir Muirhead Bone, the Bishop of Chichester, Laurence Housman, Dr. Julian Huxley, Professor Gilbert Murray and J. B. Priestley. The 1,500 members of the League are divided among four sections; the Free German Writers' Association in England, the Actor's section, the Free German Artists' Association and the Association of German Musicians in England. Also recently organized along similar lines is the Austrian Circle for Arts and Sciences.

In New York, the German American Writers Association, of which Thomas Mann is honorary president, numbers among its members Ladislaus Fodor, author of "The Girl from Trieste" and "The Bride Wore Red"; Johannes Foerster, Kurt Hellmer, Richard Plant, Ernst Toller, Rudolf Kayser, Ernst Wallenberg and many others who have been active in film work abroad.

Now on the Coast are, among others, Hans Janowitz, who wrote the scenario for "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari"; Fritz Lang, Kurt Robitschek, Richard Revy, Ernst Deutsch, Wolfgang Zilzer, Georg Froeschel, Billie Wilder, Hans Koster and others now active in motion picture production who formerly had done work abroad.

Question No. 2 in the Bluebook School

The Bluebook School, conducted in the HERALD for many years by F. H. Richardson, has been resumed, based on the new Second Revision of the Sixth Edition of Mr. Richardson's Bluebook of Projection. Under the new presentation of the material, projectionists are asked to submit answers, as formerly, but often the answer that will be published will be that of Mr. Richardson himself, or of other specialists in projection and sound. This procedure has been adopted with the thought that it will serve the real purpose of the "school": to encourage and assist in study and at the same time facilitate preparation of effective answers.

The first question, which appeared in the issue of September 2nd, and the second are as follows:

QUESTION NO. 1: What is feedback? Reverse feedback? Interelectrode capacitance? Oscillation ?

QUESTION NO. 2: (a) What is exact width of 35 mm. film sound track? (b) What characteristics of the film concern projectionists most? (c) Describe, in detail, correct method of making film splices.

Answers will begin to appear as soon as several questions have been submitted.

Protestant Groups To Sponsor Series

Described by the Harmon Foundation, sponsor of church and sociological philanthropies and projects, as "a milestone in the history of American Protestantism," Mr. and Mrs. Ray Garner, young film expeditioners, have returned to New York with a series of motion pictures taken in Africa as the first films to be sponsored by eight Protestant Church groups.

Mr. and Mrs. Garner, age 26 and 24, respectively, arriving in the Congo early in the summer of 1938, went directly to the French Cameroun, where they made the first dramatic film "Ngono and Her People."

"Ngono" finished, the Garners went to the Kasai section in the Congo, where with Southern Presbyterian and Southern Methodists missions, they made two documentary films of mission activities, and social and economic aspects of tribal life, "Mission Achievements" and "Children of Africa."

Other films that the Garners made while in Africa are titled "Song After Sorrow," "The Light Shines in Bakubaland," "A Day in an African Village," "The World's Stake in Africa," "The Story of Bamba" and "What a Missionary Does."

The Protestant churches, all members of the Africa Committee of the Foreign Missions Conference, which sponsored the motion picture expedition were: The Presbyterian Church, The Methodist Episcopal Church, The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, The Disciples of Christ, The Church of the Brethren, The Evangelical Reformed Church, The Northern Baptist Convention, The United Brethren in Christ and the Seventh Day Adventists.

Herbert Cruikshank, Writer, Dies at 47

Herbert Cruikshank, writer, died Wednesday morning at the age of 47 of heart disease at his home, 25 Central Park West, New York.

Born in New York, Mr. Cruikshank at 18 went to Oklahoma, where he became a cowhand at the 101 Ranch, of which Tom Mix was foreman. The two met again many years later in Hollywood. From the ranch, Mr. Cruikshank went to Washington, becoming the secretary of Senator Cullum of Illinois.

He then entered the Consular Service and was made U. S. consul at Queenstown, Ireland.

Returning to New York, Mr. Cruikshank entered newspaper work, and was editor of the Exhibitor's Trade Review and, later, of the Moving Picture World before becoming motion picture editor of the New York Telegraph. He left this post to write for magazines and films, collaborating with Norman Krasna.

Surviving are his widow, Regina Crewe, newspaper film critic; a daughter, Beatrice, in the publicity department of Universal on the Coast, and a son, Lawrence, a writer for Warners.

Funeral services will be held Saturday noon at Campbell's Funeral Church in New York.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Tower of London

(Universal)

Historical Melodrama

Melodramatic political, military and personal events of English history in the exciting years 1471-1485 will be pictured in "The Tower of London." Naturally the show will be a costume production, and the scale upon which Universal is making it may be realized from the importance of the names it will present, the great number of persons who will be used, the scope, size and authenticity of settings, the prestige of the principals and the repute of the producer-director, Rowland V. Lee.

Directly the theme will trace the exploits of Richard III, an infamous plotter, who used fair or foul means to win his ends, yet is regarded one of the strongest characters of all time. Basil Rathbone, expert in his part in "If I Were King," will interpret the title role. "Tower of London" is also the story of a great many other persons. There are Boris Karloff as Richard's trigger man, the kindly Queen Elizabeth, Edward IV, a strong man until he was killed, a young Englishman who remained loyal to his queen during six years imprisonment and torture, the young princes Edward and Richard, the queen's young lady in waiting who helped her lover escape to conquer the tyrant and win a crown.

To supplement the name value of Rathbone and Karloff and help make the grim melodrama of history real and human, the production will further make available such personalities as Barbara O'Neil, Ian Hunter, Nan Grey, Vincent Price, John Sutton, Leo G. Carroll, Miles Mander, Frances Robinson, Ralph Forbes, Ernest Cossart and Ronald Sinclair.

Release date: Oct. 6, 1939.

Meet Dr. Christian

(RKO Radio)

Character Story

"Meet Dr. Christian" will be the first of a series to be produced by Stephens-Lang Productions for RKO Radio. The idea is based on the radio character "Dr. Christian," created by Jean Hersholt. Harvey Gates wrote the original story from suggestions supplied by Jack Hasty. Gates collaborated with Ring Lardner, Jr., and Ian Hunter in developing the screen play. Bernard Vorhaus is the director.

The time is today and the locale is a small Minnesota town. The plot has to do with the efforts of a doctor to improve the welfare of his home community. Unselfish and wholehearted in his attitude toward his fellow men, he meets the stern opposition of greed, avarice, political connivance and downright dishonesty. Especially is opposition focused on him when he tries to build a hospital, but he meets each rebuke with faith and courage and eventually sets the whole town right.

Hersholt, the doctor in the Dionne Quintuplets pictures produced by 20th Century-Fox, will be supported by Paul Harvey, Dorothy Lovett, who is new to pictures, Robert Baldwin, Marcia Mae Jones, Jackie Moran, Patsy Lee Parson, Enid Bennett, a star of silent days, Maude Eburne and Sarah Edwards.

Release date: To be determined.

Fast and Furious

(MGM)

Comedy Melodrama

It seems that exhibitors will have three things at least upon which exploitation capital may be made in connection with "Fast and Furious." One: It will be the third in the comic-romantic mystery series of "Fasts" that began with "Fast Company," followed by "Fast and Loose." It will be remembered that those pictures have a flamboyant amusement flair that proved fairly popular with the masses. Two: It will star Ann Sothern, the bombastic "Maisie" girl who also did all right for herself in "Trade Winds" and "Hotel for Women." Three: It brings Franchot Tone back to pictures.

The theme of "Fast and Furious" will deviate from the rare book dealer-amateur detective plot of its predecessors. This time the book dealer becomes involved in a bathing beauty contest. His efforts to judge the contestants in advance of the contest get his wife all steamed up. Then some funds are stolen, a murder is committed, and the wife unearths a clue which jeopardizes two lives. From there on the story is fun, excitement, suspense.

Other names which will be available to showmen are Ruth Hussey, Lee Bowman, Allyn Joslyn, John Miljan, Bernard Nedell, Mary Beth Hughes, James Burke, Margaret Roach, Gladys Lake and Granville Bates. Busby Berkeley is the director.

Release date: Sept. 29, 1939.

Drums along the Mohawk

(20th Century-Fox)

Action Romance

Walter D. Edmunds' novel, on which "Drums along the Mohawk" was based, was widely read as a book and as serialized in The Saturday Evening Post. The screen play was completed by Lamar Trotti, who did such pictures as "Young Mr. Lincoln," "Alexander Graham Bell" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band" for 20th Fox, and Sonya Levien, who collaborated with him on the adaptation of "In Old Chicago," John Ford, the director, has a long list of achievements in the action-adventure field.

The picture will star Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda, and for principal support names it will offer Edna Mae Oliver, Eddie Collins, John Carradine, Dorris Bowden, Jessie Ralph, Arthur Shields, Robert Lowery and Roger Imhoff. There will be twenty other feature name parts in the cast of thousands. To capture the full entertainment value of red blooded action, thrilling romance, scenic beauty of the story with its historical background, "Drums along the Mohawk" is being produced in color.

In design and prospective appeal "Drums along the Mohawk" is an American story for American audiences. It will picture an exciting chapter in early American history, when British soldiers, allied with Iroquois Indians, fought against the hardy sharpshooting pioneers of the Mohawk Valley. A love story contrasts the fierceness of savage combat.

Release date: November 10, 1939.

20,000 Men a Year

(20th Century-Fox)

Timely and Topical

The entertainment character of "20,000 Men a Year" will be that which automatically falls to any aviation picture of adventure and romance. But the production's exploitation significance is its topical tone. President Roosevelt announced a short while ago that the government, in cooperation with America's peacetime aviation activity, would like to see thousands of young men—20,000 was the number—trained annually in the art of flying to augment the national defense arm. The announcement stimulated widespread comment. The title of the picture will be brought loudly to public attention. It will be a Cosmopolitan production, and it may be expected that the same interests which publicized "Alexander Graham Bell," "Young Mr. Lincoln" and "Hotel for Women" will be articulate again.

The hero will be seen training some of the 20,000 but the actual theme is one of personal disappointment, courage, sacrifice and heroism.

The principal character in the story, Randolph Scott, has been featured in "Frontier Marshal" and many other pictures. He will be supported by Margaret Lindsay, long with Warners, Preston Foster, Mary Healy, remembered for "Second Fiddle," Kane Richmond, Douglas Wood, Robert Shaw, George Ernest, Maxie Rosenbloom and Sidney Miller. Alfred E. Green is the director. "The Duke of West Point," "King of the Turf" and "The Gracie Allen Murder Case" are his latest films.

Release date: Oct. 27, 1939.

IN COURTS

Name Schines in Bank Night Suit

A suit for $8,532, claimed due for running a Bank Night in 24 theatres, was filed this week in New York supreme court by Edward Goldstein against Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., Schine Theatre Company, Inc., S. K. E. Operating Company, Ltd., Schine Enterprises Corporation and Meyer and Louis Schine, trading as Schine Theatrical Enterprises.

A contract is claimed to have been signed January 20, 1938 between the plaintiff and defendants calling for the employment of the plaintiff for one year to direct Bank Night at $10 and $15 per performance in 24 of the defendants theatres.

Judge Fines Manager

Legal precedent was set at Salisbury, Md., last week when Chief Judge Benjamin A. Johnson fined Robert Daly, manager of the Arcade theatre, Salisbury, $500 and costs on lottery charges in connection with the operation of Bank Night at the theatre. Charges against Lucy Neal, ticket seller, who along with Mr. Daly had been indicted by the Wicomico County grand jury, were dropped.

The Bank Night case against Mr. Daly is believed to be the first of its kind in Maryland. Mr. Daly, through his attorney, pleaded guilty.

Kurtz Is Appointed Bankruptcy Referee

Alfred C. Coxe, federal judge, in New York this week appointed Irwin Kurtz ancillary Referee in Bankruptcy of Ambassador Pictures, Inc., and Conn Productions, Inc., California companies, and authorized Mr. Kurtz to direct Joseph Malcolm as president of Malcolm Laboratories Corporation, Melvin M. Hirsh as president of Syndicate Exchanges, Inc., and of Security Pictures, Inc., Mr. Marks as president of Marks and Malcolm Trading Corporation and Samuel Goldstein as treasurer of Guaranteed Pictures Company to appear for testimony as to the assets of the companies in bankruptcy.

The order was signed in response to a petition of Benjamin Lichtenfeld, trustee of the companies in bankruptcy, which charged the respondents with withholding assets belonging to the companies in bankruptcy.

Exhibitor Appeals on "Nation" Conviction

An appeal from the conviction of Robert E. Allan, exhibitor, for having shown "The Birth of a Nation" in Denver in violation of a city ordinance, will be argued this week in county court there.

The ordinance prohibits the showing of motion pictures which "tend to stir up or engender race prejudice, or are calculated to disturb the peace." Mr. Allan was fined $1,400 and sentenced to 120 days in jail. Carle Whitehead, attorney for the Colorado branch of the Civil Liberties Union, will intervene as friend of the court in behalf of Mr. Allan.

Old Time Petroleum Company of Wilmington, owners of the Warner theatre there, has filed suit asking that the county assessment on the theatre property be declared excessive and void. The company contends the assessment board placed a valuation of $303,200 on the property for tax purposes, while it should not exceed $140,300.

Loses Film Rental Contract Action

A clause in a film rental contract for $5,000 "liquidated damages" for failure to return prints was held to be out of proportion to the actual damages involved and therefore void and unenforceable by Benedict D. Dineen, New York supreme court justice, after trial of the suit brought by Lina Pictures Corporation against Principal Film Exchange, Inc.

However, the court ordered the return of all prints in the defendant's possession and awarded one dollar in damages. The defense contended that several prints had been lost and the court ruled that an affidavit stating that the films had been destroyed would be sufficient.

Withdraw Damage Suit

A suit for $150,000 damages claiming conversion of film rights brought by Lina Pictures Corporation against H. E. R. Laboratories, Inc., Garrison Film Distributors, Inc., and Aladdin Pictures Corporation was discontinued this week when a stipulation was filed in the New York supreme court withdrawing the suit and conceding all disputed rights to the defendants. Lina Pictures had sued under an assignment of film rights from Talking Picture Epics.

Attorney Sues Lynch

Claiming that $250,000 was due him for services rendered to the defendant in the Paramount Public Corporation reorganization, David Stoneham, Boston lawyer, filed suit in New York supreme court this week against Stephen A. Lynch.

OBITUARIES

Floyd Gibbons Dies; Reporter, Producer

Floyd Gibbons, the most spectacular journalist of the first World War, died last Sunday night at his country place near Stroudsburg, Pa., and was buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery, Washington, D. C., after services at Dahlgren Temple, Georgetown University.

After the war, Mr. Gibbons came to fame as a radio commentator, with a remarkable rapid fire staccato delivery of sometimes 215 words a minute. More recently he had been engaged in making a series of adventure tale short subjects for Warner Brothers. When his last illness overtook him he was planning to go to Europe as a war correspondent for the Hearst newspapers.

Mr. Gibbons was born in Washington July 16, 1887. He began his newspaper career on the Minneapolis Daily News when he was 20 years old. He worked for various northwestern papers and went thence to Chicago where he was ultimately employed by the Chicago Tribune, which sent him to Mexico in the days of Villa. Gibbons distinguished himself on world war fronts. He was wounded and lost an eye at Chateau-Thierry. His best known newspaper story was on the sinking of the Laconia, on which he had sailed because he expected it to be torpedoed.

Mr. Gibbons' one marriage ended in disappointment. He died alone. He leaves no children. His survivors include two brothers, Edward T. Gibbons of Washington and Donald Gibbons of Milwaukee, and two sisters, Mrs. Theodore Mayer of Newton Center, Mass., and Mrs. Margaret Chapman of Chicago.

Ingle Carpenter, personal attorney of Charles R. Rogers, producer, died September 23rd in Hollywood. Mr. Carpenter, who was 69, formerly represented Joseph M. Schenck and was business manager for Constance and Norma Talmadge, and other stars.

Tim Donahue

Tim Donahue, salesman for Columbia in Boston, died there September 24th from a heart attack.

Laura Bennett

Miss Laura Bennett, 79, retired actress, who in private life was Mrs. Laura Smith Shields, died September 24th in Jackson Heights, N. Y. She was the widow of John A. Shields, a minstrel known on the stage as Harry Woodson.

Laura La Vernie

Mrs. Laura La Vernie, a former Broadway actress who arrived in Hollywood some 35 years ago to act in motion pictures for the old Biograph studio, died there September 24th. Mrs. La Vernie, who was 85, retired in 1931.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

THE problem of blending one's business profession with one's hobby has been nicely handled by Harry Arthur, Jr., vice-president of Fanchon and Marco, with offices in the RCA Building, New York.

As a child, Mr. Arthur read and had read to him the King Arthur stories, and, as they do all children, they fascinated him. Galahad, Lancelot, Guinevere, Gawain, Elaine the Lily Maid of Astolat—those were names, names to fire the imagination.

But with Mr. Arthur, his interest, his excitement in the Knights of the Round Table did not die as he reached maturity. He became even more interested. His knowledge of Arthuriana is wide; his library filled with tomes dealing with that romantic period of English history.

And he has carried this interest into his business. If you happen to notice the office directory in the RCA Building, at Rockefeller Center, you'll see these two listings: Camelot Theatre Corporation of Mass., and Galahad Theatre Corporation of Mass.—merely names of two corporations which operate movie theatres in New England.

Harry Arthur, who doesn't do any descent-tracing to England's King, has a large farm at Peekskill, New York, where he raises horses and dogs, and again crops up the Arthurian legend. How? Well, here are the names of four of his dogs: Guinevere, Lancelot, Elaine, and Gawain.

To Leonard Lyons, conductor of The Lyons Den in the New York Evening Post, we are indebted for the story about Max Gordon, producing the movie adaptation of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," for RKO, who was lamenting about the losses being sustained because a large company of extras on location up in Oregon was unable to work because of the smoke from nearby forest fires.

"Every hour of delay because of that smoke costs a fortune," Max complained as he asked Garson Kanin for a suggestion.

"Change the title to 'Abe Lincoln in Pittsburgh,'" advised Kanin.

At a loss for a new twist in exploitation for their picture of the day, "Frontier Marshall," Manager Harold Lyon and Publicity-director Lionel Wasson, built a grave on the sidewalk in front of their Capitol theatre, Burlington, Iowa, and erected thereon a tombstone with the epitaph: "Here lies the Guy who thought he was faster on the trigger than the Frontier Marshal."

Ward Farrar, manager of Loew's theatre in Indianapolis, gives the craziest explanation for the naming of "The Wizard of Oz" story.

Mr. Farrar says that the explanation is contained in a letter written in 1903 by L. Frank Baum, the author, to an executive of Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis, which first published the book, and still does. The letter, now in possession of A. H. Hepburn, an official of the publishing firm, quotes Mr. Baum from his letter as follows:

"I have a little cabinet letter-file on my desk. I was thinking and wondering about a title for the story, and settled on the 'Wizard' part of it when my gaze was caught by the gilt letters on the three drawers in the letter cabinet. The first were A-G; the next, H-N, and on the last drawer were the letters O-Z, and OZ it became."

The motion picture industry is heading for some pretty strong competition in its efforts to get public attention for its 50th anniversary "Golden Jubilee Week," this first week of October. During the very same week there will be observed "National Donut Week" and the National Donut Week Committee is inviting exhibitors the country over to join with them in boosting the little round cake built 'round the traditional hole.

The committee in pursuing research on the donut discovered that in exhuming petrified remains in the wastelands of the West, Dr. E. B. Renaud, of the Colorado Museum of Natural History, proved that a North American race older than the Pueblos ate some form of donut. Research further revealed that as far back as the 16th Century, the Dutch had donuts, called them "vet Kookies" and "olykeks."

The first U. S. donut shop was founded in 1739 by Mrs. Anna Joralemon, on Maiden Lane, New York City. Her descendants, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Joralemon and daughter, Ruth Irene, now reside at 60 Locust Drive, Milburn, N. J.

To Captain Gregory, a mariner of Camden, Maine, falls the distinction of inventing the hole in the donut in 1847. Noticing that his mother's donuts remained soft, soggy and unbaked in the center (they were round, studded with a nut in the center at the time) he persuaded her to omit the center, leaving a hole instead. Hence the donut with the hole that we know today.

Motion Picture exhibitors interested in tying up with the "National Donut Week's" celebration are invited by the committee to write to Bert Nevins, 50 East 42d St., New York City.

Some of those countless hordes of motion picture press agents who walk Broadway and Hollywood Boulevard in search of employment, might look into the word sent back from Tuba City, Arizona, by Ernie Pyle, to the effect that the Navajo Indians out in that Indian country are in sore need of press agents. He says that they have great flocks of fattened sheep, are overrun with beautiful butterball conditioned ponies and are blanketed under large piles of good looking Navajo rugs—yet are starving for want of some effective exploitation and publicity.

When a rug is finished by the women folk the Indian man gets on his horse, rides to a trading post, bargains with the trader, arrives at a price and takes that much out in foodstuffs and supplies.

It takes a lot of time to trade with a Navajo. He'll sit and think all day. He'll ride in for 30 miles to trade off a $3 rug. He'll hang around two or three days and nights while the dickering goes on. He'll up and ride another 50 miles to get an extra dime. What he needs is a couple of film salesmen as managers. They'll fix him up in pretty short order.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Marking Time

British production, still awaiting a lead from the Government, uncertain yet as what is to be the state's policy in regard to British films, is currently, and compulsorily, marking time.

On the cards are indications that the Government's policy will be that films, as a section of the whole entertainment scene, are a national service. The Home Office's decision to permit the reopening of cinemas, obviously on the grounds that the recreation of the masses is essential in these times, is accepted as evidence of an approving point of view on the part of Whitehall. So, too, are the reports, well founded, that although the Board of Trade is likely to suspend the Quoto provisions of the Films Act, it does not intend to provoke a situation akin to that during the last war when production was completely halted. Some form of compromise appropriate to the continuance of production in one form or another is almost certain.

The Government's own position in regard to the making of films is yet to be clarified. Meanwhile it is sponsoring, in one form or another, the production of films with a propaganda basis. Alexander Korda, for instance, is making at Denham a subject with an Air Force background and calculated to dramatize the might of the country's air arm. Documentary passages have been shot for him by the GPO Film Unit.

The GPO Film Unit has made a film on war preparedness which has been issued throughout the country. Other Government departments linked with the Ministry of Information will probably follow suit.

Meanwhile, in the purely entertainment field, production is continuing and will continue in more than one British studio, and, in more than one instance, with American backing.

A director of film publicity has been elected at the Ministry of Information in the person of Sir Joseph Ball. It is probable that one of his duties will be not only to watch production with a Governmental eye, but likewise to organize and direct the making of films in the propaganda field.

Each Government department is linked with the Ministry of Information and more than one film is in production, or to be produced shortly by the GPO Film Unit, which may become the nerve center of official wartime film production.

Maxwell's Plans

War, nor the menace of German bombers, it would seem, is to be allowed to interfere with the production plans of John Maxwell and his producer henchman, Walter Mycroft, who announce their intention of carrying on making comedies and thrillers at the Elstree Studios. The certainty of an immediate release through the 400 houses on the ABPC circuit is, of course, no negligible argument.

Production starts at Elstree next month on a remake of the old Ian Hay comedy, "The Middle Watch," with Mary Maguire, Sebastian Shaw, David Hutcheson, Reginald Purdell, and ex-topline comedian, Leslie Fuller.

This story will be followed by an Edgar Wallace thriller, "The Yellow Mask"; an Irish comedy," Spring Meeting"; another thriller, "Alias, the Bulldog"; and later a remake of Gene Gerrard's old success, "My Wife's Family," based upon a London stage play.

GPO UNIT MAKING PROPAGANDA FILMS

Under Government auspices the GPO Film Unit, most consistently active of state sponsored production groups, is now making films for the Ministry of Information.

Recently they have concluded production of a film entitled "Do It Now" (see Showmen's Reviews in this issue) which aims to instruct the populace on what they should do, and what they should not do, in war. The picture, a 1,000 footer, has been taken over by the Ministry of Information and has been issued for showing on nearly every screen in the country. The film, made before the war, was originally titled "If War Should Come".

Meanwhile, GPO camera units are on location making film records of Britain's four-square attitude toward the present war and the steps taken to consolidate public security.

Formby and War

The problem of war and its spirit is currently concerning producer Michael Balcon, who, determined to continue making films with British record money-making star George Formby as the hero, has not yet decided whether the public will want to see him in war or A.R.P. background. Formby, however, will be Ealing Studios' brightest star, and Walter Forde, himself a 1914-18 comedian, will direct the next picture, which should start in October.

The war, too, has set a problem with script writers on Ealing's "David Goliath." Seth, one character who runs through the film, has had to be taken out, for the artist who has the role was called to the colors. A new character, Danny, was written in as substitute.

Going Ahead

The attitude of Paramount British toward production here is exemplified in its declared intention to carry on with its British program. Mario Zampi, producer-director for the organization in this country, has declared that the motto of his unit is "business as usual." In spite of the situation he is to go ahead with a £150,000 ($600,000) program of four new films.

Mr. Zampi, who has finished "French Without Tears," yet awaiting trade show, and who recently has directed and produced the Duggie Wakefield comedy, "Live and Let Live," is working on stories to launch into practical process. The four pictures will cost between £25,000 and £50,000 each.

Relaxation

A peacetime show, which is to be aimed at wartime relaxation, is the Gaumont screen version of Britain's most popular radio program, "Band Waggon." This is in production at the Shepherds Bush Studios, with radio topliner Arthur Askey in the leading role. Askey is, of course, assisted by other artists who have been familiar on the "Band Waggon" hour.

"Band Waggon" is a peculiar entertainment compote of comedy, music, drama, puzzles and romance, a feature not remotely different from the Jack Benny radio hour.

Much of the setting of "Band Waggon" is purported to be in Britain's Broadcasting House, and art director Vetchinsky has set up in the Shepherds Bush Studios a series of sets which are said to be replicas of the BBC's headquarters.

In the film with "Big-hearted" Arthur Askey and Richard "Stinker" Murdoch are Peter Gawthorne as the assistant director of supervision, Wally Patch as the military commissionaire, radio headliner Michael Standing, band leader Jack Hylton, and a radio broadcaster, second only in favor to Askey, gardening expert C. H. Middleton. Donald Calthrop, noted British actor, makes a return to films after an absence of two years in this production, which is being directed by Marcel Varnel with Maurice Ostrer in charge of production.

Selig's War Film Opens

"Double Crime in the Maginot Line," feature produced in and around the French Maginot Line, where the second world war is now raging, will have its first public showing Friday at the Larkin theatre, San Francisco, opening the next day at the New Amsterdam, Times Square, New York, the Esquire, Hollywood, October 5th, and at Warners' De Witt, in Bayonne, N. J., on October 10th. Al Selig, former motion picture advertising and publicity writer, is distributing in the U. S.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BLONDIE TAKES A VACATION: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Another good picture in this series that have taken America by storm. Personally did not think it as good as the last one but, with no complaints from the audience, feel that I should not complain. Very good for our situation. Running time, 68 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOOD GIRLS GO TO PARIS: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell, Walter Connolly—Not up to anything worth mentioning. I saw it twice but did not find out what the story (if any) was about. We did close to an all-time low gross on it, failing to pay expenses by considerable. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 3-4.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Thomas Mitchell, Richard Barthelmess—A wonderful picture and certainly entitled to more gross than we gave it here. Business is terrible so what will it be when winter sets in? Haven't had a picture to hold the attention like this one did for a long time. Running time, 121 minutes. Played September 10-11. —Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs Neb. Small town patronage.

TEXAS STAMPEDE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Regular western. Played with "Prison without Bars."—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WEST OF CHEYENNE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—As good as a western fan could wish. Western fans liked it very much. Business off due to heat. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

First National

COWBOY QUARTERBACK, THE: Marie Wilson, Bert Wheeler, Gloria Dickson—Played this little comedy on a weekend but it is not so hot. Not much comedy and the gags pulled were so old that they grew a beard. Just fair but will not stand alone. Running time, 56 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—Grand picture and grand stars. A cleanup in any man's town. Running time, 92 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—Plan for holdover dates on this one. The women eat it up. Bette Davis again turns in a topnotch performance. Davis makes a lot of those donkeys who think they are actresses look like the Cherry Sisters. Running time, 95 minutes. Played September 13-15.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, Lynne Carver, Rex Ingram—You have a natural in "Huckleberry Finn" and then have Mickey Rooney thrown in. What more could you ask for? Running time, 92 minutes. September 15-17.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS: Robert Donat, Greer Garson—It is just a little stodgy at the start but it picks up as it goes along. The picture is one that will be highly appreciated by the audiences that like the finer things. It is splendidly produced. Donat gives just as fine a performance as he did in "The Citadel" and Miss Garson definitely has something. Foreign menace to the front again. I would not want a cycle of this type but your house loses nothing in prestige. Though it did only average business, it still is a satisfactory picture in all respects to offer any audience. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD: Claudette Colbert, James Stewart—Certainly a fine picture with plenty of fun and excitement. In pictures of this type Colbert is always fine. And who could hope to improve upon James Stewart? Running time, 86 minutes. Played September 3-4.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LADY OF THE TROPICS: Hedy Lamarr, Robert Taylor—A picture the women will go for in a big way and as a result bring the men along. Box office better than average. Miss Lamarr is all that the critics say she is. All in all a good picture of its kind that should do well your best days. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ind. Small town patronage.

LUCKY NIGHT: Myrna Loy, Robert Taylor—This one is well acted and is entertaining. But the story is just a good bit off color. A high class girl picks up a strange man on a park bench and they go on a 'bat," waking up married in a hotel room the next morning, unable to recall how it all came about. And the marriage turns out O. K. Maybe Will Hays thought this story suitable for the screen but I can't seem to see how he did it. Running time, 91 minutes. Played August 27-28.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

MAISIE: Ann Sothern, Robert Young—Boys, this is strictly a honey. A mighty good antidote for box office poisoned by "Broadway Serenade," "Dramatic School," "Idiot's Delight," "Bridal Suite," etc. Running time, 70 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

MERRILY WE LIVE: Constance Bennett, Brian Aherne, Alan Mowbray, Billie Burke, Patsy Kelly—Don't overlook this comedy. Our people ate it up. They came out laughing and complimented us. Nice business. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MIRACLES FOR SALE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Fair picture; fair business. Plot deals with magicians and a murder mystery. Played September 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Beulah Bondi, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Una Merkel—This picture was unusual as was "Death Takes a Holiday," that was made some years ago. The theme behind it is that Death is not something to dread. It is fantastic, true, but the way they were called and by Cedric Hardwicke with his quiet voice made an intriguing picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

ROSE MARIE (reissue): Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Another box office hit. Nelson Eddy's best performance and Jeanette MacDonald is as usual tops. Above average business for this one. Running time, 112 minutes. Played September 4-5.—Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO (reissue): Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy—Went to town on this one. No need for praise on this picture. Just play it. Even if you played it when first issued, it will stand a second run in any town. Running time, 115 minutes. Played August 18-19.—Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON!: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—The best of the Tarzan pictures. Worth waiting the three years for. Should satisfy all Sunday fans. Filmed in sepia and photography is excellent. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 17-19.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON!: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—This one naturally has a "screwy" plot and a lot of rather obvious faking but they come to see it in large numbers. In fact, by running it an extra night, it will give us the largest attendance we have had on a picture in several years. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 9-11.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

TELL NO TALES: Melvyn Douglas, Louise Platt—Here's an excellent melodrama with thrills galore. But it didn't do any business. Running time, 69 minutes. Played September 8-9.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Mary Boland, Virginia Weidler—I am sending this review in after only two days of the picture. This one topped "Golden Boy," and that was very big. The women can't wait to get in to see it. Russell is a knockout. This picture even brought in the hibernating haybags from the sticks. George Cukor deserves a big hand. Running time, 132 minutes. Played September 16-22.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

Monogram

MYSTERY PLANE: John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds—Too many walkouts on this one. Doesn't make the series very encouraging. Running time, 60 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Dew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

BOY TROUBLE: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland, Billy Lee, Donald O'Connor—No terrific draw here. Young Billy Lee turns in a nice performance as well as "Small Fry" O'Connor. Business below par. Running time, 74 minutes. Played September 15-16.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HOTEL IMPERIAL: Isa Miranda, Ray Milland—Played with "Night Work." Both like drawing to a flush and missing. Your only chance to win is by bluffing.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LADY'S FROM KENTUCKY, THE: George Raft, Ellen Drew, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts—Box office got a little rusty while playing this but it's a good picture. Running time, 75 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Rochester, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—Honors due to producer Arthur Hornblow, Jr., and director Mark Sandrich on this one. Paramount has at last tumbled and given Benny a picture in which he can draw his screen fans as he has won his radio fans. Good comedy and plenty of eye lure in the glamour girl episodes. Rochester steals the show. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 11-12.—Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Rochester, Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—An excellent comedy with Rochester stealing all scenes he appears in. Adults enjoyed this more than children. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 10-12.—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

NIGHT WORK: Mary Boland, Charles Ruggles—See report on "Hotel Imperial."—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

OUR LEADING CITIZEN: Bob Burns, Susan Hayward—I never made a dime on a Bob Burns picture yet, and this was no exception. People don't want to be educated or preached to. They want entertainment. Running time, 85 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

SUNSET TRAIL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—Very good Cassidy western that won't let you down. Running time, 66 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

TOUCHDOWN ARMY: John Howard, Robert Cummings, Mary Carlisle—Another "B" firm that steals honors from the big "A's." Let's have more like it; only make them longer. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 13-14.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

Republic

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes—Good picture; good business. This is longer and better than the average Autry. Played September 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WOMAN DOCTOR: Frieda Inescort, Henry Wilcoxon, Claire Dodd, Sybil Jason—This picture got quite a bit of praise. Running time, 65 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—I simply wish to report this, in my opinion, is the best picture to come from RKO in two years.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

DAY THE BOOKIES WEPT, THE: Joe Penner, Betty Grable—It's all "nerts" but evidently patrons liked it. Come again, Joe. Poor title. Running time, 65 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

FIVE CAME BACK: Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie, C. Aubrey Smith, Lucille Ball—Got quite a surprise out of this one. It has action, suspense and more than a few thrills, spilling a few tears into the bargain. Very good character portrayals by the whole show. Above average business on this one. Running time, 75 minutes. Played August 25-26.—Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

IN NAME ONLY: Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis—The ladies went for this and pulled the men along with them. Running time, 85 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

TWELVE CROWDED HOURS: Richard Dix, Lucille Ball—Nice program picture. Running time, 61 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BOY FRIEND: Jane Withers, Richard Bond, Arleen Whelan—Average Withers picture except at the box office. Fox, why don't you give her a break? Running time, 69 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

CHASING DANGER: Preston Foster, Lynn Bari—Very good but had stiff competition, night football. If you have football nights in your town, you know what we mean by competition. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 15-16.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Thetare, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—Good picture and good business. Jane always pleases here. Played September 12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, THE: Richard Greene, Basil Rathbone, Wendy Barrie, Nigel Bruce—This seemed to please everyone who saw it but somehow it just didn't draw them in. It has lots of thrills and this is added to by the fact that a lot of the picture takes place on very misty and eerie moors, consequently it is hard to see in some places. Very poor box office. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 28-29.—Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

IT COULD HAPPEN TO YOU: Gloria Stuart, Stuart Erwin—Just a fair program picture that will get by if your audience is not too critical. Good to see Stu Erwin again, even if the picture was just another filler.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MR. MOTO IN DANGER ISLAND: Peter Lorre, Jean Hersholt, Amanda Duff—No complaints and no compliments. Average double feature entertainment. Played September 13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MR. MOTO'S LAST WARNING: Peter Lorre, George Sanders, Virginia Field, Ricardo Cortez—Very good for dual bill. Business off due to heat wave.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Al Jolson—The majority was terribly disappointed. Certainly a punk part for Mr. Power. Running time, 86 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Henry Hull—Good enough for extended runs. Liked generally. Not big but gets under the wire fine and seems to click everywhere. McPhee knows. Running time, 100 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda, Young Sisters—Class production but there wasn't any in our class. Running time, 90 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, Paul Lukas, June Lang—This will please your Western fans. It is more or less that sort of a picture but the story of early Australia is totally different from a regulation Western. It is about 50 per cent longer than most Westerns. Running time, 91 minutes. Played September 1-2.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

DIVORCE OF LADY X, THE: Merle Oberon, Laurence Richardson, Binnie Barnes, Ralph Richardson—Didn't click here. These pictures are sure poison at the box office with us. Didn't make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Dolores Costello, Roger Daniel—If they would have forgotten about the race horse angle, this picture would have done a lot better. This was really a great show but people stayed away due to horse racing, as they don't go for it. Everyone that saw it praised it highly. Running time, 88 mintes. Played September 8-10.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

STAGECOACH: Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Andy Devine, George Bancroft, Thomas Mitchell, Louise Platt, Mary Kathleen Walker, Donald Meek, John Carradine, Berton Churchill—An epic of the romance, tragedy and comedy of the old west with Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell, Donald Meek, Louise Platt, John Carradine, Andy Devine, Berton Churchill and George Bancroft forming a cast rarely seen in a western and making this one of the outstanding pictures of the year. Photography of the outdoor sequences is excellent, showing the cactus, buttes and obelisks of the desert country. Especial mention should be made of the youngest member of the cast, Mary Kathleen Walker, who makes her screen debut at the age of three days. My only objection to this one is the apparent cruelty of making the Indian ponies turn cartwheels every time an Indian was shot. That struck me as being neither accurate or necessary. More westerns like this one and the adults as well as the kiddies will come back to the theatre. Running time, 96 minutes. Played September 8-10.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WINTER CARNIVAL: Ann Sheridan, Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish, Robert Armstrong—This should hold some interest for ski fans but other than that it is just a light and frivolous college story. Average business on this one. Running time, 100 minutes. Played September 1-2.—Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

FOR LOVE OR MONEY: June Lang, Robert Kent—Just a picture that you won't miss if you don't play it. Running time, 61 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

SPIRIT OF CULVER: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew, Andy Devine, Henry Hull, Jackie Moran—Had more good reports on this picture from the few who saw it than any program for some time. A very good picture. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 13-14.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

SUN NEVER SETS, THE: Basil Rathbone, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—This picture lives up to all expectations and then some. A heart stirring drama of the loyalty and sacrifices made by British service men for their Empire. You can't go wrong with this one. Best business at the box office this season. Running time, 100 minutes. Played September 8-9.—Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins—Very good comedy with Chas. Winninger stealing the show. However, had a very poor print on this one and the sound was "Hard to Get." Very little singing by Powell. Can recommend it, however. Running time, 81 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, Claude Rains, John Garfield—Very fine production that means nothing to a small town box office. Running time, 127 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

NANCY DREW AND THE HIDDEN STAIRCASE: Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, John Litel—Well, we tried three of these to see if we couldn't make one of these series things stand up, but we'll have to give it up. No more of these for us! Running time, 69 minutes. Played September 6-7.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CITY SLICKER: Scrappy Cartoons—This Scrappy Cartoon pleased all.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NELL'S YELLS: Color Rhapsodies—A fair little cartoon, but just fair. Have had better and also worse. Running time. seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ODD SPORTS: Special Sport Thrills—Just fair. Saw them before in Columbia sport reels.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SAVED BY THE BELLE: Three Stooges—These are all good and this one no exception. Plenty of laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 11—Extra good. Don't miss this one. Some new slants in Hollywood.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CULINARY CARVING: Peter Smith Specialties—Very interesting but think Smith can do better. Running time, nine minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

CULINARY CARVING: Pete Smith Specialites—Entertaining one-reeler which has a few laughs. Subtle stuff.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DOG DAZE: Our Gang—An excellent Gang that grownups as well as the kids will enjoy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GOLDILOCKS AND THE THREE BEARS: Cartoons—Very good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOLDILOCKS AND THE THREE BEARS: Cartoons—The best cartoon of the season. Tops anybody's cartoon we have seen this year. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOLDILOCKS AND THE THREE BEARS: Cartoons—This is the best cartoon to come from any producer in two years. Running time, eight minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

GREENER HILLS, THE: MGM Miniatures—Entertaining one-reeler which has some comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAMA'S NEW HAT: Captain and the Kids—Fair cartoon. Advisable to book other shorts with it. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Clack, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

MARINE CIRCUS: Pete Smith Specialties—Here is a beautiful subject. Give it you best time and you won't be sorry. Subjects like this worth a dozen cartoons. Running time, 9½ minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

ONE AGAINST THE WORLD: Passing Parade, No. 9—An excellent historical reel. These reels please all classes and are educational.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

POETRY OF NATURE: Pete Smith Specialties—Smith must be running out of material. Slipped up on this one. Just fair. Not good enough to be one of his specials. Running time, eight minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

RHUMBA RHYTHM: MGM Miniatures—Excellent little musical with plenty of comedy. Good for any program. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RURAL HUNGARY: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Average travel talk in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewel, Okla. Small town patronage.

STORY OF DR. JENNER: Passing Parade, No. 4—Good but there are too many like this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

SYDNEY, PRIDE OF AUSTRALIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—These travel talks would be OK if they would choke off FitzPatrick and just used music. This one just fair. Running time, nine minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

UNSEEN GUARDIANS: Passing Parade, No. 10.—Entertaining.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

FOX HUNT, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Another Disney bullseye.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, THE: No. 12—This issue was very good and pleased one hundred per cent.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MERBABIES: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very good. Enjoyed by all but not worth extra rental. Running time, eight minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GOOD NEIGHBORS: Magic Carpet Series—Just a filler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: Very good, especially the one on the Siegfried Line. News of the Day slipped on this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MUSCLE MAULERS: Lew Lehr—Be sure you play this. Plenty of action and many saw it twice. Running time, eight minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SHOOTING FOR PAR: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—Very good. Golf fans will enjoy it. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

VIKING TRAIL: Magic Carpet Series—Just a filler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHAT EVERY BOY SHOULD KNOW: Lew Lehr—Lew Lehr is good in newsreels but as a comedian in ten minute shorts he's terrible. Junk it; no one will miss it. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

United Artists

THREE ORPHAN KITTENS: Silly Symphonies—This is one of the best cartoons in ages. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

Universal

TEDDY BERGMAN'S BAR-B-Q: Mentone Musical Comedies—A good musical with plenty of variety in the acts that went over nicely. Old but still good. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

ARTIE SHAW AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A very good band short with plenty of variety in selection which makes it acceptable to all. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DAVE APOLLON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Not so hot. Just an ordinary single. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

KRISTOPHER KOLUMBUS, JR.: Looney Tunes—One of the best. Very funny and a cartoon that even the grownups liked. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LARRY CLINTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very good. Orchestra shorts good. Running time, eight minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MECHANIX ILLUSTRATED, NO. 1: Color Parade—Interesting. Running time, eight minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PICTORIAL REVUE, NO. 4: Hats, Dogs—Very good with plenty of laughs.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PORKY IN EGYPT: Looney Tunes—Very poor. Running time, eight minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SNOW MAN'S LAND: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STAR DUST: Broadway Brevities—Run of the mill musical short. Nothing to rave about. Running time, eight minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TOILS OF THE LAW: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" Series—Sound terrible on this one. No entertainment value on account of not being able to hear what they had to say. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

WILL OSBORNE AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Plenty of snap to this but too much brass and jazz. The younger bunch will like it but that is all. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

March of Time Staff Is Augmented for "Ramparts"

Ray L. Hall, former Pathe news editor and short subject producer, has been assigned special production duties on March of Time's forthcoming feature length film "The Ramparts We Watch." Caroll Case and David Pardoll have been appointed special assistants to James Wolcott, associate producer of the film.

Others who have been added to "Ramparts" staff include Arthur Jones, William Sikes, Frank Calabria, George Dangerfield and William Gerrity to the technical staff. Louis de Rochemont is the producer.

Exhibitors Laud U for Adhering to Contract

In a bulletin to members, the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio commends Universal for its action in notifying exhibitors that "First Love," which was not completed for release in the 1938-'39 season, will be released under 1938-'39 contracts regardless of its actual release date. "This action by Universal is highly commendable and we hope that it establishes a precedent that other distributing companies will follow," the bulletin said.

The bulletin also reminds members that the Ohio Department of Industrial Relations insists on compliance with the law which makes it mandatory upon all employers to enter into wage agreements with all employees under 21 years of age. The statute was enacted in 1893 but has not been generally enforced.

Warners Making "Penrod" Short Subject Series

Warner Brothers will make a short subject series based upon Booth Tarkington's novel character, "Penrod."

Dean Franklin is writing the series. Gordon Hollingshead is supervising.

Warners also announced this week that it will make "Virginia City," to be in color, with substantially the same cast used in "Dodge City."

Kalmine in Legion Post

Harry Kalmine, district manager for Warner Theatres in Pittsburgh, has been elected commander of Variety Club Legion Post No. 289. Other officers are Joseph Hiller, National Theatrical Exchange, and Dr. L. G. Beinhauer, vice-commanders; C. C. Kellenberg, office manager of Twentieth Century-Fox exchange, adjutant; James G. Balmer of the Harris Amusement Company, finance officer, and Reverend J. Garahan, chaplain.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

JUST DOING THE JOB

A few weeks back, Matt Saunders and Morris Rosenthal got behind widely publicized campaigns celebrating the seventeenth anniversary of the twin-built Loew theatres in Bridgeport, the Poli and the Majestic. The exploitations earned all kinds of public and civic attention, in which the theatremen were featured. Both were feted for long years of continuous service in their situations. Newspapers and merchants made much of it.

Currently, Pete Egan ties in one of his dates at the Famous Players Canadian Palace in Calgary with the celebration of his silver wedding anniversary. Local couples married 20 years or more were invited to be the manager's guests at the theatre. The event was noted prominently by the community.

By the nature of his calling, the theatreman looms large in the public eye. His is a more colorful personality than the merchant dealing in more conventional wares, and as such finds ready acceptance. Thus, the showman does not hesitate to use as grist for his publicity mill even those occasions that in other lives are taken for granted. To him it's all a part of his business.

MR. LEAND SETS THE STAGE

Theatremen are long familiar with the useful device of personally addressed picture postcards, usually promoted from metropolitan hotels and posted to the local mailing list. And now Harold Leand of the Revere in Revere, Mass., varies the idea with a more elaborate staging that appears to have returned sufficient dividends for the work involved.

Shortly before his vacation period, Leand secured picture postcards of the World's Fair, had the cashier hand-address them to the mailing list with a message about the Fair plus a plug for a coming date and signed with the manager's name. Day before he left, the Round Tabler had the local paper announce he was visiting the Exposition, so that the town would be familiar with his plans. On arrival, Harold mailed the cards from the Fair post-office.

A lot of bother for one stunt? Hardly for a theatreman intent on his job, who seeks to milk every idea regardless of the personal effort expended. On his return, Leand received many personal acknowledgements of appreciation from the folks involved. Better yet, the picture did a whale of a business.

THERE IS GLAMOUR-and GLAMOUR

That's a great piece of business, the sequences in "Fifth Avenue Girl", wherein the socialite wife and her millionaire mate are reconciled through the medium of an old-fashioned beefstew. And the happy involvement of this champion dish in the proceedings appears to have opened an avenue of unusual exploitation, a beefstew recipe and cooking contest. This was seized upon by Bill McCort to sell the date at the RKO Albee in Providence and of which more is told on another page. The tiein, incidentally, was reported as one of the most successful in local theatre-merchant promotion.

The motion picture often is at its best in distilling ready-flowing gushings of fashionable glamour to soften sharp corners in a world of too much reality. The immediate success of McCort's campaign to spotlight red meat and onions brings reassurances that good ole beefstew continues to command an equally compelling box-office glamour of its own.

DIRTY WORDS ARE JUVENILE

At this stage, it should not be necessary to call a manager for off-side copy in advertising. But there is a need for it, according to the evidence to hand, a herald from a manager who knows better, and which shouts "shocking revelations" to be found in "Prison Without Bars".

The picture happens to be good enough to do business without the dubious aid of any such phony—and corny—buildup. Conscientious theatremen have found in it sufficient merit to back up an honest job of exploitation.

The dirty-word-on-the-toilet-wall school of picture advertising has long run its course. Managers depending upon that "shocking" business to get 'em in find that the shocks, if any, come from patrons misguided enough to believe what they read.

From date of this issue there remain two weeks to the end of the Quigley Awards Third Quarter. October 14th is the date, and entries for Quarter-Master consideration must be received no later than that time.

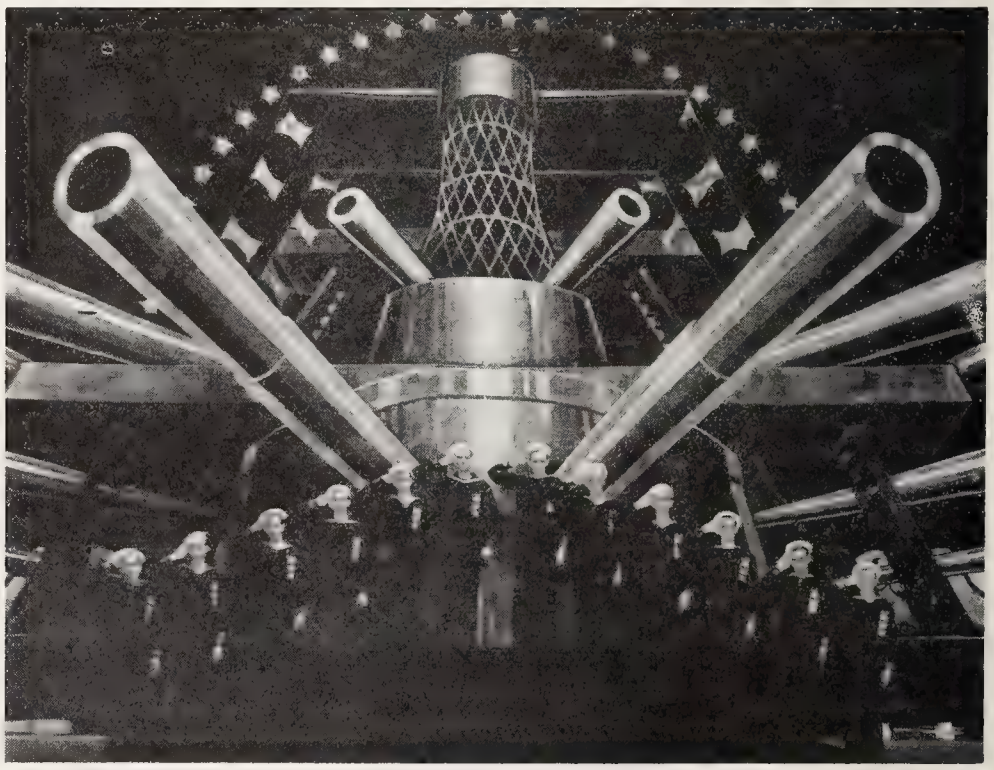
Round Table In Pictures



Eye-arresting indeed was the rain pipe scene created by Round Tabler Ralph E. Phillips for "The Rains Came" engagement at the State Theatre, in Sioux Falls, S. D. With the thermometer hovering around 96 and the sun beating down the atmospheric effect proved a natural crowd-stopper.

Conceived by W. C. Ricord, Jr., for the outer courtyard of the atmospheric Grauman's Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood was the wishing well illustrated below and constructed by the staff. In the bottom are two horseshoes with a bucket hanging above and copy reading: "Toss your coin in the horseshoe and your wish is sure to come true". "Rick" reports that in 11 days he collected $35 and a few slugs.

Dressing one of his theatre attendants in costume consisting of helmet, robe and sword, Jack Lexey, manager of the Broadway Theatre in Philadelphia planted the man atop sound truck which toured the streets as advance on "Man in the Iron Mask". Also featured prominently on the truck were scene stills, cast, and playdates. . . . Ushers at Loew's Capitol during world premiere of "Thunder Afloat" doubled in brass for stage tableaux with naval background. Ray Bell's campaign also had the staff in sailor uniform for week ahead wearing badges calling attention to the date.

Now progressively engaged in the conduct of a managers' training school for employees of the Goldstein Theatres, George Laby at the Victory Theatre, in Holyoke, Mass., points with pride to the first graduating class. In the photo above, Laby (at right) is standing with graduates W. Wernick, C. Walters and I. Miller.

On 500 merchants' doors over Labor Day weekend, Manager Wally Caldwell at Loew's Valentine in Toledo hung the cards illustrated below. Copy read: "Closed, we have all gone to see Hedy Lamarr kiss Robert Taylor in 'Lady of the Tropics' ". In addition, through tieup effected with local confectioner, Caldwell had boys on streets distributing imprinted glassine bags containing "Lamarr kisses".

For the first time in years, pickets appeared on the streets of Indianapolis, however, they were employed by Ward Farrar of Loew's to exploit "The Women". Back signs declared that the picture was "unfair to men . . . no men in picture", etc., etc.

'Thunder' Thunders In Washington As Picture Premieres

The comprehensive advance on behalf of MGM's world premiere for "Thunder Afloat" at Loew's Capitol, in Washington, D. C., was stressed by the attendance of some 400 high ranking navy guests who entered the theatre in the path made by a battery of huge army searchlights promoted by Ray Bell as a part of his campaign.

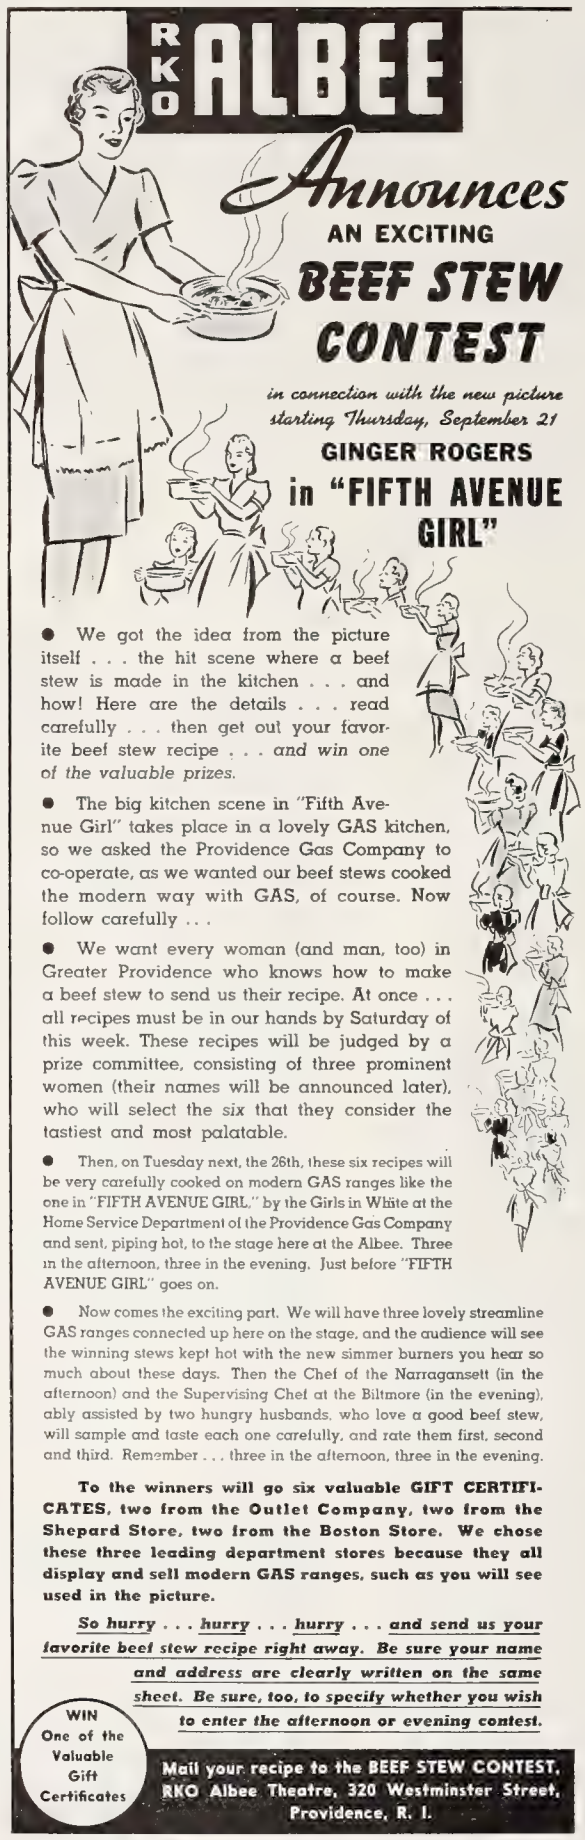
Since the picture is based on the story of actual experiences in the last World War, Ray was able to plant a number of special stories on hitherto unknown facts that actually happened. One of these was a full column citing incidents taken from the navy files. This was later blown up to a 40 by 50 and planted out front ahead and during run.

Army and Navymen Circularized

All society pages were covered on invited list, every naval officer in and near the district was informed of the date by letter, sea scouts and naval reservists were bulletinized, Federal army and naval buildings employing thousands of officers and enlisted personnel were blanketed with posters as was the army and navy club and other spots, where service men gathered.

Radio tieins included two 15-minute programs of naval and martial airs from WRC. On the same station popular woman's program announced the show ahead and reviewed the picture after opening. On WOL, another leading program tied in on seven successive mornings by relating a "Do you know that during the war" incident on which the film was based.

Newspaper contest that clicked was tied in with the Times Herald for four days in advance, inviting readers to see how many times they could write the title and star on a penny postcard. Thousands of entries were received according to Bell. Newsboys in downtown area wore aprons containing title and date and imprinted wooden blocks simulating bricks covered corner newspaper piles. Bell also planted a unique newspaper serial by promoting Ralph Wheelwright, who authored the original story and who also wrote another based on the actual feature on which the film was made, to have this run in serial form starting day after the opening.



Plants Lucky Number Contest

Public libraries distributed bookmarks in all branches, five and ten chain distributed heralds offering tickets to the premiere to holders of lucky numbers and other merchants tied in by distributing fan photos of Beery and Morris with theatre copy on back.

Announcements were carried in bulletins to employees of leading department stores and special bulletins offering passes to limited groups of employees were announced in store assemblage.

For further attention, the Round Tabler obtained the services of 75-piece police boys' band and had the theatre staff week ahead dressed in sailor uniforms, badges calling attention to the premiere, ushers also appeared on stage in a tableau as illustrated in photo section of this issue.

GOOD OLE STEW STEALS THE "SPOT"

The three-column full, reproduced above, was paid for by cooperating gas company, in addition to other elaborate advertising, to put over the sensational recipe contest credited to Bill McCort, for the date on "Fifth Avenue Girl" at the Albee, Providence, R. I. Hookup was reported as one of the most successful in local theatre-merchant exploitational promotions.

Chicago Shut-Ins Receive Flowers On Conner 'Week'

With the cooperation of his neighborhood paper and merchants as a buildup for "Invitation to Happiness," Marlowe Conner originated and successfully sponsored a community Happiness Week for the date at the Warner Rhodes, Chicago, at the same time securing an appreciable return in local goodwill.

Featured by the newspaper, the South Side Courier, was front page publicity on a tiein that allowed 25 mothers to be guests of the theatreman. This was put on through the medium of a full-page of co-op ads which stressed the offer, each ad tying in with the title, which, with the theatre and date, was given a streamer head. Coupon was included in the page to be filled out with names and addresses of interested mothers and brought to the newspaper office. Ads featured specials in each store in honor of the "Week," and merchants gave generous window space to the event with appropriate tiein copy.

Gratifying results came about through newspaper publicity and trailer requesting patrons to bring flowers with them to the theatre to be distributed among local shut-ins. Since the Rhodes is situated in a district of homes, many of which have flower gardens, the request found a ready response. Conner put out a mimeo herald, house to house, continuing the flower invitation which brought unusual response.

Old Fashioned Movie Night

Another effective idea arranged by Conner as a tiein on the March of Time short, "The Movies March On," was an old-fashioned movie night popular during the early days of the industry.

From a private collection the theatreman procured at no cost a two-reeler entitled "The Paymaster's Son," all silent, which was followed with the showing of 12 slides of the old vintage. Then presented was a "golden voiced" tenor who did an excellent job of getting the audience to join in. Pianist with a long haired wig played the whole show in old fashioned style and the closing was the fight pictures of Jack Demsey vs. Jess Willard, a reel 20 years old and all silent. Prior to the show, Conner made an announcement of what he was going to do, at the same time, comparing the present seats, decorations and cool air to that of the early theatres. Show lasted 45 minutes and was run entirely on one machine with the usual slides run while the operator changed reels.

Entire Staff Dressed for Occasion

In addition theatreman distributed old-style pluggers by a man in old-style costume; special trailer and personal announcements were used and two old-time autos were parked on the sidewalk in front of the theatre with one-sheet cards. Entire staff was made up for the occasion, box office was plastered with handbills as well as front doors, butcher boys ran up and down aisles during show and "how many please" was printed on box office. Conner reports that stories and art broke in local dailies.

Contest on Radio Features Miller's Advance on Short

Promotion effected by Manager Sidney Miller, at the Palace, in Corsicana, Texas, on behalf of the Pete Smith short, "Culinary Carving," included an unique radio contest involving the finding of a "hidden movie celebrity." Nine popular songs were played without being named, the first letters in the titles spelling "Pete Smith." Guest tickets were awarded. Spot announcements were also promoted four days ahead to supplement the contest.

Large kegs were spotted throughout the neighborhood. Tacked to each was the legend: "Don't look inside unless you want to be made happy." Upon looking inside, passersby were greeted with the message: "For a kitchen education and real fun see," etc., etc.

Local Markets Cooperate

Miller arranged window tieups with all local meat markets and grocery stores and special cards were placed on all counters. Every drug store and restaurant in the business area was contacted and arrangements made to have them distribute small cards, pierced with toothpicks, with every sandwich.

Effective was a house-to-house distribution of calling cards, one side printed: "Pete Smith—Expert on Everything"; the reverse side bore theatre copy. Heralds were circulated throughout Corsicana and surrounding communities. Small classified ads were inserted in newspaper, worded: "Lost —10 minutes of the most fun you've had, if you don't see Pete Smith's Culinary Carving." In the theatre lobby, two special set piece blowups were used for ten days in advance. On playdate they were mounted on the marquee.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Indianapolis Speedway" Tied To N. Y. State Fair by McGee

Highlight of Pat McGee's "Indianapolis Speedway" opening at Schine's Paramount Theatre, in Syracuse, was tiein with the New York State Fair. Through the cooperation of the local police department, the Round Tabler secured permission to place 100 standards on prominent street corners. Waist-high and double-faced, these cards bore copy reading, "State Fair Visitors, cross on green lights only, Syracuse streets are not as dangerous as 'Indianapolis Speedway,' but don't take chances. Get your thrills by seeing," etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Joiner Offers Cash Award On "Mr. Chips" Street Bally

Much was made locally over the nine day search for "Mr. Chips" on the streets of Vancouver, all because of Maynard Joiner's contest planted in the Sun as part of his exploitation on that picture at the Capitol Theatre. A cash prize of $50 was awarded to the person recognizing the well-known character as he wended his way about the city. Cooperating paper ran front page stories under a Chips byline gently ribbing the public, the phantom going so far as to describe the various people he had accosted for directions to some store and teasing them over the fact that they had let $50 slip through their fingers by not recognizing him.

Another highlight of Joiner's campaign was a "Mr. Chips" handicap which was run at local track. Purse was presented by wife of well-known golf champion, which brought additional story and art work in the local dailies.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Merchants Salute Youth

In connection with his showing of "Young Mr. Lincoln" at the State Theatre in Greenville, Ohio, Round Tabler Jim Diller promoted local merchants for a full co-op page addressed to the youth of the city and carrying a box in the center of the page on the Mayor's proclamation. Screenings were held for special groups; large American flag was displayed ahead and during run, and for his lobby stunt Diller used an old rail with an ax sunk in it, tiein card prominently displayed.

ONE MORE PERIOD

The Fifth Fortnight of the Third Quarter sees 42 entrants selected for the preliminary honors, as listed below. Spurred on by the desire for top consideration in the voting for the Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations, the record number compares favorably with previous highs as Round Tablers continue to forward material for the Sixth and last Fortnight, which marks the end of the Quarter, on October 14th.

Winners Announced In "Arden" Contest

The Ward Baking Company has selected four exhibitors as winners of fifty dollar prizes for the best displays created in connection with the showing of "Jane Arden."

The winners are: H. C. Rhyan of the Times Theatre, Waukegan, Ill.; Ben Greenberg of the Stadium, Woonsocket, R. I.; Julius Lamm of the Uptown, Cleveland, and J. B. Shuman of the Empress, in Jacksonville, Fla. Prizes were awarded for the best displays combining the film, comic strip and radio character of Jane Arden in conjunction with the Ward products.

Campbell Utilizes Window

With an empty lot adjacent to his theatre, Jack Campbell of the Capitol in Brampton, Ontario, sold the owner on the idea of permitting him to erect four six-foot sticks on tops of which were arrows. Copy on signs called attention to his current picture, playdates, etc., and with each change of show, Jack changes his copy accordingly.

FOOTBALL EXPLOITATIONS PILE UP AS MEMBERS ARRANGE CAMPAIGNS

Further Pigskin Tieins Set by Round Tablers Indicate Full Promotion Coverage; Schools and Merchants To Cooperate

The increasing importance of football as community entertainment continues to be recognized by theatremen in pointing their immediate Fall campaigns to share in the gridiron-game popularity. According to the added reports from the field, set down on this page, members are reaching out for new slants as well as polishing the old reliables which have served well before.

In their own words, as follows, more of the boys tell what they are arranging, as Jim Redmond writes, "to keep our local fans interested in our theatre as well as a winning team."

Suggests Giant Banner For Showing at Games

by FRANCIS GOOCH

Uptown, Bath, Me.

Schedule of all games played by the high school with space for results of each game is already at the printer's. This has adequate copy above and below the schedule for our benefit. 1,000 of these are distributed.

Student "Football Night" will be held on the eve of the big game of the season with both opposing and home team and coaches as invited guests and speakers representing each team on the stage for short pep talks. This is tentative, but has been done before by us and no doubt will go through.

We have an idea for a banner which we may try here but possibly may prove too expensive. We think it a good idea but probably needs more potential spectators than our games draw. The idea is to get a ten foot by three foot silk banner in the school colors with copy as follows: After we "BEAT BRUNSWICK" lets go see "THE STAR MAKER" at the UPTOWN. The italicised letters, of course, would be featured and we would have three boys carry this banner to the game, parade it at the half and carry it in the "victory" parade afterwards.

For the past several years we have been invited to attend and address a rally at the high school and we probably will be invited again this year. This is good indirect publicity for the theatre, although we of course cannot plug attractions. We are working to secure a P. A. system to announce play-by-play descriptions of the home games this year.

Competitive Cheering Marks Weekly Football Nights

by WALLY CALDWELL

Loew's Valentine, Toledo, O.

Replying to your wire wish to advise the following is tentative schedule we have lined up for football season:

Mascot at games (Leo The Lion). Candy kisses in imprinted glassine bags distributed at games. Trophy to best player or team for season. Schedules of games on imprinted cardboard footballs.

Football night at theatre every Monday with competitive cheering of two teams on one of the nights plus newsreel pictures of local teams weekly.

CAMPAIGNS FEATURE "WOMEN" SUPPLEMENTS

Elaborate newspaper sections having exclusively to do with fashions, beauty columns, etc., for the attention of the distaff side, are noticeably prominent in current campaigns for "The Women". From Harrisburg, Pa., Sam Gilman reports an eight-page supplement in the Herald, for the date at Loew's, a first-time for such newspaper promotion locally. It's a great job of work for which Gilman and the daily staff take bows.

Similar effort, a four-pager, was effected for the date at the RKO Albee, Cincinnati, with the Times - Star, through the planning of "Dinny" Dinerman, RKO divisional ad head. In both instances, sections brought unusual and deserved returns.

Georgia University Officials To Cooperate with Theatres

by MOON CORKER

L. & J. City Manager, Athens, Ga.

We will continue our tieups with the University of Georgia on home games as we have for several years back. The University officials and student body have always cooperated with the theatres one hundred per cent. During football games we have always placed banners on current and coming attractions on the fence near all entrances and exit gates—have students to carry banners, sandwich boards and placards during the parade through the city streets and onto the field and distribute circulars on the exit gates.

On home games we find it profitable to use street ballyboo on eve and day of the game. An early morning show helps, for there are many people looking for something to pass away time before the game. Cheer leaders at the ball games are always glad to make any announcements we ask them through their P. A. system.

When games are played on foreign fields we advertise that results will be given quarterly, thus many students and citizens who would have remained at home by their radios come to the show and follow the game at the same time. Varsity lettermen are given one show a week at our theatres, courtesy of the management. This creates abundance of goodwill.

Players' Window Contest Planned with Newspaper

by FRANK MURPHY

Loew's State, Syracuse, N. Y.

We herewith submit tentative plans for football tie ups during the fall season in Syracuse:

Two football nights, both carried out along same plans with college team for one and outstanding high school team for the other. Team will be theatre guests and an impromptu program of cheers and sings with cheer leaders officiating will be worked out. Souvenirs to be promoted. This will be a direct ticket selling stunt.

Distribution of megaphones at the big game of the season on cooperative basis, with merchants sharing in the cost. Distribution is handled by college ushers giving thorough stadium coverage.

Players To Review Pictures

During the season football game tickets will be offered as prizes for one of our newspaper contests. This will be tied up through business manager of college football team. We will plan to use at one of big games a stadium ballyhoo on one of our important pictures between halves.

We plan to work out a window contest through one of the newspapers using one picture of each player in each window. Contestants will have to identify the player and name the window where his picture is displayed. This will be a direct tieup in the newspaper with cash and theatre ticket awards for a certain picture for the first ten correct listings submitted.

Via a committee of judges we will award a cup to an outstanding player at one game. The cup to be named for a current star or picture title. This will net both game publicity and newspaper breaks for us.

A radio interview, on promoted time, will be developed, using several of the college football stars in an open forum-plan to discuss a controversial question concerning one of our pictures.

We plan to have the first string squad of football players review a picture—their reviews to be featured in newspaper that week instead of regular critic's.

Footage Taken by Schools To Be Shown at Theatre

by GEORGE LIMERICK

Aztec, Enid, Oklahoma

Football window cards will be used on all home games. These cards give the game at the top and plug the picture at the bottom. The entire cost of cards is to be borne by the theatre, with the school placing them in locations that would be very difficult for the theatre to get without giving several comps. Three sheet boards will be placed on the inside of each entrance at the football stadium for exchange of window cards mentioned above. During the half, at home games, we plan to hold a drawing for sev-

PAST "FORTNIGHT" EXPLOITATIONS

Veach's "Hardy" Float Crashes Centennial Celebration Parade

With the whole town of Uhrichsville, Ohio, turning out to attend a centennial celebration parade, Manager A. K. Veach at the State Theatre crashed in with his decorative float on "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever." While no prizes were awarded, the theatreman forwards newspaper clippings to substantiate the fact that his entry was considered best. In addition to the above, 20 boys on bikes were scattered throughout the line of march, each carrying back banner with appropriate tiein copy.

Bathing Beauty Contest Tied to "Maisie" by Rogers

In an effort to select "Miss Long Island of 1939" Tom Rogers for the opening of "Maisie" at Loew's Valencia, in Jamaica, staged a bathing beauty contest on his stage. Every beach and pool on the Island carried signs and applications, with several of the pools holding their own contest, with winners and runnersup sent to the Valencia. Additional publicity was garnered through the presentation by N. T. G. of a loving cup to the winner. As a special ballyhoo stunt girls dressed in white bathing suits rode about town in an open bannered car.

McCoy Secures Mayor's Cooperation On Local "Leading Citizen" Day

Through the cooperation of local newspaper and the Mayor of Athens, Ga., P. E. McCoy at the Georgia for 'Our Leading Citizen" put over an effective gag contest for the two day engagement. Going through the mat morgue, a careful selection was made of actors and actresses which in some manner bore resemblance to some prominent localite. A total of six two and one column cuts with face or forehead carefully blanked out were run with copy reading, "Who is Athens' leading citizen?" with cut lines "Is he a doctor, lawyer?", "Is she a school teacher, civic leader?" etc., etc. These appeared over a seven day period with guest tickets to the 25 best answers.

On opening day, art on Bob Burns appeared along with the Mayor's proclamation acclaiming Bob as Athens' Leading Citizen and designating the two days during run of picture as "Our Leading Citizen" day.

Corker's "Oz" Characters Tied to Local Circus

On opening day of "Wizard of Oz," City Manager Moon Corker, for that date at the Palace, in Athens, Ga., dressed two of his staff as the Tin Man and the Scarecrow, both appropriately bannered covered main streets distributing heralds. As another gesture, cooperation was secured from the management of a circus in town on picture's opening day, for the two characters to follow the clowns around the rings during the performances.

Attractive lobby display was created for the engagement consisting of giant cutouts of the various characters in the picture, which were spotted strategically three weeks ahead and during run.

WARNER PICTURE TIED TO PARENTHOOD WEEK

Featured exploitation arranged by the Warner Brothers press book department for "A Child Is Born" ties in with National Parenthood Week, sponsored by Parents' Magazine, starting October 23, during which period film is expected to have its greatest number of showings.

Campaign devotes a full page to promotion of a local Baby Week with layout for co-op page and co-op herald. Also stressed is a tiein to honor local doctor who has done the most for motherhood. Publicity is topped with picture layout, entitled "Twenty Babies in a Movie", available in mat form for newspapers and broadsides.

Newspaper Contests Highlight Lampe's "Name Only" Campaign

For a reported first time in six months, Gus Lampe for the date of "In Name Only" at the Keith Theatre in Syracuse, broke down the resistance of the local dailies and succeeded in planting two contests in advance of that picture's opening. First tieup was with the Herald Journal whereby a two weeks' vacation trip, all expenses paid, was offered in connection with a classified ad contest, readers being required to check through ads, find scattered letters which spelled out the stars' and pictures' names, correctly assemble them and submit to contest editor. Guest tickets went to runnersup. Second contest in the Post-Standard was in limerick form; cash and guest tickets were awarded here, too.

Stations WFBL and WSYR were tied in, and the three largest stores in town came through with elaborate window displays and appropriate picture copy. Newspapers were generous with stories and art work.

Local Airport Aids Stewart In Search for Lost Airplane

When a Framingham, Mass., youth recently lost one of his miniature airplanes preparatory to a special flight from the local airport and offered a cash award for its return, Manager Bernard Stewart of the Gorman Theatre, searching for some unusual pictures for his lobby display on "S.O.S. Tidal Wave," sold the airport officials on the idea of finding the plane with a telephoto camera.

Airport loaned the theatreman a ship on which they permitted him to imprint title letters and Stewart further contacted cameraman from daily newspaper for human interest stories and pictures. Using a telephoto camera with infra-red film to photograph from the air the area where the miniature plane was supposed to have fallen on a trial flight, the plane was recovered. Stunt was built up into front page stories in all of which the film got prominent mention, as did Stewart's unique lobby display.

Bell Gives Glenn Miller Band Well Rounded Radio Campaign

For the personal appearance of Glenn Miller and his band at Loew's State, in Washington, publicist Ray Bell succeeded for seven days ahead in landing four of the maestro's recordings on each midnight program of WRC's "Night Watchman" program, this also included a late interview with the star. Station WMAL also featured two 15-minute recording periods. Another highlight was program dedicated to the Naval Academy, over which nothing but Glenn Miller recordings were played, with due credit given his appearance at Loew's. Mary Mason, who broadcasts a daily half-hour woman's program, interviewed Miller two days ahead of opening and she, too, played recordings and gave free plugs.

All jitterbug outlets were circularized by Bell, cooperating stores carried window displays offering autographed photos.

"If Thanksgiving Is November 23rd, When Is Christmas?" Ask Mendenhall

To sell his coming attractions at the Pinney Theatre, in Boise, Idaho, Manager J. R. Mendenhall ran a series of teaser ads in his local dailies, in addition to 12 radio announcements worded: "If Thanksgiving Is November 23d, when is Christmas?", and spotted to the tune of "Jingle Bells." For his street bally, man dressed as Santa drove about town in bannered miniature automobile reading: "F. D. R. says Thanksgiving Day is November 23d, so we say Christmas is now, bringing you these movie hits," etc., etc. Teaser newspaper campaign which started with a one inch ad wound up with a full four column spread with the Christmas holiday spirit carried out.

Mendenhall further credits Boyd Braithwaite and Nevin McCord with the execution of the idea.

Local Grocers Aid Phillips On "Culinary Carving" Short

An advance screening of the Pete Smith short, "Culinary Carving," was held for local marketmen by Manager Ralph E. Phillips at the State Theatre, in Sioux Falls, S. D. Four days in advance of opening, small tickets calling attention to the short were distributed to all leading markets, with the result that all meat packages leaving the cooperating stores took Phillips' picture message into the homes. Also promoted by the theatreman was plug over the radio program of a local packing plant.

Deering Garners Three Full Pages In Local Dailies on New Season

Francis Deering of Loew's Theatre, in Houston, Texas, started off his New Season by crashing the three local papers with as many full pages. Papers of course carried the theatreman's good sized ads, but the balance of the pages were chock full of attractive layouts and stories on the forthcoming attractions. Banner line across top of each page read: "Lady of the Tropics opens the new 1939-40 Movie Season at Loew's State."

eral free tickets and at the same time plug the picture the winners will get to see.

Announcements are always made during assembly, giving date and time of game. Arrangements will be made to plug the free tickets given away by the theatres. The school will be notified, that every game the team wins, the players are to be our guests at some night during the week as specified.

At the end of each football season, sweaters are presented to the deserving players of the team during assembly. An attempt will be made to duplicate this on our stage in addition to the theatre presenting them with a silver cup.

Many schools, that are really football minded, have cameramen on the field taking highlights of the game. These pictures are used at a later date by the school to show the players their mistakes, and how they can correct same. These prints will be rented from the school at a small fee, while still hot, and shown at the theatre.

In keeping with football pictures we show during the season, football regalia will be borrowed from the school, to be displayed as advance advertising, and currently to be used as a front. Goal posts will be erected in the "No Parking Zone."

Annual Award by Theatre Found Ace Gross Builder

by JIMMIE REDMOND
Bonham, Fairbury, Neb.

Our local high school football team looks like a seven or eight game winner this year, so we will have to do a great deal to keep our local fans interested in our theatre as well as a winning team.

One thing I am certain we will do this year, as it proved one of our greatest ideas last year, and that is to send a representative to every out of town game the team plays and this representative will call us the score of the game each quarter, we in turn get it on our screen at once. Last year our out of town games drew many an extra patron to the show because of this stunt. Games played at home are covered the same way with flashes placed on the screen of every score made.

Another deal we will put over is our THIRD ANNUAL FOOTBALL TROPHY AWARD. This award goes to the best line man and to the best backfield man on the team. Awards are usually made the Friday following Thanksgiving and we dedicate the evening to the entire team, coaches, and cheer leaders. The public picks the winners by ballot, with the winners being presented from the stage. Last year our Friday night business was more than doubled by the stunt.

I am sure that we will use many other small tie ups as the season progresses, such as a benefit show for the players whereby the team can buy their letters and sweaters from the funds they receive from the show. When this idea is carried out the entire school gets out and sells tickets and we usually get more than our share of extra business.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

FIFTY YEARS AGO this week the motion picture became a fact before the eyes of Thomas A. Edison. He, then and there, October 6, 1889, in Room 5 of his laboratories at West Orange, New Jersey, delivered the concept of the living picture from its reluctant gestations in a century of faltering experimentation. He was, in the meaning of the word to the generality of people, the inventor, and the motion picture was an invention of revolutionary import.

The motion picture then was but an amoeba among the arts.

Nothing important to the world was to appear about and by and through the films for yet many a year. It had a long road ahead to becoming the dominant, all-pervading amusement vehicle for the world.

Most of today's masters of the movies, if there are any, were either in their childhood or being born. They were little boys, with wide, questioning, and often troubled, eyes in the Crimea, in Poland, in London's Whitechapel, Galatia, Hungary, Paris, Pittsburgh, New Orleans, Chicago, and New York.

THERE were that day only two men in the world, of meaning to the motion picture, who had any idea of what they were doing or where they were going—Thomas A. Edison, maker of the machine, and George Eastman, maker of the material.

Half a century later, it is to be said that one of them, against the years, won the greatest fame, and that the other, far less a patron of fame, by fidelity to a product, won fortune beyond all of the users of his film wares taken together.

Let us, without too much searching for significance, look, for the moment, into the world into which the film was born—the world of the autumn of 1889.

In these United States, General Benjamin Harrison of Indiana was President. One-third of the population of the United States was of foreign-born parentage. There were four million Germans in the Middle West, three hundred and odd thousand Scandinavians in the Northwest, and immigration was at its flood.

America was dreadfully worried about foreign relations and James G. Blaine, the Hull of his time, was busy about South American trade. The prior Cleveland, and Democratic, administration had wound up with the national revenues at ten million dollars a year greater than expenditures. With Matt Quay of Pennsylvania and Tom Platt of New York doing the election spending, General Harrison went in and the spending in Washington soon caught up with the revenues. The McKinley high protective tariffs were enacted. Sugar went on the free list and American sugar planters got a ten-million-dollar-a-year compensation. Big business, led by the Standard Oil Trust, formed in 1882, was romping forward so fast that that same Republican administration passed the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Geronimo had just been captured and Sitting Bull was still negotiating with the government up in the Dakotas.

It was the year of the Oklahoma land rush.

OVER in Germany the new Kaiser, Wilhelm II, was getting rid of his father's minister, Prince Otto von Bismarck, and adopting the policy that was to bring the First World War—and today's World War II. Bismarck had just completed for Germany his "Reinsurance Treaty" with Russia which agreed to stay neutral if France should attack the Germans. The partition of Africa was in progress.

Victoria, the Empress of Britain and India, was in her glorious sunset years, with yet no sign of Socialism in her domain, and imperialism marching on. Herbert Kitchener was a cavalry officer in Egypt, and a young writer by the name of Rudyard Kipling, then 24 years old, was leaving India on a flush of fame from his "Plain Tales from the Hills."

IT was a sunny Sunday October forenoon, when Mr. Edison came ashore from the S. S. Burgoyne. He had been away to an exposition in Paris where there had been much showmanship pertaining to the electric light. He had a merry word of greeting to the ships' news reporters and made some irreverent comment on the cost of "old masters" in Europe, which he did not think were priced on their pictorial merits. He did not, note you, seek attention for his electric light—nor did he mention that he was at that very moment on his way to a preview.

Let us dally a moment with the fact that for the first, and probably the last, time on earth, a producer had opportunity to say that he was about to unveil the greatest motion picture ever made, and prove it. It was a sneak preview—and the first.

There was a delegation of "the boys" from the plant, even as now, to tell him how good they were and what terrific things they had done while he was away. Among them this Sunday morning was Mr. William Kennedy Laurie Dickson, laboratory assistant, who had been working out, in Room 5, the details on the picture machine job, applying, since late August, the newly available roller photography material from George Eastman, and which Edison had named "film", to the machinery they had been building since 1887. It was quite a while between the time that Mr. Edison had decided to make a machine that would really move pictures and the time that he got it—but not nearly so long nor so costly as many a picture project, like, say, "Gone with the Wind". It cost, by some rather good accounting, about $24,000 for the West Orange plant under Edison to deliver the motion picture—or about as much as the option on a story that somebody might have wanted the other day.

Mr. Dickson led, and pushed, Mr. Edison into Room 5, and asked him to lean over the busy black box that was Kinetoscope No. 1. There, under the aperture, with a considerable buzzing of the machinery, he saw a picture of Mr. Dickson lifting his hat.

FOR the information of technicians, it was a continuously running film, printed from a negative making forty-eight exposures a second, viewed through a magnifying glass, illuminated by an incandescent lamp and transmitted to the eye through a revolving multi-blade shutter. It had extremely low light efficiency. It had "drag" and "pull" and several kinds of aberrations.

Mr. Edison knew it. He said something like "Umph" and went home to dinner.

For two years the machine stood, gathering dust, in a corner of Mr. Edison's library. He was not very proud of his motion pictures. He refused to spend $150 to patent the machine and the notion in Europe. Important things in the great world of industry interested him more.

In 1891 came a promoter, who wanted to show it at the Chicago World's Fair in 1892. The fair did not open until '93, but, even so, the Edison plant had no machines ready until 1894, after the fair had closed —so the Kinetoscope, a peep show, had its world premiere April 14, 1894, at 1155 Broadway in New York.

After that came the screen, many lawsuits, and a great industry, with both the lawsuits and the pictures getting bigger and better, year by year.

Unions and Guilds

Actual negotiations of the new hours and working conditions under the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees closed shop contract which gave 12,000 studio technicians and workers a 10 per cent wage increase two weeks ago will mark time pending a survey by major producers of possible changes in production methods.

In announcing the obtaining of a 10 per cent wage increase, William Bioff, chairman of the IATSE negotiating committee, said that producers had agreed to open conferences in about four weeks.

Studio managers met Tuesday with Pat Casey and Victor Clarke, producer labor contact officers, on labor matters, including a demand for a 15 per cent increase for members of the Moving Picture Painters Local 644, made Monday night by Herbert Sorrell, business representative. The deadline is October 16th.

Howard Robertson, president of the United Studio Technicians Guild, and other members of the Guild, filed a National Labor Relations Board petition Monday, charging that the election which established the IATSE as the studio bargaining agency is invalid because producers allegedly financed the Alliance.

A shakeup in the Hollywood offices of the Labor Board Tuesday resulted in the transfer of several field examiners including chief field examiner William Pomerance.

Pat Casey, producer labor contact officer, said Tuesday he would meet with a committee of International Alliance newsreel cameramen and William Bioff, IA leader, for negotiations over a 25 per cent wage increase sought by workers.

The new contract between the Screen Publicists' Guild and the studios goes into effect Monday, October 9th; with senior members of the Guild drawing a minimum of $100 a week, and junior members $50. The agreement also calls for preferential hiring of Guild members from a list of those unemployed.

For other union activities see page 52.

New Trouble

Business practices of foreign, particularly French, producers, whereby they allow several individuals the rights to sell their pictures in North and Latin America, is resulting in widening confusion, it is understood. American distributors, in many cases, finding that films to which they were given the rights in certain Latin American territories, have already been sold in those territories, by others, here and in Latin America, to whom the same rights were given.

A corollary development has been the piracy of prints; their duplication in certain Southern cities; and their shipment, directly and indirectly, to unauthorized Latin American distributors.

The Code Again

The almost dead trade practice code, which brought bitter dissension among many exhibitor units, causing the expulsion of the New York Allied by the National Allied, this week seemed to have indirectly caused a split in the New York Allied itself. A "rump" organization, headed by New York Allied's former executive secretary, E. Thornton Kelly, met in Syracuse this Tuesday, with the blessing and attendance of national and regional Allied leaders. The meeting was to form another New York Allied which would affiliate with the national association.

The report is on page 54.

Hummel and Morris

Joseph S. Hummel, for 15 years an assistant to Sam E. Morris, foreign distribution manager for Warner Brothers, this week succeeded his chief in that post. Mr. Morris retired because of illness.

The new Warner foreign chief is a New York City product. He started in the industry as a messenger for the VSLE studio in Brooklyn, in 1916. He has been, successively, auditor for Vitagraph; assistant to the general sales manager, Warners; eastern division manager, Warners; supervisor of exchanges, Warners; foreign sales executive. He is 41.

World's Series

With the start of the World Series, Wednesday, between the American League's champion New York Yankees and the National League's winning Cincinnati Reds, at the Yankee Stadium in New York, the newsreels will provide their most elaborate coverage to date for the sporting final of the national pastime.

The technique used by each of the five newsreels, evolved from the football coverage of last Fall, involves use of a fast 21 inch lens developed during the past few years. With this lens, it is hoped to follow the ball during an entire play.

Paramount News is using 16 men, including all runners and the like, with other reels using a proportionate number; while all are paying for box seats for further coverage in addition to the locations assigned them.

The main advantage of the 21 inch lens, it is pointed out, is its speed; even larger lenses having proved practicable, with Paramount using a 40 inch lens in England.

That Ticket Code

A survey of the legitimate theatre ticket code situation completed recently by Alfred Harding of the Actors' Equity staff has resulted in recommendations that Equity renew the code with the League of New York Theatres, representing stage producers, for another year, providing that provisions be made to enforce the code more strictly.

This was made known at the first quarterly meeting of Equity last Friday in New York; with the Equity council to consider the matter this week.

The current agreement between Equity and the League as to working conditions, and the ticket code are each dependent upon the continuation of the other, with the current agreement due to expire November 1st. Equity will decide whether the agreement will continue or fresh terms be offered.

At Friday's meeting, consideration was also given the agency and personal representative problems, and Frank Gillmore, president of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, said that the "one big union" plan was under consideration.

War Effects

An industry average of 19 per cent of the total gross revenues of the American film companies is affected directly by the European war, a questioning of their foreign managers and a survey of the companies' last annual financial statements discloses this week. The figures are average; they vary greatly in some companies. Foreign executives generally agree that from 35 to 40 per cent of the total gross comes from the foreign markets.

Statistics and review on page 28.

An Echo

Out of the dark, confusing days of sound's first application to the motion picture screen, when small sound manufacturers and patentees were attacking the "big electrics," the "big patent pools" on all sides, came an echo this week to the biggest of the fights between minority and major interests in that field, with an understanding reached between Electrical Research Products and its parent Telephone Company with M. A. Schlesinger, of the South African Schlesingers and his General Talking Pictures, which had sued the electrics for allegedly infringing some sound patents of the old DeForest devices, purchased by the Schlesingers, and for monopoly in the field.

"Discussions of a most friendly nature pointing toward settlement" have been proceeding, reaching the position Tuesday where an understanding had been reached, resulting, according to spokesmen, "in the belief that the matter will soon reach a happy conclusion."

Chile and Treaties

Chile, a country from which the American film companies have found it almost impossible to withdraw money in recent years, may soon negotiate a reciprocal trade treaty with this country, according to Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State. The treaty may help Chile's exchange situation, including films. Under its proposed terms, the U. S. Export-Import Bank would advance $5,000,000 to the country, to facilitate commercial transactions.

ENTERTAINMENT vs. WAR

PART I

HERE and in the next issue, Motion Picture Herald engages in examination of the reaction of the institution of the motion picture and its amusement seeking public in a world under the stresses of war.

Turning the pages of experience and performance across the years from the autumn of 1914 through America's period of participation, it becomes immediately obvious that the quest for entertainment was a quest for diversion, relief—"escape" if you please, to use that word of hissing that leftist criticism has been enjoying while trying to drive the theatre screen into the service of special causes.

Few War Films at Start

The early years of the war, prior to America's entry, found the screen's offerings with less than 10 per cent of war coloration, more nearly five per cent in the beginning.

There were scattering war films, such as those produced by The Chicago Tribune, with success in certain metropolitan centers, in the first year—and the newsreels, which incidentally enjoyed no special uplift in distribution by reason of war interest.

America's entry quickened war interest on a rising curve, reaching, however, at its extreme peak hardly more than twenty-five per cent. And it is to be remembered that the Armistice brought something of a debacle to a considerable war picture inventory.

A Stage Parallel

A parallel showing is made by the records of the stage for the same period—presented in these pages, too, because today the screen may fairly be said to have in a large sense taken over substantially all of the audience that was in 1915 especially a stage audience.

For kindred reasons, the next installment of this study will cover the related fields of vaudeville, popular music and best selling entertainment books.

The array of pictures listed represents approximately the two hundred topmost productions of the period. The selection has been based on the booking records of the three most conspicuous and independent theatres of the period. The Strand, the Rialto and the Rivoli, in Broadway, and upon the records of the five principal motion picture corporations active in the period, together with contributions from the archives and memories of leading showmen. It is not contended that the listing is exhaustive, that every successful picture of the period is recorded. Many titles will occur to readers of long experience, "Damaged Goods" with Richard Bennett, a state's rights release, is an example. Such items do not, however, affect the pattern.

There has been no endeavor to set up comparisons on a dollar basis, chiefly because in the swiftly changing status of producers and distribution performance in those formative years the dollar showings would not reflect public interest and acceptance.

Apart from the subject of immediate inquiry, the nature of the war time emotional demand, there is also value in these listings as showing the stuff with which the motion picture grew great—its diversity of appeals, but all basically romance, glamour, and often merriment.

It was, remember, the period in which the feature picture became so overwhelmingly dominant, but also the period of the greatest glory in short products, with Charles Chaplin in two-reelers overshadowing features on metropolitan billings the week of release, magnificently successful Mack Sennett comedies and a successful presentation of imposing scenic one-reel pictures in the better houses. In that period, too, under the leadership of Samuel L. Rothafel and Hugo Riesenfeld, music, great organs and large orchestras became important program factors in the motion picture theatre—another element which, along with the stage and vaudeville, has so largely been taken over by the comprehensive instrument of the sound picture.

It seems all to add up to the finding that the war was grim business—and that entertainment reposed in the concerns of living rather than killing and dying.—Terry Ramsaye.

War Films Rare at First

THAT the American public did not want its film entertainment to reflect world conditions during the last World War is indicated by the record of the outstanding motion pictures during that period. Of 188 films named by five distributors as their most successful during the war days, 48, or 26 per cent, treated of war, with 37, or 20 per cent, having themes based on the World War, the other 11 being variously about the American Civil War, insurrection in India, and the like.

There was, of course, no radio at the time to provide the public with the intensive coverage of war news which now prevails.

The entry of the United States into the last war was the signal for the output of most of the war films. Among the outstanding pictures listed by the present corporate management of the then Fox Film Corporation, Universal, Metro, Paramount and Goldwyn organizations, there are but two war subjects in the 1914–15 period, both about the Civil War, none at all in 1915–16 and eight in 1916–17, of which only six were about the contemporary conflict.

However, in 1917–18—America had entered the War in April of 1917—there were 23 war films, 26 per cent of the total of 89 listed as most outstanding in the period. Of these, three were not about the World War, and one was a burlesque of serious war films.

In 1918, from September through December, the proportion rose even higher; there were 15 war pictures among the 35 listed, or 43 per cent of the total for that period. Of these, there were two burlesques of spy activities and one film based on the Mexican insurrection.

In 1918, also, the United States Government had released through the exchanges of the World Film Corporation a war film called "America's Answer", described as "the official war pictures from the battlefields of Europe". The Division of Films of the Government's Committee on Public Information, propaganda bureau and contact between the Government and the press in the war, handled the film; George Creel was chairman of the Committee and Charles S. Hart director of the Film Division.

Although war pictures moved forward in popularity after the entry of this country into the War, it is pointed out that it took years after the end of the War before the tremendous successes of such pictures as "The Big Parade", released in 1925, or "All Quiet on the Western Front", released in 1930.

Saul Rogers, general counsel and a member of the board of the former Fox Company from its inception in 1915, notes that it was not until after the mid-1920's that the company started making its biggest war pictures, such as "What Price Glory" in 1926, "Four Sons" in 1928, and "The Cockeyed World" in 1929.

Such theatremen as Walter Vincent of the Wilmer & Vincent Circuit say that war pictures do not constitute the best medium of entertainment during war times, typically, while Spyros Skouras of National Theatres emphasizes the lack of outstanding war pictures prior to America's declaration of war in 1917.

Pictures included among the top box-office attractions of the Paramount, Universal, Fox, Metro and Goldwyn companies during the five-year period of the last World War are tabulated below, with story outlines, directors, stars, producing-distributing companies and release dates.

Those marked by an asterisk and in color are war films; the letters "F" and "D" after the release date refer to foreign and domestic, and signify that the film was a success abroad, or abroad and in the domestic market, the foreign market having special reference to England. When not marked, films are listed as successful in the domestic market.

STRAND THEATRE LISTS TOP FILMS

The Strand Theatre in New York, which during the last World War was known as the Mark Strand, for Moe Mark, its president and general manager, opened it to Broadway in April, 1914, with "The Spoilers," starring Kathlyn Williams and Bessie Eyton. This was characterized as an outstanding success at the house, which booked the typical better-grade product, as a member of the unaffiliated Mark Strand theatre group.

Many outstandingly successful pictures were shown there during the war period, including the product of many independent distributors.

In 1914-15 the best grossers, it was recalled, were "Brewster's Millions," "The Sea Wolf," "Man on the Box," "Rose of the Rancho," "Girl of the Golden West," "The Dictator," "The Goose Girl," "Are You a Mason," "Poor Schmalty," "The Cheat." All these were exhibited in 1914-1915.

Among the outstanding in the 1915-1916 season were "Madame Butterfly," "The Cheat," "The Immigrant," "Tess of the Storm Country" and "Hulda of Holland."

In 1916-1917 top rankers included "The Parson of Panamint," "Freckles" and "Mysterious Miss Terry"; while in 1917-18 came "Polly of the Circus," "Thais," "Raffles" and "My Four Years in Germany," which Mark M. Dintenfass made in conjunction with Warners from Ambassador James W. Gerard's book.

In 1918-19 came such successes as "Shoulder Arms," "Virtuous Wives," "The Better 'Ole," "The Girl Who Stayed at Home," "Daddy Longlegs" and "Upstairs."

VINCENT SEES WAR FILMS "TOO CLOSE TO REALITY"

"A generally accepted axiom of the theatre is that if an event is current it is too close to people for entertainment purposes," according to Walter Vincent, vice-president of the Wilmer and Vincent Circuit. Mr. Vincent, referring to war films during war times, said that the newsreels, with their records of distress and disaster, are generally enough, coupled with radio coverage, to give the public its fill of contemporary history.

"During the last war," said Mr. Vincent, "people wanted to go to the theatre and be in the land of make-believe."

WARTIME STAGE PARALLELS FILMS

Long Run Plays Listed

THE Broadway stage, leading barometer at that time of the public's taste in theatrical entertainment, showed during the first two years of the World War the effect of the conflict upon Americans who, although not yet involved, faced an ever-increasing prospect of that eventuality. Will Rogers made his first hit in the Shubert summer revue, "Hands Up", and later in the Ziegfeld "Midnight Frolics". There were many revivals of previously popular plays, including a series of Shakespearian performances by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, famous English actor.

The season of 1916–1917 opened when the outlook for world peace was darkest. Most of the foreign playwrights who had contributed many previous hits were at the front or otherwise engaged in war activities, and native writers and actors came to the fore. Conceded the best play of the season, although it broke no box-office records, was "Good Gracious Annabelle", a light, sophisticated comedy of manners.

In 1917 America was at war and the stage reflected a corresponding uncertainty. War plays, soldier and sailor revues, monster benefits and recruiting plays were impressive. Hartley Manners' war play "Out There" made $630,000 on the road.

This spirit reached a climax at the opening of the 1918–1919 season, the United States' year of greatest sacrifice. There were dark days and nights when the Times Square lights were put out to save power. The theatre offered smiling faces, raised over $50,000,000 in the sale of war bonds and many additional millions with innumerable benefits. The morale of the nation was partly in the theatre's keeping. There were, of course, many war plays, "Friendly Enemies" with its comedy overlay; "Under Orders", "The Better 'Ole" and "Where Poppies Bloom" prominent among them.

In the following listing of plays of more than 250 performances in 1914–1918, those definitely of a war character are denoted by asterisks and color:

Special M-G-M Flash!

"THUNDER AFLOAT" climbed into the Big Hit class. (Typical reports are Flint and Bay City, Michigan, a few dollars less than "Boys Town" and Kalamazoo which beat "Boys Town.") Theatres are stressing timely angle of submarine warfare and how the U-boats are destroyed! Wallace Beery's role best since "Hell Divers" mixing comedy and thrills. Don't spare the big guns in promoting this show. It's profitable!

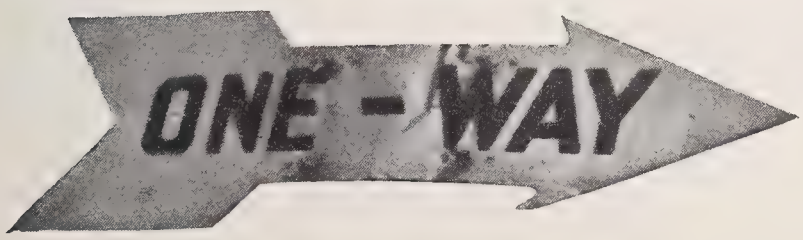
"THE WOMEN" hold-overs are mounting to a new extended run record. Promotion angles stress the big cast (Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell and 135 others), the racy dialogue from the stage hit, the Technicolor Fall Fashion show. Extend the ad budget. HELD OVER 3d WEEK, CAPITOL, N. Y. Best business there in 35 weeks (except "Oz" personal appearances).

"BABES IN ARMS" is doing "Boys Town" business in the 2nd week of its test engagement in Houston, Tex. This remarkable musical comedy (Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland and cast of hundreds) is unanimously rated by all trade press reviewers as unique in show business. M-G-M urges its customers to double ordinary booking time and to be prepared for further extended runs.

MARX BROS. "AT THE CIRCUS". Just previewed! A screenful of belly laughs! A welcome attraction for these times. Plug it with the slogan "Keep the World Laughing!" It will rock your house with roars. A tonic for public and box-office!

"DANCING CO-ED" (Another hit for Lana Turner, plus Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and Band) is a grand entertainment that will yield results with enthusiastic promotion. Not since "Dancing Daughters" days has there been a "sleeper" of this type.

"NINOTCHKA" (don't pronounce it—SEE IT!) Literally it's a shot-in-the-arm for the public! M-G-M is arranging screenings so that you can see for yourself what the famed Lubitsch touch has done for Garbo. She is a new person, laughing, loving, vivacious and flirtatious. (Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire in grand cast). Lubitsch never made a more down-to-earth comedy, racy, romantic, uproarious, than this affair in Paris. The critics will rave! The public will roar! Get busy!



TODAY'S FUTURE HOT TIPS!

"REMEMBER?" (Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Lew Ayres). It was sneak previewed and wowed the audience. A grand comedy. They'll be watching for Greer Garson after her work in "Goodbye Mr. Chips."

"NORTHWEST PASSAGE". Technicolor. (Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan). Keep your fingers crossed! Here is one of the industry's greatest adventure thrillers. The studio previewed it in a theatre in rough-cut form. It's sensational.

"ANOTHER THIN MAN". (William Powell, Myrna Loy and Asta). It's shaping up into their best yet! Watch!

19% U.S. GROSS IN WARLAND; RESTRICTIONS IN 50 PLACES

Executives Point to Rebound of Attendances in Cities of Spain and China After Stagnation at Start of War

While foreign managers of American film companies in New York agreed this week that it is "still too early" to estimate how much revenue they would lose in the European countries now at war, they generally agreed that 19 per cent of their total gross film rental revenue came from those countries, in ordinary times on a general average for the whole. This is upon a basis of from 35 to 40 per cent of gross revenues coming from the entire foreign market; and, about half of that foreign revenue coming from the warring nations in Europe, as set forth by foreign sales chiefs in New York.

The figures vary for individual companies. Some companies are reluctant to reveal the percentage of their foreign revenue, relative to the total gross. Some figures are estimates of managers; others are figured from latest financial statements.

As It Now Stands

As the situation now stands, very few films, Hollywood, native or others, are being shown at this time in England and France; none are believed to be showing in Poland; Hollywood has been out of Russia for some time; the majors and Italy had a break last January 1st, causing Hollywood's withdrawal, and Germany and its added territories of Austria, Czechoslovakia, et al., allow but a negligible number of U.S. film imports.

Several foreign sales executives this week were inclined to minimize possible losses from the affected countries, on the basis of war experience in Spain and China, where attendance at theatres eventually rebounded to a higher level than at the war's outbreak; and, where, in some instances, because of war booms, free areas, or the psychological need for entertainment, business actually boomed.

Awaits "Normal War Basis"

Joseph McConville, foreign sales manager for Columbia, put it this way:

"We hope business will get down to a 'normal war basis,' and judging by previous experience, it probably will. We are not so hopeful about it getting money out of Europe, though we still are able to get some."

Mr. McConville estimated that from 35 to 40 per cent of Columbia's total grosses came from the foreign market; and that about 50 per cent of that came from the countries now at war, chiefly from England and France.

He refused to estimate what part of this 50 per cent would be lost, from the war.

Most of the foreign sales managers pointed out that the loss of Poland was not the loss of a large market; that not much, if any, business was being done with Germany; that it was England and France that mattered as markets, especially England—and that the war in full stringency had not struck these two countries yet. They pointed to a comparatively free flow of money from those countries, up to this week.

Universal's foreign sales stake in the warring countries is as high as 70 per cent, Joseph Seidelman, foreign sales executive for that company, estimated. He deplored the lack of sufficient information, up to this week, upon which to estimate how much of that revenue would be affected. And he refused to estimate how much of the company's total gross was from the foreign market.

However, Universal's foreign sales for 1938; that is, for the 52 weeks ending October 29th, 1938, amounted to 62.7 per cent of the company's total revenue. Assuming for the sake of arriving at averages that Universal's foreign revenues for the current year are maintaining the same ratio to the total gross, and using Mr. Seidelman's estimate of 70 per cent of the foreign sales, 43.9 per cent of Universal's total revenues are being affected by the war.

At Warner Brothers, Joseph Hummel, general foreign sales manager, refused to reveal the foreign market's percentage of the company's total gross, but said that 57 per cent of Warner's foreign revenue came from the affected countries.

Asked how much of this 57 per cent would be lost, Mr. Hummel replied:

"Our reports are late, and we still, in effect, don't know what's going on. Last week, we received our first mail from France since the war began."

At Twentieth Century-Fox this week it was estimated that 35 to 40 per cent of the company's gross is from the foreign field; and that 45 per cent of this was represented by the countries in conflict. Reports from France, and especially from England, with which the company is most concerned, were declared "spotty."

Laboratories Shorthanded

Arthur Loew, foreign sales manager from MGM, estimated that from 35 to 40 per cent of the company's gross is from the foreign field, and that the countries in Europe affected by war accounted for 50 per cent of this percentage.

At the MGM foreign offices this week, it was said that British receipts were 60 per cent of normal; French normal; German, normal.

Norton Richey, foreign sales manager for Monogram, estimated the company's foreign receipts at 35 per cent of the total, and said 20 per cent came, in ordinary times, from the battling nations. He noted that money was still coming through from England, and added, as a sidelight, that English sources now are asking for dupe negatives, indicating, he said, that the laboratories there are shorthanded.

About 35 per cent of Paramount's gross receipts comes from the foreign field, in ordinary times, John Hicks, the company's foreign chief, said this week. He would not reveal what percentage of the foreign grosses was affected

Frequent Shifting of Value of Even So-called "Strong" Currencies Adds to Problems of Film Companies

Currency and import restrictions, applying directly or otherwise to American motion pictures, as a result of the world's recurrent wars and economic rivalries in recent years, particularly in the month since the outbreak of the current conflict in Europe, are now in existence in some 50 countries, and in twenty-six of these countries the restrictions are such that they may be termed onerous.

Fluctuating Values

When not handicapped by innumerable and changing currency and import regulations, foreign film managers have been seriously concerned about exchange fluctations. In the present conflict, the value of even the socalled "strong" currencies, the dollar, the Swiss and French franc, and the English sterling, is no longer to be regarded as static for even so short a time as a month.

The "Second World War" has caused exchange control to be set up in France, England, Canada, New Zealand, Australia and elsewhere. As yet, the effect of this control is not predictable.

Following is a list of some of the countries affected and their import and currency regulations:

GERMANY

Since July, 1931, all operations in foreign exchange have been subject to Reichsbank authorization.

In September, 1934, stringent import control was ruled. Twenty five control boards were set up. Each board limited the import of certain goods to the requirements of the country.

Up to the present war, it had been difficult to import any but essential materials against payments in foreign exchange, because of the strained exchange situation.

On August 3, 1936, further transactions with the United States on a barter basis, as well as shipments against payment in "Aski" or registered marks were prohibited. However, pending contracts were allowed to be settled, if approval of the authorities had been given prior to August 3rd.

On December 23, 1936, the United States Treasury announced that imports from Germany would be permitted against payment in whole or in part, in controlled marks, or from proceeds of American goods sold in Germany, provided that such marks had been owned continuously by the actual importer, and that the imported merchandise had not been sold at the time of clearance through the United States Customs.

Barter transactions, without any monetary exchange, always had been allowed.

POLAND

On April 25, 1936, a Foreign Currency Commission took control of foreign exchange. Import permits were required, except for a limited number of specific articles.

Applications for exchange to provide payment for imports had to be accompanied by invoice, Customs House receipts, and, generally, the import license. If the amount involved did not exceed the equivalent of 3,000 Zlotys and pertained to a single invoice shipment cleared through the Customs in one operation, the application was allowed to be filed with the commission.

Exchange was granted for prepayment of authorized imports provided the importer guaranteed to produce the relative shipping documents within a stipulated period from the date of transfer. To obtain the exchange, satisfactory proof had to be submitted substantiating the purpose for which it was to be used.

On November 17, 1938, the amount of exchange which might be obtained from authorized banks for payment of imports was reduced from 3,000 to 500 Zlotys. Amounts in excess required an application to the Commission.

LATVIA

Exchange restrictions have been in effect since 1931, and all imports are subject to permit.

Imports from countries with which no clearing agreement exists, or which have a constant favorable trade balance against Latvia can be paid for only with exchange derived from exports to such countries. And import permits for shipments from such countries are issued only if the importer has obtained the necessary amount of "Export Exchange."

ESTONIA

Last December, it was reported that a special committee authorize the issuance of import permits and to allot exchange. Previously, the Ministry of Economy issued the import permit and the Eesti Bank allotted the exchange.

YUGOSLAVIA

Exchange restrictions have been in effect since October 7, 1931. The National Bank exercises control, through institutions appointed to deal in foreign exchange.

Imports are subject to prior approval of the National Bank. The permits granted also authorize the allotment of exchange upon presentation of original invoice, customs declaration, certificate indicating that the applicant is a registered importer or possesses a trade license and certificate attesting that taxes for the previous years including the last semester have been paid. In the absence of any of these documents, exchange will not be granted, payment being made in Dinars which are granted to a blocked account. Balances in blocked accounts cannot be used for any purpose without the consent of the Bank. Importers may obtain exchange in advance under certain conditions, but cannot agree to effect payment on this basis without the prior consent of the Bank.

A bill payable in foreign currency may be discharged by depositing the equivalent in Dinars at the official rate even if drawn in "effective" foreign currency.

LITHUANIA

Government restrictions started in October 1, 1936. The Central Bank and all authorized institutions control foreign exchange. There has been little delay, up to the war, in granting of exchange permits.

HUNGARY

The National Bank has stringent control of foreign exchange operations. Applications for exchange must be with an import permit.

A bill may be paid in local currency to the legal discharge of the drawee, unless the bill bears the express indication that it must be paid in the currency in which it is drawn.

On Dec. 4, 1935, the Bank announced it would pay a premium rate of 50 per cent above the official rate for freely disposable currencies, and would sell at a premium of 53 per cent. These premiums apply only to currencies of countries with which there are no clearing agreements.

Pengoes received in liquidation of bills are credited to a "blocked account" by the collecting bank. If the National Bank classifies the relative transaction as eligible for allotment of foreign exchange, cover is granted at a premium of 53 per cent which is borne by the importer. Should the transaction not be classified as eligible, it is difficult to dispose of the Pengoes, and then only at a substantial loss.

GREECE

Restrictions have been in force since September 28, 1931. The Bank of Greece, through an Exchange Control Commission, exerts control.

Importers are assigned quotas for certain goods for which permits are required, while others may be imported without restriction from countries with which Greece does not have a clearing agreement.

Exchange may be obtained without difficulty from authorized banks from approved imports upon presentation of shipping documents and customs receipts. An exporter must forward a signed original invoice directly to the Invoice Control Commission at the port of destination and a signed duplicate of the invoice to the consignee.

Payments can be arranged in advance upon presentation of the contract containing the terms of purchase together with the suitable guaranty that evidence of the importation will be presented within one month from the date of sale to the required exchange.

The Control Board has announced that no allotment of exchange will be granted for general expenses such as collection charges and interest unless application was made and approved in advance.

BULGARIA

The National Bank has exerted foreign exchange control since October, 1931. Importers must have an import permit to clear shipments through the customs. This must be obtained before arrival of the goods, and, in some cases, before the order is placed abroad. At the time, quotas were assigned to importers, based upon the average volume of their transactions from 1930 to 1932, inclusive.

No exchange is allotted until three months after the date of the clearance of the goods through customs, and then for only a small percentage of the required amount. The balance is granted in installments; and it often requires two years before full payment. It is customary to grant extensions to the drawee; for, if this is refused, he has the right to deposit the Leva equivalent of the bill at the official rate, to his legal discharge. Such a deposit may be made with the Agricultural Bank of Bulgaria, or with a Notary Public.

The importer must inform the National Bank by the 10th of the month, of his exchange requirements for the following month. The Bank reserves the right to refuse exchange without giving any reason, and it cannot be held responsible for any consequences from its actions.

TURKEY

The Government periodically lists merchandise which may be imported without restriction, or with quota restrictions, or by special authorization or by clearing agreements.

Exchange permits can be obtained only on presentation of a certificate from the Customs Authorities. This indicates goods have been cleared. In order to withdraw merchandise, the drawee must present at the Customs House a certificate of origin duly legalized by a Turkish Consul.

Drawees customarily request collecting banks to release documents against a provisional deposit, in local currency, plus a margin of five to ten per cent so that they may clear the shipment and get an exchange permit.

ARGENTINA

There are two exchange markets, "free" and "official."

The exchange for the official market is created by the purchase by authorized banks, at the official rate, of export bills in foreign currencies resulting from the shipment of a greater proportion of products exported. Exchange derived from export bills covering the remainder as well as that arising from other sources may be disposed of in the free market.

Since December 1, 1938, all merchandise cleared through the customs must be covered by a prior exchange permit, irrespective of whether settlement is to be made in free or official exchange.

The class of exchange which must be used

NEGLECT OF FOREIGN MART IN '14 CITED

The World War forced the attention of film producers on foreign markets, and made it far easier to introduce American films into those markets, according to an article by Arthur J. Lang, export manager of the Nicholas Powers Company, which appeared in the November 28, 1914, issue of "Motion Picture News."

In his article, headed "Cashing in on Europe's War," Mr. Lang said that "Actually, no opportunity for American producers to sell films abroad has been created by the war, for the very good reason that the opportunity has always existed. But," Mr. Lang contined, "American producers until very recently have not gone after them, have not attempted to show that American films were at least as good as those obtained from Europe."

With regard to the Latin American market, Mr. Lang said that "In dealing with Latin-American business men I have found them as enterprising and at least as honest as the business men of this country. They are exceedingly appreciative of anything you do for them and they never fail to show their appreciation in buying from you to the limit of their needs."

Mr. Lang said in closing that "American producers have foreign markets to sell to; they have an unparalleled opportunity to introduce their goods into these markets; they have unsurpassed advantages for formulating and developing sound methods for the sales attacks.

"All that they need supply is aggressiveness and intelligence; seasoned with just a little patience, to be rewarded by the merry tune of export profits jingling in their pockets."

NATIONS RESTRICT MONEY EXPORTS

in payment of goods, is indicated by the permit.

The permit must be used in full or returned unused within 30 days. A penalty of 10 per cent on the unused portion is provided, for failure to do this. A tolerance of 10 per cent is allowed, for unforeseen contingencies affecting the amount of exchange required. Also, the amount of merchandise may be five per cent over that stipulated in the permit.

Since January, 1938, the minimum rate at which exchange can be gotten in the free market has been 10 per cent in excess of the official rate.

Exchange for imports can be had in the free market by previous authorization of exchange control authorities. Exchange for imports already arrived, for which provisional deposits have been made in Milreis, will be allotted only by the Banco do Brazil, settlement in free exchange being forbidden.

Banks, other than the Banco, may not maintain a "bought" position in exchange, beyond the limit as fixed by control authorities. Sales of exchange for commercial purposes are subject to a five per cent tax; for other purposes, 10 per cent.

CHILE

Importers must get authorization before placing orders abroad upon arrival, permission must be obtained for customs and exchange, before payment can be effected.

A report, made in July of this year, states that the policy of the Control Commission has been, to reduce exports from the United States, because of lack of exchange.

URUGUAY

Merchandise cannot be cleared through the customs until payment has been made.

RUMANIA

Exchange has been under governmental restriction since May, 1932.

A 1935 decree divided foreign currencies into two categories, strong and weak. "Strong" are the dollar, sterling, and the Swiss and French francs.

All exchange must be sold to the National Bank at the official rate. Imports are subject to quota restrictions, and require a permit, preference being given to countries with which Rumania has a favorable trade balance. All imports are subject to a 12 per cent tax, based upon the mean value of the goods according to the customs tariff. Permits for exchange, valid for 15 days, are obtained from the Foreign Currency Office. Exchange is sold at the official rate, plus a designated premium; in the case of "strong" currencies, this is reported at about 38 per cent.

JAPAN

Under a decree of January 8, 1937, a permit was required for the acquisition of letters of credit of exchange for payment of imports, if the aggregate monthly requirements of the importer exceeded 30,000 yen or its equivalent. This was later reduced to 1,000 yen on July 7, same year, and to 100 yen, in December, same year.

NEW ZEALAND

Even prior to the war, exchange shortage was acute. It was announced this summer that the possession of an import permit did not assure the holder that exchange would be available immediately.

MEXICO

There is an "absentee tax" of four per cent on all money sent out of Mexico.

WAR FILM BANNING MISTAKE—THOMAS

Protesting that his proposal for a Federal ban on war pictures and radio programs was only a "suggestion" given newspaper prominence he had not anticipated, Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, this week indicated in Washington that he has no idea of pushing the matter toward Congressional adoption.

That the Senator had in mind legislation complementing the neutrality bill by prohibiting the exhibition of any war pictures—feature or news—or the presentation of any radio programs dealing with war, was widely reported. However, the Senator said, he had merely "made a suggestion" that if the United States was to be neutral in the European conflict it should go all the way and bar war pictures and air programs.

The current war has induced restrictions of some degree in the following countries:

FRANCE

All foreign imports into France and Algeria are subject to import license.

Firms there who desire to import foreign merchandise must request licenses from the Minister of Commerce; and, in Algeria, to the Governor General.

A transitory provision (as of last week) is for exemption from this order for two shipment classes: foreign merchandise not subject to control by quota or import prohibition into France before September 2nd, may be imported under conditions previously in force, when it can be established that the merchandise was shipped directly to France or Algeria, before that date; and merchandise which was subject to quota control or other import restrictions into France before September 2nd, will be admitted as usual, if licenses of quota certificates have been delivered before that date, and it is imported before the expiration of the normal period of validity of these documents.

THE UNITED KINGDOM

On September 5, the Government instituted a licensing system for imports. The declared purpose was to conserve Britain's foreign exchange supply for necessities.

The Bank of England was authorized to deal in foreign exchange and gold.

"Until further notice," the regulations read, "exchange can be made available only for the following purposes:

"1. To enable a contract made before the date upon which the Regulation came into force, to be complied with. The intention is to facilitate the completion of outstanding commercial and financial contracts.

"2. To meet the reasonable requirements of a trade in business carried on in the United Kingdom. This is intended to cover imports of goods; insurance treaties, premiums, and claims; ships' disbursements; freights; agents' commissions; royalties; film rents; copyrights; salaries, pensions, etc.

"3. To defray reasonable travelling or other personal expenses."

Exchange may be sold without further question, where the goods had already been imported before the date on which the regulations came into force; where the certified Exchange Control copy of a customs Entry Form is produced for goods imported after the date on which the regulations came into force; and where a declaration is made that the certified Exchange Control copy of a customs Entry Form will be produced in respect of goods not yet imported.

Export of bank notes, postal orders, gold, securities, or foreign exchange (bank notes, promissory notes, checks, drafts, and other exchange bills in all currencies but sterling) is prohibited, except with permission, which may be granted by the Bank of England or an authorized dealer listed by it.

AUSTRALIA

Under that government's precautionary regulations, taken before September 1st, sales of overseas exchange against the country's money was not to be permitted, except through the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, or an Australian Trading Bank.

On September 1st, it was said that such sales would be permitted for payment of goods already exported to Australia, or to be exported to the Commonwealth in the course of ordinary trade, for an amount not exceeding in value 5,000 English pounds, in any one month, for any one firm or person. Details of shipments were to be required. Applications for business in excess of that amount were to be ruled upon by the authorities.

Other countries with exchange restrictions are Afghanistan, Albania, Angola, Bolivia, the Canary Islands, China, Korea, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Ecuador, Honduras, Iceland, Iran, Italy, Manchukuo, Spanish Morocco, Nicaragua, Norway, Paraguay, Venezuela, Slovakia, and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, and Canada.

Grosses and The New War

by the war, and refused to estimate, therefore, what part of this would be lost. Said he:

"It's impossible to estimate, at this stage. We've just gotten some figures from England, but we haven't received any from France or from any of the other European countries."

Phil Reisman, RKO foreign chief, refused to estimate what percentage of the company's gross came from foreign markets.

Annual Grosses

Latest annual statements of most of the majors give their gross film revenues as follows:

Paramount, $100,927,938 (including theatre and accessory receipts), for the 52 weeks ended December 31, 1938.

Loew's, $118,941,768 (including theatre and accessories receipts), for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31st, 1938.

Universal, $12,048,124, domestic sales, $7,562,928 foreign sales; $19,611,052, total gross, for the 52 weeks ending Oct. 29, 1938.

Twentieth Century Fox, $58,201,314 (including accessories receipts), for the 53 weeks ended Dec. 31, 1938.

Warners, $97,926,005 (including theatre and miscellaneous receipts), for the year ending Aug. 27, 1938.

Columbia, $19,413,794 (including accessories receipts), for the 53 weeks ended July 1, 1939.

OCTOBER 19th

NOT THAT YOU WERE IN DOUB

"A triumph of masterly direction by Frank Capra, containing every element of successful motion picture entertainment . . . human interest, rich humor, pathos, romance and a story with a sock.

This picture is fully up to the high standard set by Capra.

James Stewart is superb.

Jean Arthur is perfect.

A large and impressive supporting cast deliver one hundred percent performances.

but just to reassure you

The deft Capra touch has made the most out of every situation and the picture will be understood and enjoyed by people of all ages and in all walks of life.

Audience reaction:—a packed house received the picture warmly, laughed heartily at the humorous sequences, were highly interested in the development of the story, applauded passages of dialogue and at the finish gave the picture an ovation.

Our supply of comment cards was exhausted and we were forced to make up some, as people insisted on writing their praise of the picture. The cards were 100% raves.

With the Capra name, the all-round excellence of the cast, the timeliness of the story and the magnificent production, it cannot fail to be a a top-grosser.

Rating—from any and all angles—double AA plus."

Hollywood Cavalcade

(20th Century-Fox)

In Technicolor

He and She Romance—in Hollywood

Of a murky, dank October morning in New York, at a hangover hour when one should be merely contemplating breakfast, the critics, trade and lay, turned out to straggle into the Ziegfeld theatre in Sixth Avenue to regard, skeptically, an announced 96 minutes of "Hollywood Cavalcade." At the end they stood up and applauded. Done without cocktails, in the stride of the day's business events, the function was without precedent. It might, happily, set a fashion—reviewing without anesthesia.

The picture proved to be considerably more love story than history, than cavalcade. The title probably will do no harm, but it is no introduction to the story as it will be seen by its larger audience.

Alice Faye, sweetly marshmallow, is at her best and Don Ameche plays his role of the self-centered director with a verity that indicts most of Hollywood, from Then to Now.

Maybe there is a moral in the fact that the Genius-Director role portrays a life and a career that was both built upon and wrecked by headlong pursuit of the always bigger-and-better. The notably competent direction by Irving Cummings reminds one that he was, too, an eye witness of that cavalcade of screen evolutions his cameras recorded in this opus.

One must suppose that if the spectator happens to be reminded of Marshall Neilan, or gets a whiff of D. W. Griffith, Mack Sennett or Cecil B. DeMille it is entirely accidental.

There's a reference to one "Gloria" in a bathing girl sequence. A contest might be held to see if anyone can guess the reference.

Buster Keaton does a passable representation of himself, somewhat more convincing in his role than Mack Sennett, who speaks in a softly polished manner that belies the memory of Keystone days. Also in a long shot at a dinner table one discovers an actor who looks much more like Cecil B. DeMille than Mr. DeMille does.

Despite temptations towards the reminiscent, the picture adheres to the story and keeps it marching on in the romantic course of boy-seeks-girl, girl-seeks-boy.

There is a magnificent sequence of the most utter of Keystone comedy slapstick, complete with fire engine and police. The audience found it just as funny as the original audiences of old Keystone did—perhaps funnier. The pie throwing was equally authentic and successful.

The picture includes a sequence reproducing a Jolson number in "The Jazz Singer."

There will be those perhaps who will think the picture a bit longish on the end—and there will be others who would like to have been shown a bit more of Ben Turpin.

Most showmen of experience and memory will find the picture so laden with reminiscence cues that they will be straying from the really well integrated plot movement. Experimental examination of the reactions of persons less steeped in motion picture tradition revealed no such reaction.

The production is rich with exploitation possibilities, many too obvious to mention here. Incidentally as a picture about picture making it has its fun without invasion of the interests of the art.—Terry Ramsaye.

Frank Capra's Greatest Picture

"There has arisen a Capra tradition," says Terry Ramsaye in an article on Frank Capra printed in Columbia's brochure dedicated to this picture, "a conviction of a certain special and pervading magic." That magic, thrice acclaimed by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and long counted first among box office dependables by exhibitors who have paid to find out and profited by learning, was never in such full flower as here.

This essentially plain, powerful presentation of an implicitly American story about a boy who got into Congress on a pass and stayed in to whip the gas house gang under their own rules is by any and all measures Mr. Capra's greatest picture.

Mr. Capra's hero is a young man appointed to the Senate by a controlled governor to serve the unexpired term of an expired junior senator, and take orders from the venal senior senator who takes his from a plundering publisher.

Enamored of the Lincoln precedent, the youngster stumbles upon the truth about his appointment and is ridden down by the machine when he attempts to expose the steal. Facing expulsion, he filibusters single handedly to such persistent length that his naively earnest eloquence breaks down the powers arrayed against him. Simple as it sounds in synopsis, the story is, as told, as deep and sound and powerful as any the screen has offered this or any year.

With this production Mr. Capra turns his attention for the first time to the serious realities of here and now. This is no fantastic Tibetan paradise and his romantics are no pair of magazine cover lovers. This is the United States Senate and his leads are a senator and his disillusioned secretary. Their associates are hardened politicians, toughened reporters and professional Washingtonians. He pulls no punches for any of them, gilds no lillies and tars no blackguards. Neither does he wave a flag, but he sells more simon pure Americanism the hard way than all the star spangled purpose pictures of the period have managed to instill.

It would be too much to say that even the special and pervading magic attributed to Mr. Capra by Mr. Ramsaye can be given full credit for the special timeliness of this extraordinarily pervasive film. He can not have foreseen that Congress would be in session and most of the world paying strict attention to its every word at just this time. That circumstance is, however, of emphatic pertinency to the matter of dating and exploiting exhibition of the production. Under other conditions it might be argued that a picture based upon and soundly glorifying the American system of government would be less than hot for the foreign market, even a picture good enough to sell 320,000,000 admission tickets in this country. As is, the film is, as they say, hotter than a firecracker for any nation it can be distributed in at this time.

Next to Mr. Capra, to whom top credit for all Capra pictures unquestionably belongs, the upright and oncoming James Stewart rates lasting acclaim for a performance good enough to cinch the Academy award in any given year. Close up on his lead is Jean Arthur, bettering anything she's done previously, and bunched closely for next honors are Claude Rains as the culpable senior senator, Edward Arnold as the plotting publisher, Guy Kibbee as the puppet governor and Harry Carey as the president of the Senate. Thomas Mitchell, Eugene Pallette and the others do their lesser chores no less competently, for that is the hall mark of Capra production.

Sidney Buchman is credited with the screen play, a masterly job of sustained narrative, and the story is by Lewis R. Foster. H. V. Kaltenborn, whose name is about as lively box office just now as a film star's, appears twice in the picture, broadcasting an account of the Senate filibuster. This touch of realism, coupled with scenes made in Washington and studio scenes enough like them to fool all of the congressmen all of the time, brings the whole matter of government as it is achieved in the nation's capital smack into the audience's lap, unvarnished and unlibeled, a spectacle, a lesson and an entertainment worth far more to the best and worst of the country's citizens than any price of admission being charged in any precinct at this time.

Fast and Furious

(MGM)

Comedy Mystery

"Fast and Furious" is number three in MGM's series of comedy mysteries dealing with the exploits of a rare book dealer. Franchot Tone and Ann Sothern are starred. Ruth Hussey, Lee Bowman, Allyn Joslyn, John Miljan, Bernard Nedell and Mary Beth Hughes are featured in support. Busby Berkeley directed the Frederick Stephani production which is based on an original screen play by Harry Kurnitz.

Like its predecessors, this is fast moving, funny, suspenseful and melodramatic. The story deviates from the plots of the earlier two in that rare books do not motivate the criminal happenings. Instead the "Sloanes" go on a vacation and the action follows their arrival at the site of a bathing beauty pageant. In general the comedy follows the already established lines, but it is amplified by "Garda's" wifely jealousy aroused when the theme involves "Joel" with the beauties. Further hilarity is gained by incorporating a herd of lions in the action.

The melodramatic mystery in the piece stems from the murder of the promoter of the pageant, disappearance of funds, a case of too many clues and suspects and a second murder. While these phases build suspense excitement, tomfoolery is never neglected and in the climax after "Joel" has been given lusty verbal goings over by wife and a physical manhandling by small town authorities and the lions, he cleverly traps the unsuspected killer.

If "Fast Company" and "Fast and Loose" proved audience pleasers and audiences have caught on to the series' swing and verve, "Fast and Furious" may be exploited as a show whose melodrama speeds through humorous and dangerous situations and whose romance is fast stepping and funny. Both elements are interest provoking.

Previewed at the Village Theatre, Westwood. The audience seemed satisfied with the essential melodrama and breezy comedy.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Eternally Yours

(Wanger-United Artists)

Or, Married to a Magician

A successful marriage is difficult enough to chart under today's hurly-burly living, the marital experts would have one believe, and when there are added the career burdens of a magician spouse and his society wife partner, the prospects would seem reduced to the slimmest margin. Regardless of that, the positing of the problem and the solution of the situation have been done in a superior entertainment style, but it is limited to adult audiences because of the general tone of sophistication and some definite indications of first night-honeymoon incidents.

With background material from the fascinating biographical pages of a sleight of hand artist, the film data offer exploitation stimulation and in any case a pictorial bag packed with screen tricks and delights.

David Niven, who scored heavily with his streamlined miming in "Bachelor Mother" and "The Real Glory," plays his magician part smoothly to the last flip of his trick cards. Loretta Young paces him in a display of perfect team playing and in addition never looked lovelier. The first string supporting players include Hugh Herbert, Billie Burke, C. Aubrey Smith, Virginia Field, Broderick Crawford, Raymond Walburn, Zasu Pitts and even Herman the rabbit. The thrill seekers will be treated to some behind-the-scenes displays of illusion, particularly in the business wherein the magician hero drops from a plane handcuffed. Director Tay Garnett has given every screen trick to the frisky screen composition of the madcap scribblers, Gene Towne and Graham Baker. Werner Janssen has given the plot effective musical tonings.

The beginnings of the marital union of the "Great Arturo" and "Anita," supposedly a level headed miss and the granddaughter of a bishop besides, come from an engagement shower. The next sequence reveals the couple married. The job of assisting in the act rests heavily on the girl. A Reno divorce and a marriage to a safe and sober friend of the family follow. However, a meeting with her ex-mate at a house party and her reaction to "Arturo's" death defying leap from a plane, while handcuffed, instruct the girl as to the real direction of her heart's interest. As for the divorce, a deus ex machina of a legal flaw settles that mixup.

A Woman is the Judge

(Columbia)

"Madame X" in Reverse

The long arm of coincidence as well as the law is stretched considerably in this problem play of a Portia, penalization and parenthood. With imaginative elasticity Karl Brown has concocted a plot that is a sort of a "Madame X" formula in reverse. In this instance it is the mother who is represented as a practitioner of jurisprudence and her offspring who is arraigned before her.

The proceedings are aimed directly at the women of the audience, particularly the sentimental sides who thrive on tabloid confessional journal fables and do not catalogue their movie menus according to any stellar system. The final footage, wherein "Portia" lets down her judicial hair and confesses that the gun moll-murderess is her long lost offspring, will more than likely raise the feminine tear ducts to flood proportions. As for the men, well, they will perhaps find something of interest in the semi-underworld background and the dialogue.

Nick Grinde, director, has pulled out all the sentimental stops. Frieda Inescort, who seems to make cinematic career women a specialty, as witness her work in "Portia on Trial" and "Woman Doctor," and Otto Kruger make a mature and sober pair of romancers and judicial workers. Rochelle Hudson, as the daughter, manifests adequately the hardened and soft sides of her assignment.

The screen trial was heard on a drizzly Monday afternoon before a large sized audience in the Criterion-courtroom Theatre, New York. The case seemed to be of some interest to the gathering assembled.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

The Demon Barber of Fleet Street

(Select Attractions)

Murder Thriller

Select Attractions, realizing the favorable returns of America's horror pictures "Dracula" and "Frankenstein," has prepared for release Europe's double thrill horror show, "The Return of the Frog" (reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, Dec. 31, 1938), and "The Demon Barber of Fleet Street."

Tod Slaughter, billed as The Horror Man of Europe, lives up to his name in the portrayal of the demon barber, and Eve Lister offers an interesting performance of "Johanna," the young girl trying to elude the clutches of the villain.

Patrons who flocked to see America's double horror pictures should return, with the proper exploitation, to see what the English have to offer in the way of thrill pictures. The morbidness of such a drama is relieved by the comedy of Davina Craig and Jerry Verno.

The picture was made under the direction of George King. The supporting cast included Bruce Seton, D. J. Williams and Johnny Singer.

Reviewed at the Central theatre in New York, the late afternoon audience watched with interest the developments of both pictures.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Marshal of Mesa City

(RKO Radio)

Western

"Marshal of Mesa City" makes able use of the entertainment formula that caused such pictures as "Dodge City" and "Frontier Marshal" to be well regarded by large numbers of exhibitors and theatre-goers. Yet it is freshly different and by no means a digest of either. The first George O'Brien show on RKO-Radio's new season schedule, it should be influential in creating a vogue for its successors.

Naturally O'Brien is pretty much the whole picture, but he is given commendable support by the entire support cast, particularly by a pair of comparative newcomers, Virginia Vale and Henry Brandon, and Leon Ames. O'Brien's job, this time, is to reestablish law and order in outlaw-ridden Mesa City.

Producer Bert Gilroy has concocted something worthwhile for the action-adventure devotees. While O'Brien, et al, will automatically come in for the major share of the credit, Jack Lait, Jr., for the original screen play, and David Howard for his direction are exploitation assets.

Previewed in the RKO Radio studio projection room in Hollywood.—G. M.

Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence

(20th Century-Fox)

Melodramatic Romance

Good stuff sometimes comes in small packages and the saying is true of "Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence." In character, it's the story of a boy and his dreams and the rocky road he had to travel before he realized them. As screen entertainment the story is a convincing blending of romance, adventure, melodrama and humor. While the hero of the piece, newcomer Glenn Ford, is given fourth billing, he took advantage of his opportunity to make a short cut to potential stardom. Jean Rogers and another beginner, Nicholas Conte, also appear to good advantage in their roles, and the quality of support contributed by Raymond Walburn, Marjorie Rambeau, Eddie Collins, Ward Bond, Irving Bacon and Kay Linaker is on the plane expected of those mature players.

Human interest is the substance of Dalton Trumbo's story which he, Leonard Hoffman and Ben Grauman Kohn adapted. It is the quality accentuated in Ricardo Cortez's direction. After buying an Arizona ranch, a New Yorker, "Joe," starts hitchhiking across the continent. En route he teams up with erudite hobo, "Professor," tramp "Tony" and "Anita," Spanish refugee. The quartet encounter many adventures.

Battle Fleets of England

(March of Time - RKO)

The War on the Seas

The production planning and filming divisions of Louis de Rochemont's March of Time magazine newsreel have hardly, if ever, come as close to headlines of the day as they have with their "Battle Fleets of England," No. 2 of the current series, which becomes doubly important because of the unprecedented censorship now covering movements of the Empire on land and sea in the Second World War.

Some of the sea strategies and mechanics of England's mighty sea power are discussed in surprising detail, and insights given into the age-old training technique of its sea lords and lieutenants, leaving at the end a comparatively well rounded description of the Battle Fleets of England, from the Baltic to the Mediterranean and out into the oceans of the Far East bases.

Even without the connection of the reel's timeliness to world headlines which daily touch on England's sea blockade of Germany, the Nazi attempts to bomb the British fleet and the sinking of ships, production construction and documentation place the issue high on a level in the series.

"First and only permission to film the complete activities of the English fleets" was given to March of Time by the British Admiralty two months ago, a bare few weeks before England's declaration of war on Germany brought a strict filming censorship.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Dreams on Ice

(Columbia)

Color Rhapsody

In anticipation of the winter season the ice skating short subjects are beginning to appear. Here is one of the fore-runners, a Color Rhapsody issue about a little boy and his dog. Preparing for bed of a wintry night, they decide they want to ice-skate, so they turn on the shower and open the window to wait for the water to freeze. Falling asleep, the boy dreams of an ice palace in which toy dolls and animals perform feats of skill. The dream ends when his mother wades in to deliver a lecture.—Running time, seven minutes.

Clocking the Jockeys

Sport Slant

Around the clock with the mounted men of the racing stables is the subject under study in this sport subject from the Ed Thorgersen section. Attention is given to the matter of jockey training to keep his waistline in trim, to his eating habits, and his preparation for and participation in the big event of the day. Costarring with their riders are some fetching shots of the horses.—Running time, 11 minutes.

The Ninth State

(Emerson Yorke)

New Hampshire in Color

New Hampshire, the ninth state to ratify the National Constitution, in 1788, has been photographed in color by Emerson Yorke. The scenic beauty and serenity of the outland has been captured and enhanced by the handling of the camera. The audience views many historical sights, among them Odiorne's Point, Fort Constitution and Liberty Pole. After a depiction of the school life, the subject closes with scenes from Dartmouth's winter carnival. —Running time, 22 minutes.

Children under 16, for 10 years denied admission to Quebec theatres, are being permitted to see "The Wizard of Oz," at Loew's, Montreal, the Provincial ruling having been dropped for one week for the film.

Leaders Continue Studies of the Effects of War

The end of the first month of the Second European War finds the motion picture business engrossed in discussion and study of the war's immediate and potential reactions on income, but with comparatively little tangible action being taken pending determination of just how much in rentals Hollywood's product stands to lose in Europe's warring nations, from which accrues about half of the 35 to 40 per cent of U.S. distributors' foreign income (see page 28). Also to be considered are potential revenues curtailed through currency restrictions.

Distributors Meet

Exhibitors, except large circuits related to producer-distributors, have given no expression of opinion except to object to increasing admissions to "pay the freight" for Hollywood through higher rentals (See MOTION PICTURE HERALD, September 30, page 13).

Distributors in New York, individually and through their membership in the MPPDA have been meeting to determine their economic position. Conversations of a week ago Monday and Wednesday were resumed.

Individually, RKO moved two weeks ago, to cut salaries in the "top brackets," temporarily. United Artists in New York this week acted similarly.

Parings of home office staffs at this date also have been comparatively limited. Some have also merged departments.

Hollywood appears to have gone farther with layoffs, many of the studios remoulding technical, clerical and production staffs to meet actual filming requirements.

20th Century-Fox Committee Confers

Called together Friday by Darryl Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox vice-president in charge of production, a committee of workers and talent representing all major departments in the company's studio discussed the situation and called upon all employees to recognize the "gravity of the existing emergency, and meet the situation without the extremes of blind panic and equally blind optimism."

"We are fortunate that Twentieth Century-Fox is in an extremely sound financial position. Mr. Zanuck made it clear that no drastic action is contemplated at this time. He feels with us that a general salary cut is the poorest sort of economy, and should only be undertaken as a last resort. But savings must be accomplished and drastic new economies put into effect. If we can work together in the crisis we have better than a good chance of coming through without damage either to the studio or to ourselves."

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman, arrived in New York this week for business conferences and plans to remain about two weeks before returning to the coast. He flew to New York from Mexico City.

Mr. Schenck will confer with Sidney Kent, president, arriving from his summer at the Thousand Islands.

Nat Levy Honored; RKO Managers Meet

Jules Levy, RKO general sales manager, held a sales conference of the company's eastern exchange managers in Detroit Sunday, following a testimonial dinner tendered Nat Levy, eastern central district manager, on the occasion of the transfer of his headquarters from Detroit to Philadelphia.

Attending the sales conference Sunday were Jules Levy, E. L. McEvoy, eastern and Canadian sales manager; Nat Levy, and the following branch heads: B. G. Kranze, Albany; R. C. Cropper, Boston; C. Boasberg, Buffalo; B. Pitkin, New Haven; S. C. Jacques, Cincinnati; G. Lefko, Cleveland; F. L. McNamee, Philadelphia, and H. H. Greenblatt, Pittsburgh.

Sponsored by the Detroit Variety Club, the testimonial dinner for Nat Levy was held at the Book Cadillac Hotel, with all Detroit exchange managers having been on the testimonial committee, headed by Eddie Heiber of Universal.

ASCAP Bill Dies In Alabama House

The anti-American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers measure in the Alabama legislature, which was passed by the Senate without a dissenting vote, failed to get on the House calendar before the legislature adjourned.

The measure is expected to be called up when the legislature reconvenes next June. The bill would require ASCAP to charge for its music by the piece and prevents a blanket assessment against radio stations, hotels or other concerns using its music. It also would levy a three per cent annual gross receipts tax on the organization.

In celebration of its 25th birthday, ASCAP on Sunday at Carnegie Hall in New York started a week's festival of American music.

The society decided on the program, it was announced, to honor American creative artists in the field of music.

Monogram Shows Profit of $78,773 for Eight Months

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram Pictures Corporation, announced an operating profit of $78,773.89 for the eight months from November 1, 1938, to July 1, 1939, at the interim meeting of the stockholders held at the company's offices in Rockefeller Center on Wednesday.

In submitting the report for the 26 week period ended July 1, 1939, Mr. Johnston disclosed a profit of $41,541.21. In November and December of 1938, the first two months in which the company operated in the black, a profit of $37,132.68 was earned.

On a statement accompanying the report Mr. Johnston said:

"Several pictures are now in production in Hollywood. We have just completed what we believe is our biggest production to date, 'Mutiny in the Big House,' on which we anticipate a substantial profit. Arrangements are being made to start production of the Washington Irving classic, 'Rip Van Winkle' which gives every indication of being a pronounced success.

"We look forward with optimism to the coming season as one which should do much to advance Monogram's name in the motion picture industry."

The following were elected to constitute the board of directors: W. Ray Johnston, J. A. Sisto, O. Henry Briggs, William B. Jaffe, Scott R. Dunlap, Trem Carr, Thomas P. Loach, Norton V. Ritchey and Samuel Broidy.

B & K Agreement With UA Pending

The possibility of a new season product agreement being reached between Balaban & Katz and United Artists was indicated this week, John Balaban, head of the Chicago circuit, having arrived in New York Tuesday for discussions with United Artists on its product, with the exception of the three new season Samuel Goldwyn releases, for which a deal has already been consummated.

RCA AND FARNSWORTH IN A PATENT EXCHANGE; NBC PLANS "BIG PUSH"

Advancement of Television Seen in Plan for Interchange of Use of Inventions; Merchandising Campaign Set

Further advancement of the new art of television is expected to evolve from a patent exchange consummated on Monday between Radio Corporation of America, principal public telecaster to date, and Farnsworth Television and Radio Corporation, one of the largest of the independent television manufacturers—in what appears to be one of the most sweeping deals for television patent exchanging since television started to emerge from the laboratory.

At the same time, in another division of RCA's television development, at the National Broadcasting Company, a wholly owned subsidiary, it was disclosed that NBC and RCA together in a few weeks will launch an intensive merchandising campaign to stimulate the sale of television receivers throughout the country.

RCA Explains

Announcement of the RCA-Farnsworth patent exchange came from the RCA home office at Rockefeller Center, and said:

"Each party has acquired the right to use the inventions of the other in the fields of television and in other fields of their respective businesses. The RCA acquired a non-exclusive license under the patents of the Farnsworth Corporation, for television receivers, for television transmitters, and for other radio and sound recording and reproducing apparatus.

"The Farnsworth Corporation acquired a standard non-exclusive license for broadcast and television receivers and electrical phonographs under the patents of Radio Corporation of America, and also other non-exclusive licenses for television and broadcast transmitters and for its other fields of business.

"Neither corporation acquired any right to grant sub-licenses to third parties under the patents of the other corporation."

The NBC and the RCA will collaborate in boosting television this fall, Alfred H. Morton, vice-president of the NBC in charge of television, said in New York last week.

There will, shortly, be a large merchandising campaign by the RCA, of television receivers; and the NBC will concentrate on more, and superior, television programs.

1,200 Receivers in New York Area

Mr. Morton estimated that there were almost 1,200 receiving sets in the New York area; whereas, when the NBC began its television service to the public, on April 30th, there were only 500.

Sales of sets rise when television programs become better, he asserted; he gave as an instance the jump in set sales early in September, coincident with a bettering of programs.

He deprecated the unofficial "boycott" being exerted against television by motion picture distributors, saying that the new industry would forge ahead, regardless.

The television industry is using films from commercial and independent sources, he claimed, and is content in doing so. Said he:

"We don't intend to go into the film business. We believe the film industry will eventually meet us half way, and we think there will be enterprising producers who will see the opportunities in making pictures for television, and who will profit as a result."

Mr. Morton foresaw a large use of films by eventual television networks. He envisioned transmitters in 10 key cities, linked in network, broadcasting two hours of film per day. The resultant feature film consumption "probably would be more than the total feature footage produced by the major companies in a year," he said.

"It would open up a tremendous new market, with a huge audience," he added.

Mr. Morton admitted negotiations with film companies had been "slow," to date.

The war would have no effect upon television here, he said.

SEES FEW TELEVISION SETS BEING BOUGHT

Less than 400 television receivers were sold in the New York area in the past five months, Harry Boyd Brown, national merchandising manager of the Philco Radio and Television Corporation, told the Boston Conference on Distribution, on Monday, in that city. He said that any prediction that 2,000 sets would be sold during the next year was "optimistic." It will be from five to seven years before television as a merchandising factor will have any effect on distribution, he said.

Claims New Inventions

With applications for patents claimed on more than 100 radio, television and facsimile inventions, filed with the United States Patent Office in Washington, Leo A. Collins of Louisville, Ky., said this week that patent office examiners had indicated they would be granted after routine procedure.

Among his inventions is one of a new method of transmitting motion picture films, with accompanying sounds recorded at greater speed and with more perfect registering, he said.

New Television Programs

Opening Fall programs of note on the NBC television service in the New York area included the following: the Fordham-Waynesburg football game on last Saturday; the Ronson Lighter Company musical revue last Friday evening; the debut of Helen Twelvetrees this Tuesday evening in "The Butter and Egg Man."

NBC is also telecasting the following football games: Manhattan-St. Bonaventure, this Saturday; College of the City of New York-Scranton, on Oct. 14th; the same college against St. Joseph's on Nov. 18th; Long Island University against Catholic University, on Nov. 23rd.

Members of the Institute of Radio Engineers listened to the reading of seven technical papers on television, at their convention two weeks ago, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City.

Form New Corporation

In Hartford, Conn., the World Radio, Television and Appliance Corporation has filed certificates of organization. Former name was the Hartford Radio-Television and Appliance Corporation.

Grand Jury Hears Film Executives

Several more top and lesser figures of the industry and its labor unions testified during the week before a Federal Grand Jury in Los Angeles, in the United States Attorney General's probe into union activities and alleged income tax violations.

William Bioff, west coast leader of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century Fox, and president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, will not be called before the jury, it was said.

Witnesses last week were Louis B. Mayer, MGM executive; Ralph Morgan, president of the Screen Actors' Guild; Robert Montgomery, its past president; Aubrey Blair, organizing director of the American Guild of Variety Artists; Guy H. Cooper, suspended financial secretary of the Studio Technicians' Local 37; J. B. Codd, accountant for Twentieth Century-Fox; Harland Holmden, international vice-president of the IATSE; Sid Rogell, studio manager for RKO; Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the SAG; Joseph Carpenter, Local 37; Arthur Stebbins, a nephew of Mr. Schenck; J. Holt and F. Stimpfig, bank officers.

Others to testify are Lou Blix and Steve Neuman for the union, and Pat Casey, Victor Clarke, Harry Cohn and Harry Warner.

Attorney General Frank Murphy said last Thursday in Washington that the Department of Justice was watching the jury testimony, closely.

"Films," New Magazine, Appears in Late October

"Films," announced as an "international quarterly magazine of film opinion," will appear, initially, late this month, according to the publisher, Kamin Publishers, New York City.

The magazine "seeks to provide a medium whereby film-craftsmen and the film-audience may have a forum for the mutual exchange of ideas. It will contain articles and film material by many writers and workers in the cinema."

The first issue will include articles by John Grierson, Sawyer Falk, Kurt London, Alberto Cavalcanti, and others, in addition to a previously unpublished article by Harry Alan Potamkin, annotated by Edgar Dale of Ohio State University, and a previously unpublished screen treatment of "The Lower Depths" by Maxim Gorky, translated by Alexander Bakshy.

The Editorial Board of "Films" consists of Lincoln Kirstein, Jay Leyda, Mary Losey, Robert Stebbins, and Lee Strasberg.

RKO Leads Direct Mail Users

RKO Radio Pictures for the fourth consecutive year is included among the 50 leaders of direct mail advertising in America listed by the Direct Mail Advertising Association. Leon J. Bamberger, sales promotion manager, received the certificate of award for the company.

Friday in Hollywood

Hollywood has lots of things on its mind besides the business of making moving pictures. Here the horrors of "war" are reflected mainly by debatable opinions of what the IATSE 10 per cent wage increase means, by the very actual realization that the pay check cuts and personnel eliminations look like the first day jobs of a batch of new students trying to shear someone's hair in a barber college, and by speculation over what will be done by the federal grand jury, which shortens its sessions because "members must attend to private business."

Seven Begun, One Completed

Hollywood on the weekend had the jitters. Nevertheless it managed to start seven pictures and complete one more. "Little Old New York" was started at 20th Century-Fox. One need not have been so long in the business to know that when the same titled picture was on the screen 15 or 16 years ago Marion Davies was the star. Alice Faye will be the star in the 1939 version and with her will be Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce and Andy Devine.

Another story about New York folk, this time some of its sons in the last world war, was begun at Warners under the title "The Fighting 69th." James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Jeffrey Lynn, George Brent, Alan Hale, Dennis Morgan, William Lundigan and Frank McHugh will have important parts in telling the story of the "fighting Irish."

Another Edgar Hoover Film

This week Paramount launched the photographing of another of those J. Edgar Hoover stories with "Street of Missing Women," in which Preston Foster, Ann Dvorak, Arthur Loft, Wynne Gibson, Betty Compson and Peggy Shannon will appear. MGM's detective story is "Nick Carter," involving Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson, Donald Meek, Henry Hull and Sterling Holloway.

"Hopalong Cassidy" goes on to further adventures in the Harry Sherman production for Paramount, "Gun Chores." William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Britt Wood and Jane Clayton are featured.

George O'Brien will keep pace with his rival Boyd by making "Legion of the Lawless" for RKO-Radio.

Out at Warners a picture called "Brother Rat and the Baby" was begun. Wayne Morris, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan, Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert and Henry O'Neill will do most of the work.

Of the seven pictures that were completed, Warner Brothers accounted for two, "The Enemy Within" and "Four Wives," which had been called back for retakes and added scenes.

Monogram finished "Heroes in Blue" and RKO-Radio checked "Reno" off its active list. At Republic where, according to Mr. Herbert Yates, "what may happen after January 1 is anybody's guess," two productions were finished as 38 regular employees left the lot. They are "Abraham Lincoln Boggs" and "Jeepers Creepers."

Paramount finished "Women Behind Bars," one of those FBI stories, and Universal announced that it was through shooting "Little Accident."

ONE-HORSE TOWN FOR PREMIERE

Warner Brothers and Producer Bryan Foy have decided that State Center, Iowa, with a population of less than 1,000, is America's typical one-horse town. There the world premiere of "Pride of the Blue Grass," which stars the blind horse, "Elmer Gantry," will be held.

State Center's 250-seat theatre, managed by R. T. Hill, is open Wednesdays and Saturdays only.

Wanger's Plans

Planning temporary suspension of activities for three months subsequent to January 1st, Walter Wanger will put two productions, "House Across the Bay" and "Personal History," into production in October and is rushing preparations of another, "Dynasty of Death," which he plans to complete before the close of the year.

Sheridan Gibney has been signed to collaborate with Taylor Caldwell on the screen treatment of her novel, "Dynasty of Death." The story is a timely and intimate yarn of munitions makers and war barons in society as well as in the fields of international intrigue. Meanwhile John Meehan is adapting Vincent Sheean's "Personal History," and Kathryn Scola is working with director Archie Mayo on the final script of "House Across the Bay," which will star Joan Bennett.

Tay Garnett will complete direction of "Send Another Coffin" within a week or ten days, and "Eternally Yours" has been given the first of its series of previews.

Writer-Director

Edward H. Griffith closed a deal with Paramount for the sale of his original story, "In Old Virginia," and also was engaged to direct the production. Joel McCrea will be seen in the starring role.

Virginia Van Upp, who paired with Griffith on the Fred MacMurray-Madeleine Carroll hit, "Honeymoon in Bali," has been assigned to do the screen play.

Musical Westerns

Producer Edward Finney at Monogram has two scripts completed for his western star, Tex Ritter, who has just returned from a three months' tour of the west and south with his cowboy band.

The picures are "Roll Wagons Roll," story by Victor Adamson, Edmond Kelso and Roger Merton, and "Under Western Stars," an original by John Foster. Al Herman will direct the first, which goes into production within 10 days.

Name News

LEW SMITH, formerly production aide to FRANK LLOYD, has resigned as EDWARD SMALL'S assistant.

With "Ninotchka" completed, ERNST LUBITSCH will start "The Shop around the Corner" for MGM about mid October. MARGARET SULLIVAN and JAMES STEWART will be co-starred.

DAVID O. SELZNICK is negotiating with United Artists for the purchase of "The Swan" as a starring vehicle for INGRID BERGMAN. When made as a silent, the picture had LILLIAN GISH in the leading role.

MAX GOLDEN has rejoined 20th Century-Fox as production assistant to SOL M. WURTZEL.

JOHN GARFIELD has returned to Warners after a vacation in New York to prepare for his starring role in "Forgive Us Our Trespasses."

MGM has resumed production work on "I Take This Woman," in which SPENCER TRACY and HEDY LAMARR are featured, with W. S. VAN DYKE directing. The picture was abandoned early last summer after several weeks of shooting.

MURIEL HUTCHINSON and JACK NORTON have been added to MGM's "A Call on the President," which features LEWIS STONE, ANN SOTHERN, WILLIAM GARGAN and WALTER BRENNAN.

Newly Organized

Rainbow Productions, Inc., has been organized by EDWARD GROSS and JULES GOLDSTEIN. Mr. Gross is well known in the industry, having been associate producer with SOL LESSER on the first three Bobby Breen films and with DAVID L. LOEW on "The Gladiator." Mr. Goldstein, an eastern banker, is financing the new company.

Movies or Baseball

The average lad of 13 and 14 prefers a movie to baseball, according to results of a survey of 5,000 children of pre-high school age just released by Young America, weekly news magazine.

The children voted movies their favorite amusement—two out of five preferring that above everything else. The next most popular amusement, sports, attracts one out of four. The favorite movie of recent months was "Boys' Town," followed by "Gunga Din," "Jesse James," "Robin Hood," "Dawn Patrol," "Snow White," "Kentucky," "Marie Antoinette," "You Can't Take It with You" and "Tom Sawyer."

Tyrone Power was the idol of 10.1 per cent, and Richard Greene and Errol Flynn rated second, followed by Mickey Rooney fourth, Spencer Tracy fifth, Deanna Durbin, Sonja Henie, Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

PEOPLE

The Great Arturo (David Niven), challenged to prove he is "the world's most darning, most devilish magician," last week stepped handcuffed into a plane, bailed out 15,000 feet above Croydon airport. While thousands watched in near-panic he twisted, wriggled, squirmed free in time to jerk the ripcord for a rough landing—but too late to stop his beauteous wife Anita (Loretta Young), renegade granddaughter of Manhattan's socialite Bishop Peabody (C. Aubrey Smith), from filing suit for divorce.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Allegheny Uprising

(RKO Radio)

Historical Adventure

An almost forgotten chapter of American history is the story which led to the "Allegheny Uprising." The scene of the events is Pennsylvania during the years 1759 and 1760. The production will picture a brief but tense preliminary flaring of the pioneer spirit of independence that, a few years later, was to lead to the American Revolution.

Claire Trevor and John Wayne, who did all right for themselves in "Stagecoach," will be the story's heroine and hero. The production will also provide the name values of George Sanders, now in "Nurse Edith Cavell," Brian Donlevy, the real star of "Beau Geste," Wilfred Lawson, Robert Barrat, stage actor John F. Hamilton, Moroni Olsen, Chill Wills, Ian Wolfe, Eddie Quillan, Wallis Clarke and Monte Montague.

P. J. Wolfson, the picture's producer, also adapted the Neil Swanson novel, "The First Rebel," upon which the film is based. It is being directed by William A. Seiter, who turned out "Susannah of the Mounties."

Release date: October 27, 1939.

Too Busy to Work

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy

"Too Busy to Work" will be the 15th "Jones Family" picture. The series is now entering its fourth year. The regular cast members Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Ken Howell, George Ernest, June Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan, apparently have won the affections of audiences everywhere. The studio agrees that the series has been exceptionally profitable and the comments of exhibitors in "What the Picture Did for Me" denote general satisfaction.

To supplement the natural draw "Too Busy to Work" will have seven additional well-known featured players in supporting roles. They are comedienne Joan Davis, Chick Chandler, Marvin Stephens, Marjorie Gateson, Andrew Tombes, Irving Bacon and Helen Ericson.

As usual, the sustaining story, prepared by Robert Ellis, Helen Logan and Stanley Rauh from the combined material of two novels, "The Torchbearer" and "Your Uncle Dudley," will deal with ludicrous turmoil within the family household.

Release date: Nov. 17, 1939.

Jeepers Creepers

(Republic)

Comedy Melodrama

The Weaver Brothers and Elviry, who are featured in "Jeepers Creepers," were hillbillies for a decade or more before anyone thought up the all-embracing description for such bizarre mountain folk characters. They've been seen in person in almost every spot in the land civic-conscious enough to boast a theatre. They've been seen in pictures and heard on the radio. The public in urbane centers seem to like them, and records will likely prove, as do the Gene Autry records, that they're hot stuff also in the wide open spaces. Consequently, it is to be expected that in this picture the trio, plus "Violey," will be the exploitation assets first seized upon, with due respect for others included.

In tone the basis of this picture, an original screen play prepared by Dorrell and Stuart McGowan, is a proof that "The Golden Rule" can't be beaten. Parallels, even though remote, to the thesis of Bob Burns, "Our Leading Citizen" are involved in the proving. Yet, while melodrama, of necessity, is involved, the essence of "Jeepers Creepers" is homespun comedy.

With the Weavers will be seen Roy Rogers, Lucien Littlefield, Billy Lee, Doris Wrixon, Thurston Hall and Johnny Arthur.

Release date: To be determined.

Vigil in the Night

(RKO Radio)

Hospital Melodrama

"Vigil in the Night" is based on a novel of the same title by A. J. Cronin. The story ran serially in "Good Housekeeping" last summer. Dr. Cronin is a noted Scotch physician. He is best known to American readers and theatregoers for his famous "The Citadel," which in screen form was one of last season's outstanding successes. The locale of the story is England and the time coincides with the present—just before and in the first few months of the current war. But it is not a war story.

As adapted by P. J. Wolfson and Fred Guiol, the story details the sacrifices of a nurse made for the honor of her profession and her romance with a young doctor. While the picture will disclose the seemy side of the nursing profession as well as its triumphs in contemporary England, the theme will be approached through the eyes of a nurse and will illustrate the conditions under which the "women in white" work and the loyalty and sacrifices demanded of them.

Carole Lombard, turning to a dramatic role again, will be seen as the heroine, with Brian Aherne the doctor. Anne Shirley, Julien Mitchell, wellknown British character actor, and Robert Coote are the supporting principals. Two other newcomers, Brenda Forbes and Peter Cushing, with Rita Page round out the cast. Director George Stevens, who recently made "Vivacious Lady" and "Gunga Din," is also producing.

Release date: November 10, 1939.

Pack Up Your Troubles

Comedy

The ace draw name in "Pack Up Your Troubles" is the now adolescing Jane Withers. One of the exclusive "Big 10" of exhibitors' money making stars, she has become a streamlined, shapely miss whose harum scarum tomboy days are forever gone. While there will be a new looking Jane in the picture, she still will sing, dance and act as she has in all her previous success. The deuces wild in the deck are the Ritz Brothers, the nit wit trio. Other names available to exhibitors for exploitation purposes are: Lynn Bari, Joseph Schildkraut, Stanley Fields, Fritz Leiber, Lionel Royce, Adrienne d'Ambricourt, Georges Renavent, Leon Ames, William Von Brincken, Ed Gargan and Robert Emmett Keane.

The story basis is an original screen play by Lou Breslou and Owen Francis. Sidney Clare and Jule Styne contributed a song number for Miss Withers. The picture is being directed by H. Bruce Humberstone, maker of many of the original "Charlie Chan" series and one or two earlier Withers pictures.

"Pack Up Your Troubles" will be timely comedy told against the back ground of the World War. It will detail how the actor-Ritzes, enlisting as cavalrymen in the AEF to become nursemaids to mules and (by accident) aviators, ally themselves with Miss Withers to hoodwink the German high command, meanwhile playing hob with the American, British and French armies.

Release date: Nov. 3, 1939.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Walter Wanger's press agents set out to discover the oldest married couple in the U. S., offering a prize, all in the name of publicity and press attention for Mr. Wanger's new motion picture of "Eternally Yours." Mr. and Mrs. George M. Goben, in Lucas, Iowa, took the honors, citing their seventy-eight years—twenty-eight thousand, four hundred and eighty-nine days, six hundred and seventy-five thousand, seven hundred and forty-six hours, forty million, six hundred and forty-four thousand, seven hundred and six minutes, and two billion, four hundred and thirty-eight million, six hundred and eighty-five thousand seconds—of uninterrupted wedlock.

The Gobens were pretty nearly nosed out of the running when Mr. and Mrs. William Kelly, of Longview, Texas, cited their 81 years of marriage. But Mr. Kelly died shortly after entering the contest.

Anyway, the Wanger prize will take the Gobens from their Iowa home to Chicago, thence to New York, the World's Fair and a very lacey French suite at the tilted-nosed hostelry of the French-vintage Pierre of Fifth Avenue. The Gobens, at 93 years of age, start a wedding trip that was prevented when the Civil War broke out 78 years ago. They are the ranking members of the Vow Keepers of America, an organization of couples married more than half a century.

Phil Williams is known among his publicity writing colleagues at the March of Time office in New York for endless efficiency, for forever jotting down notes of what to do, when to do it, and how. His desk calendar pad resembles nothing short of a Hotel Astor tablecloth after a group of oldtime movie magnates finished scribbling one of those billion-dollar colossal mergers in years gone by.

Phil jots down notes to remind him of everything but his luncheon hour—his devastating appetite tells him about that. And, so, it was with no surprise that Al Sindlinger, advertising manager for March of Time, in search of some information on Phil's schedules, and inspecting Phil's calendar pad in Phil's absence on a combination vacation-honeymoon, came across Phil's jotted note: "Sunday, October 1—get married, 2 P.M."

He took the last known picture of the White Star liner as she steamed away from Ireland to sea.

The recent feud between the Associated Actors and Artistes of America and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees uncovered, among other items, an interesting point in the Screen Actors' Guild basic agreement. According to the text, whenever the contract uses the term "masculine gender" it "includes the feminine and neuter." Is it Gertrude Stein influence or is the Guild taking a crack at some of its own membership?

WHEN THE FIRST FLUSH of war fear broke out in London, virtually all of the film business hurriedly ran to the suburbs away from anticipated bombs marked: "Made in Germany." London offices of the American distributors were no exception, and so the panic found the Columbia Pictures staff setting out, for the glory of old Columbia and the Cohns, for Wadhurst Castle, at Wadhurst, Sussex, a big, roaming place which they bought or leased for the purpose.

Built of stone in the mediaeval style, with battlemented walls and turrets, the house contains scores of well-proportioned rooms and ample cellarage, the latter most important if Hitler airplane engines started droning in the immediate vicinity.

Grounds, gardens and well-wooded parklands, in which there is even a private golf course of nine holes, run to about 100 acres.

It was to this castle dating back into the days of old, when knights were bold, that Columbia Pictures took its forces from Wardour Street—its film salesmen and film cutters, stock boys and typist girls, its managers and assistants.

But when they got there they found that all would need bicycles, for the building inside was just a mile and a half from the front lodge gates, and so one and all went back to Wardour Street.

Built to accommodate but 12 passengers in her six small cabins, the papers of the freighter listed 201 passengers—and Tom Mix's horse, Tony, Jr.

When Joseph M. Schenck, 20th Century-Fox board chairman, recently took departure from Hollywood for Mexico and points below, Billy Wilkerson's local film paper, The Hollywood Reporter, reported: "Some of the boys out on the 20th Century-Fox lot got a great kick out of Joe Schenck's answer to the question, "Where will you be stopping in Mexico?' with Joe answering, 'The Hotel Reformer.' The funny part of it is he WILL be at the Hotel Reformer."

THE FUNNY PART OF IT IS that the name is REFORMA—not REFORMER.

Maurice Bergman, publicity and advertising general for the Cohns' Columbia, is doing alright with Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Comes to Washington," which concerns the ups and downs of a young U. S. Senator. For one thing, he had a pretty good-looking brochure arrive on drama editors' desks the country over almost coincidental with the opening of the big argument over neutrality laws in Congress, when the eyes of the country were focusing on their favorite Senators and Congressmen assembled in special session. The Washington papers went for the brochure in a big way, some of them giving art and type attention thereto; it's a rarity to see a newspaper giving publicity to a piece of direct-mail advertising. When money is to be spent on advertising, the papers want it spent in their pages.

Washington is waiting to see what Capra did with his set building, always on the alert to dig at inaccuracies. Before building the set for Senate chambers, the director almost started a spy scare, poking around Washington for floor plans of the Capitol. Because of red tape and "national emergencies" he had to take most background shots from a sightseeing bus. When he finally did get into the building for inspection, he drew plans from which he built up even the scratches on the Senators' desks, duplicating inkwells, favorite pencils and other gadgets that administrators and legislators flourish when in action. He even calculated, for casting purposes, that the composite Senator conforms physically to specifications of 52 years of age, is five feet five inches high and weighs 174 pounds.

A Sunday concert on a nationwide hookup of German radio stations for soldiers in the front lines was interrupted Sunday night for a request number which the Nazi announcer said had been asked by French officers and men in the Maginot Line on the opposing side.

The announcer said that the French soldiers had put through a telephone call to the German Broadcasting Company, adding that it was a "pleasure" for the Nazi radio to "oblige" the French troops, and the French song was played immediately. The song—"Speak to Me of Love."

Exhibitor note:

Anna Neagle, London star of Herbert Wilcox, now starring in this country both for Mr. Wilcox and RKO, was describing her early British film days to a New York Evening Post interviewer, recalling Producer Wilcox's "string of inexpensive, cheerful little Grade B films"—"Limelight," "Three Maxims" and "Girl in the Street."

Miss Neagle recalled particularly "Girl in the Street." "I had tap and ballet numbers, two songs and a cabaret scene," she remembered. "It didn't make much money but we all had a lot of fun making it—and that counts so much."

"Carl Laemmle saw the movies develop from a shoestring to a major industry," observed the New York Evening Sun, adding: 'But he probably never thought when he opened his first nickelodeon that the movies would ever get tied up with the crockery business."

U. S. MOVES TO RESTRAIN SCHINES; COURT ACTIONS ON SIX OTHER SUITS

Griffiths Deny Trying to Block Competition; Crescent Circuit Demands Bill of Particulars; Adelphi Case Postponed

One major attack by the United States and half a dozen skirmishes between the Government and independent exhibitor plaintiffs with circuit and distributor defendants highlighted the week's anti-trust suit developments.

The U. S. moved for an injunction to restrain the Schine Circuit in the east from further expansion pending disposition of the suit it has pending against the chain.

The Griffiths in Oklahoma denied it is trying to block competition.

Crescent Amusement in the south demanded a bill of particulars.

Taking of dispositions continued in the Maine Millinocket case:

The Chicago Gary Theatre suit proceeded with the taking of additional testimony.

Postponement was granted in hearings in the Chicago Adelphi Theatre case.

Majors Get More Time

Meanwhile, time for the majors to answer or to move for modification of the Government's 68 interrogatories in the "key" anti-trust suit was extended in New York on Monday from October 7th to October 17th; this having been disclosed by the U. S. Attorney's office last Friday.

The Government's time to take similar action in reference to the 38 interrogatories filed by United Artists and directed to the Government have also been extended to October 17th.

Schine Decision Reserved

Decision was reserved by Federal Judge John Knight Monday in Buffalo on the Department of Justice motion for a preliminary injunction against the Schine Circuit. Continuance of arguments and all motions for bills of particulars were set for Tuesday, October 10th.

The Government motion asks that the Schine exhibitor defendants be restrained from acquiring any further theatres, or from opening any they own which are closed, pending determination of its anti-trust suit seeking dissolution of the circuit. No preliminary relief was asked against the major distributor defendants.

Judge Knight heard arguments for the defendents by Frederick H. Wood, of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine and Wood, representing the Schine interests, and John Lord O'Brien, representing Warner Brothers, Vitagraph and Paramount; and for the plaintiff by Seymour Krieger, special attorney for the U. S. Department of Justice.

Mr. Wood said that his clients are not engaged in interstate commerce and that exhibition of films is purely "local business" and not within the realm of the Sherman Anti-trust Act.

Mr. O'Brien asked for dismissal on the grounds that the injunction would "freeze out the film market for distributors."

Mr. Krieger stated that the Schine interests used "circuit buying power" to restrain trade and asserted that circuit buying power "constitutes a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law."

In the affidavits filed by the Government in its appeal for an injunction, eight exhibitors or representatives of exhibitor interests participated.

Pete J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, testified that the Schine interests forced exhibitors to sell, lease or become Schine partners, so that there is no competition with Schine theatres in 17 situations.

Thornton Kelly, executive secretary of Allied Theatre Owners of New York, said that "the major distributors let Schine tie up all pictures at lower prices."

William Tishkoff and Max Fogel, said that the Schines made threats to build a theatre within the area in which they had planned to build, and so acquired a 50 per cent interest in the house, in Rochester.

John Buchman, of Delaware, Ohio, stated that he lost all first run contracts after a competitor had sold out to the Schines.

Richard de Toto, of Geneva, New York, stated that the Schines prevented him from building theatres by threatening to build competitive houses.

H. H. Owens of Barbourville, Kentucky, said that he was offered substantial sums not to construct a house.

H. P. Wallace, of the Capitol, Auburn, New York, stated that when the Schines took over three houses, the Jefferson, Palace and Strand, he lost the product of the eight majors, and that attempts were made to buy his lease and to get city officials to close his theatre.

Answers Filed in Momand Case

Answers have been filed in Federal Court in Oklahoma City on the application for an injunction made by Oklahoma Theatres to procure pictures for its Odeon Theatre in Shawnee.

The plaintiff had asked that the court force the defendant distributors to sell its film not already contracted for in Shawnee.

The Griffith Amusement Company and the majors except United Artists filed answers denying any attempt to restrain competition and asking for dismissal of the suit.

Crescent Asks Particulars

Defendants in the U. S. anti-trust suit against the Crescent Amusement Company, the Lyric Amusement Company, the Nu-Strand Corporation, the Cumberland Amusement Company, Strand Enterprises, Rockwood Amusements, Cherokee Amusements, Kentucky Amusements and various individuals, last week-end filed a motion for a bill of particulars in U. S. district court, Nashville, Tennessee.

Le Page Deposition Taken

The deposition of Frank Le Page of the Millinocket Theatres was taken last week in Bangor, Maine, in his anti-trust suit against the majors and the Samuel Kurson theatre interests.

Immerman of B. & K. Testifies

Walter Immerman, general manager of Balaban & Katz, was questioned Monday in a hearing in the Gary Theatre case in Chicago. Max Halperin, Warner booking manager, was similarly questioned Tuesday.

Adelphi Case Postponed

The Adelphi Theatre case, in Chicago, was postponed last week by Federal Judge James Wilkerson until November 14th. At that time the court will rule on limiting depositions and striking out certain portions of the complaint.

PUBLIC SEATING CODE EFFECTIVE

New trade practice rules for the public seating industry, providing for the elimination and prevention of false advertising, deceptive selling methods and certain other unfair trade practices in the sale of seating to theatres and other public places, were promulgated this week by the Federal Trade Commission at Washington.

The new regulations embody a revision of the voluntary code adopted by the industry in 1931, the changes to large extent being designed to incorporate the restrictions of the Robinson-Patman anti-price discrimination act.

Details of the situation were developed at a public hearing held by the commission on August 17th, at which representatives of the industry explained the desirability of revision of the rules.

Manufacturers' sales of seats to theatres and other establishments aggregate approximately $25,000,000 a year.

Schaefer Renews Depinet Contract

Ned E. Depinet, RKO Radio vice-president in charge of distribution, was signed to a new long term contract to continue in his present capacity by George J. Schaefer, the company's president, last Friday before Mr. Schaefer left for the coast.

Arriving in Hollywood, Mr. Schaefer found six films in production at the company's studios, and five finished and being edited.

Leading off is "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," which has been selected by Mr. Schaefer as the company's 1939-40 headliner. Based on the Victor Hugo novel, the film has Charles Laughton in the title role. Also in production are "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," with Raymond Massey as Lincoln; "That's Right, You're Wrong," a comedy co-starring Kay Kyser and Adolph Menjou; "Reno," with Richard Dix; "Vigil in the Night," based on the A. J. Cronin novel, co-starring Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley. "Escape to Paradise," starring Bobby Breen, and "Swiss Family Robinson," the Gene Towne-Graham Baker "Play's the Thing" production.

Finished and being edited are "Meet Dr. Christian," starring Jean Hersholt; "Allegheny Uprising," co-starring John Wayne and Claire Trevor; "The Flying Deuces," with Laurel and Hardy; "Sued for Libel," with Kent Taylor and Linda Hayes, and "Marshal of Mesa City," with George O'Brien.

Mr. Schaefer also found three picture nearly ready to go before the cameras: "Heart of Darkness," "Legion of the Lawless," and "Passport to Life."

EDUCATOR CONDEMNS CENSORSHIP OF FILMS

Director of Film Study Division Wants State Board of Censors Dissolved

A motion picture screen in America free from political censorship is the aim of Columbia University, one of the country's oldest and largest schools of higher learning.

The abolition of all forms of political censorship of motion pictures, and principally the dissolution of the New York State board of censors, headed by Irwin Esmond, is advocated by Dr. Russell Potter, director of the Division of Motion Picture Study at Columbia University, in his annual report to Professor James C. Egbert, director of University Extension, as submitted last week and disclosed to the press by Columbia's Department of Public Information.

Plans Fight for Free Screen

The University, therefore, has made plans, through its Division of Motion Picture Study, actively to work for a free screen—"a goal to be achieved only by the abolition of all political censorship and by convincing the producers that some pictures must be made on the adult level," Dr. Potter declares in his formal report.

Neither Dr. Potter in his accompanying report nor the report itself asks for abolishment of the industry's own Production Code, because that is "an industry matter," although the Production Code is described as "the first obstacle Hollywood meets," censorwise.

Columbia's University Extension, in conjunction with the Museum of Modern Art Film Library and the Museum's officers, John Abbott, director, and Iris Barry, curator, conducts a course on the motion picture—historical, aesthetic and technique—believing that "the motion picture, liveliest and youngest of the arts, has lately assumed new importance in the academic world, and as a medium of expression which exercises a powerful influence on society and is peculiarly characteristic of our culture, it concerns students of sociology as profoundly as it concerns students of the fine arts."

Technically, the motion picture has grown up, but censorship and censorship keep them in diapers, according to the report of Dr. Potter, who is also director of the Institute of Arts and Sciences at Columbia.

The University Division, he explains, opposes political control of motion pictures on the ground that it is un-American, inevitably and wholly stupid in its administration, and an unfair hidden tax on the producer, the exhibitor and the public.

"The brains, the talent and ability, the technical resources for giving us motion pictures that would challenge the mind and stir the emotions of adult audiences are in Hollywood," he says, "but they are used to cut out paper dolls and make saccharine celluloid stews. The Hollywood set-up may be blamed for some of this but not for all. Hollywood has the censor jitters."

Recommending the establishment of a "Motion Picture Workshop" in University Extension, Dr. Potter says that within the next quarter of a century there is going to be an increasing demand for teachers properly qualified to teach the motion picture in high schools and colleges. The university which first establishes such a workshop as this will render a unique service in the educational world, he adds.

"The Production Code, administered by the Joseph Breen office, is the first obstacle Hollywood meets," the report states. "Here producers are told in advance what they must not do and say in their pictures if those pictures are to receive the stamp of approval of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

State Boards "Pressure Groups"

"Then there are the various official state boards of censorship to pass. And finally there are several highly organized pressure groups which must be pleased—the D.A.R., the Catholic Legion for Decency, the East-Coast and West-Coast preview committees of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Council of Federated Church Women, the National Society of New England Women, and many others.

"The administration of the Production Code is an industry matter and as such is one that must be controlled by the industry itself. The question of state and regional censor boards, however, is another matter, and one upon which every citizen may speak his mind openly and with the full assurance that he has every right to speak.

"In the past we have devoted at least one meeting each year to this question of censorship, showing films that had come under the ban of the New York censor—'Spring Shower,' a Hungarian film, through the courtesy of Irving Shapiro of World Pictures; 'Remous,' a French film, through the courtesy of Arthur Mayer of Mayer and Burstyn; and, this past year, the widely discussed 'The Puritan,' through the courtesy of Jean Lenauer of Lenauer International Films. And when the state censor put the ban on 'Yes, My Darling Daughter," we immediately offered our screen to Warner Brothers for the picture.

"In every case it was the general opinion of the groups viewing these pictures that not one of them could be rated as 'obscene, indecent, immoral, sacrilegious,' or could be considered 'of such a character that its exhibition would tend to corrupt morals or incite to crime.'

"Discussing plans for the academic study of motion pictures, Dr. Potter declares that a workshop should offer the properly qualified student sound training, authentic and carefully integrated, in the various arts and techniques that now serve the motion picture. . . . This training should be designed to qualify him for a position within the industry itself or for training others.

"Most Lively Art Form"

"The motion picture, in any of its various branches, cannot be taught as a study course as academic painting is taught, as a course in Greek, or one in mathematics is taught. Those are dead, static things. They are fixed, and it is easy to dogmatize about them. But the movies are the most exciting and the most lively of all contemporary art forms, the only art which perfectly expresses the age of the machine, and the art which today has the greatest social significance of them all.

"To be effective, such a workshop must not be casually organized; it must not be merely a collection of more or less related courses.

"The workshop would work in every way possible to further the formation of amateur cinema clubs in high schools and communities, furnishing technical advice and, wherever possible and desirable, supplying direct guidance. It is even possible that it would cooperate with various agencies in the state, cultural and governmental, in making documentary pictures showing the resources of the state and the activities of its people."

CIVIL LIBERTIES' GROUPS TO MEET

Fourteen organizations concerned with various phases of civil liberties have thus far joined the American Civil Liberties Union in officially sponsoring the National Conference on Civil Liberties in the Present Emergency to be held at the Hotel Biltmore in New York October 13-14 under the auspices of a distinguished committee headed by William Allen White.

After a dinner opening the conference on October 13th will be addressed by Attorney General Frank Murphy, Senator Robert A. Wagner and Senator Elbert D. Thomas. The program will start off with "Censorship of Communication," dealing with government censorship in relation to radio, press, stage, motion pictures, books and periodicals.

Other topics are: "The Rights of Aliens," "The Rights of Negroes," "Rights of Labor and Employer," "The Law and Civil Liberties," "Academic Freedom" and "Religious Liberty."

One Ban Is Appealed, Another Is Upheld

Notice of appeal has been filed in Albany on the Law Division of the N. Y. Department of Education in the matter of "The Birth of a Baby," a picture rejected by the Motion Picture Division and on which subsequent appeals to the Board of Regents and supreme court were unavailing.

Last spring, the appellate division upheld the Regents and the Motion Picture Division by a split vote, which gave the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, Inc. and Sam Citron, appellants, the right to appeal to the Court of Appeals, where the next litigation will undoubtedly take place.

Still another attempt to obtain a license for the exhibition of the much-disputed "Ecstasy," which has strung all along New York State's tribunal system in the last four years, was unavailing when the Appellate Division, Third Department in Albany unanimously upheld the determination of the Board of Regents in banning the film last Thursday.

"Ecstasy," originally produced by Eletka Productions, of Prague, Czechoslovakia, on which United States distribution rights are owned by Eureka Productions, New York, was the subject of courtroom scrutiny by Appellate Division judges J. P. Hill, F. W. Bliss, J. C. Crapser, C. J. Heffernan and G. J. Schenck in Albany early in September. Two years ago, the original film was displayed there, the case marking the first time a high New York State court had allowed the exhibition of a picture into evidence on a factual basis.

The latest version of "Ecstasy," which stars Hedy La Marr, now of Hollywood and known as Hedy Keisler in Czechoslovakia, was said to have been considerably toned down before its resubmission to Motion Picture Director Irwin Esmond last February. Mr. Esmond, however, still banned the picture as "indecent" and "immoral" and his verdict was upheld in a subsequent appeal to the Board of Regents. In June of this year, Supreme Court Justice Gilbert Schenck refused Eureka Production's plea for a trial by civil jury in sending the litigation to the Appellate Division.

Disbursements and $50 costs were also assessed against Eureka Productions, Inc., which was represented by Attorney Henry Pearlman.

UNIONS AND OWNERS IN CONTRACT BARGAINING

New York Circuits and Projectionists Seek Fifth Arbiter; Chicago Operators Get Raise

The usual seasonal expiration of working contracts between projectionists and stagehands unions, principally of IATSE locals, with exhibitors, brings a score of conferences between both parties for bargaining on new agreements governing wages and hours and working conditions. This week, New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Cleveland, Wilmington and Vancouver in Canada were the principal scenes of negotion, with little or no serious trouble showing, except in New York, where a drawn out wage dispute has brought in an arbitrator. Some picketing was noticed elsewhere.

Seek Arbiter

Representatives of theatre circuits and the New York projectionists' Local 306 were meeting this week, to adjust wages, and to select a neutral fifth member, for the arbitration board, which, under terms of the contract now in existence, adjusts wages when asked.

The neutral arbitrator, at mid week still unnamed, had been chosen, but approval of both sides, and then of a federal court judge, was necessary.

The union has been asking for a 25 per cent wage increase and two weeks' vacation, with pay. Negotiations were stalemated by disagreement, there having been two members of each side on the board.

Chicago theatre projectionists won a five per cent wage increase last week, retroactive to September 1st.

Picketing Spread Threatened

In St. Louis, Robert Roessel, attorney for the projectionists' Local 143, warned that picketing of Fanchon and Marco Theatres, this week confined to six neighborhood houses, might spread to 19 others, unless a dispute over the hiring of nine projectionists allegedly favorable to John Nick, was settled. Mr. Nick is the ousted head of the local. The nine men were suspended.

The Greater Cincinnati Independent Exhibitors, Inc., has signed with the projectionists' local 327, for two years, providing for a $5 weekly raise for the first year, and another the second year.

Cleveland's major theatre circuits have signed with the projectionists' local 160. Pact is for one year, and does not change conditions or wage scales now.

In Wilmington, Del., projectionists' local 473 has appealed to the state supreme court against a chancery court ruling prohibiting their picketing of the Rialto theatre, upon application by the theatre's operators.

In Vancouver, British Columbia, the local operators' union and the Vancouver, New Westminster and District Trades and Labor Council lost their appeal against a $2,000 damage award for picketing the Hollywood theatre, in Vancouver.

The court of appeals and supreme court also upheld the restraining injunction.

FLIPPEN HEADS GUILD, RADIO ACTORS ELECT

The American Guild of Variety Artists, which replaced the American Federation of Actors as the "vaudeville" union for the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, has chosen Jay C. Flippen pro tem president. Eddie Cantor was the former temporary president. The guild's directors also appointed Mrs. Dorothy Bryant as executive secretary, succeeding Maida Reade who resigned last week.

In Hollywood, officers of the United Studio Technicians' Guild, defeated by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees in a National Labor Relations Board studio election, on Monday filed a petition with the board, stating that the election was invalid because the producers "financed the IATSE."

The American Federation of Radio Artists' New York local over the weekend announced election of 21 members to its board, divided into three groups, actors, announcers, and singers.

Members of the Chicago Federation of Musicians employed in the Columbia Broadcasting System studios in that city, received a 10 per cent wage increase, effective last Sunday, under terms of an existing contract.

The AFRA is claiming jurisdiction over the Chicago radio musicians.

National Decency Legion Classifies 12 Pictures

Of 12 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were approved for general patronage and six were listed as unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Arizona Kid," "Chip of the Flying 'U'," "The Kansas Terrors," "No Place to Go," "Outpost of the Mounties," "Seventeen." Class A-2, unobjectionable for Adults: "Betrayal" (French), "Dancing Co-Ed," "Here I Am a Stranger," "En Kivinnas Ansikte" (Swedish), "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," "Rio."

"Fugitive" Wins Poll

In a poll of readers, conducted by five New York newspapers, Warner Brothers' "I am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang" led other films. The poll was in the form of an essay contest on "The Motion Picture I Liked Best, and Why."

Dembow Resigns F & M Position

Sam Dembow, vice-president of Fanchon & Marco, Inc., this week handed in his resignation, and Harry C. Arthur, general manager, prepared to take over the film buying and general product supervision for the circuit in addition to management duties.

Mr. Dembow remains a partner in Fanchon & Marco due to a substantial investment made when he joined the firm in April, 1938, as vice-president in executive charge of contact with film companies and the industry generally.

His retirement from the firm will not become effective until disposition of his financial interest. His resignation is said to be due to disagreement with other officers over theatre operating policies. Mr. Dembow is considering other connections but may take a vacation before deciding.

Mr. Dembow, a former Paramount home office theatre executive, has been associated with the Fanchon & Marco enterprises for several years. About two years ago he became an active operations executive for the company.

ALLIED SPLITS IN NEW YORK STATE; OTHER GROUPS HOLD MEETINGS

Executive Secretary Calls Session in Syracuse to Form New Unit to Affiliate with National; Michigan Meets

The death throes of the ill-fated distributors' trade practice code continue to disturb exhibitor organizations—as organizations such as Michigan Allied, and various exhibitor leaders like Ray Branch of that organization and Harry Brandt of New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association, see hope for its resurrection in some form; as other exhibitor organizations continue to chortle over its demise; and as sparks of the inter-factional fights it caused during its formulation, once again blaze.

Tilt in New York Allied

This week, the long foaming fight between the "loyal" and the "insurgent" sections of the New York Allied came to a head. The organization had been expelled from the national Allied States Association for "disloyalty"; this meaning the opposition of its leader, Max Cohen, to the national association's disapproval of the code during the summer, its faith in legislation against self-regulation, and its outright rejection of the code in June.

Mr. Cohen's unit had continued to use the Allied name, and he said he would call a meeting of his organization to chart a future course, and have its state sectional units reaffirm their unity.

However, this week, over the signature of E. Thornton Kelly, executive secretary, a call was issued for independent New York State exhibitors to meet in Syracuse Tuesday, to form a new Allied unit, to be affiliated with the National Allied.

The meeting was described as "routine" with few members in attendance. However, another meeting was set for October 17th, at which time affiliation with national Allied and the Cohen's leadership, is to be discussed.

In attendance also were Sidney Samuelson, member of the national Allied's executive board; Frank Lydon, eastern regional vice-president of national Allied; Lee Newbury, president of the New Jersey Allied; and Arthur Howard, business manager of the Independent Theatre Owners of New England, a national Allied affiliate.

Mr. Cohen, in New York, branded the Syracuse meeting a "fiasco."

Says Majority Favors National

Mr. Kelly declared that, on a state wide tour, he found the majority of the New York Allied's members favorable to renewed affiliation with national Allied.

Mr. Cohen replied to Mr. Kelly and to the insurrection in his organization, in a written statement, on Tuesday. Said he:

"These efforts point definitely to an attempt on the part of national Allied to raid the membership of the New York Allied. New York Allied suddenly has become the immediate concern of the national Allied, and we wonder whether the work of the New York Allied has been so great and progressive that the national organization fears that the New York Allied overshadows it in national importance."

Mr. Cohen's statement read Mr. Kelly out of his organization.

He also claimed support of his local unit officers, including Rapley Merriam, Syracuse regional vice-president.

Mr. Cohen blamed the national Allied leaders, president Colonel H. A. Cole and Abraham F. Myers general counsel for a "black outlook" for independent exhibitors. He pointed out that the Government suit, which they have declared will, if victorious, make the lot of the independent better, will take years now, because of the international situation; and that, if the national Allied leaders had not rejected the code, the independent exhibitor would have some relief now.

"Because of their short-sightedness, and by their refusal to continue negotiations," he said, "they have swept aside any and all possibility of the independent exhibitor receiving a 'bill of rights.' They have filibustered and badgered about, completely disregarding the all-important fact: namely, that the independent exhibitor is looking for relief now, not a decade hence."

Points to Record

In a supplemental bulletin, Mr. Cohen pointed at the good record of his organization; at its opposition to various harmful measures in the New York legislature, at its part in securing of the government anti-trust suit against the Schine circuit, at concessions gained from the distributors.

The friction between Mr. Cohen and the national Allied leaders came to public notice last May, at the first annual convention of the New York Allied. At that time, he and his organization were forced to make public declarations of loyalty to the Allied stand, but it was known at the time that Mr. Cohen regarded the national leaders' refusal to accept the trade practice code and insistence upon legislation and litigation as an industry cure-all, as incompatible with his own views.

At mid-week, it appeared that the split in the New York Allied would resolve into a break between upstate and downstate exhibitors.

The Michigan Allied, meeting from Monday through Wednesday of this week at Kalamazoo, that state, considered plans for a revival of the trade practice code. Ray Branch, the unit's president, had said in a pre-convention bulletin, that he favored giving the code another chance, and that it needed revival.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, will address the meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western New York Monday, in Buffalo. A. C. Hayman, president, will preside.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas will meet in Little Rock, October 15th and 16th, in semi-annual convention.

INTERSTATE TO START NEWSREEL THEATRE

A newsreel theatre showing more than an hour of newsreel shots twice a week, with the bill rounded out by short subjects, will be inaugurated Monday, October 9th by the Interstate Circuit.

The Melba Theatre, in Dallas, has been selected for the new presentation, with Mrs. Besa Short, the circuit's short subject head, will be in charge of the program, and will work with a journalist and a history professor in addition to Ainsley Wood, manager of the house.

The outbreak of the European war is said to have been responsible for the idea as conceived by James Owen Cherry, the circuit's city manager in Dallas.

Oklahoma Allied Drops Buying Pool

At last week's Allied of Oklahoma convention, at which officers were elected and at which affiliation was voted with the national organization, Colonel H. A. Cole, national Allied chief, personally aided the proceedings.

The organization dropped the proposed Oklahoma buying pool, the success of which was to have determined its adoption by all Allied units.

George Miskovsky, state representative, outlined his proposed chain store tax, which will probably include theatres; William High, another state legislator, outlined the same type legislation; Dr. W. B. Bizzell, president of the University of Oklahoma, and Dr. A. B. Adams, the university business school dean, spoke on visual education and business monopoly, respectively.

Connecticut Allied Elects Officers

The Allied Theatres of Connecticut, meeting in New Haven this Tuesday, elected Al Schuman, president; Charles Repass, first vice-president; Joseph Reed, second vice-president; Barney Calechman, treasurer; Lawrence C. Caplan, executive secretary; Dr. J. B. Fishman, chairman of the board of directors.

Jersey Allied Vetoes Admission Boosting

On Monday, the Allied of New Jersey voted against raising of theatre admission prices. It was decided that economic trends should first manifest themselves at the box-office before decisions be made.

There were complaints, at the meeting, that majors were violating their announced business practice revisions, especially in cancellation and shorts-forcing.

Wisconsin ITPA Delays Activity

The death on Monday, of president Charles Maertz of the Wisconsin Independent Theatres Protective Association, delayed for 30 days all activities of the organization. The association was scheduled to meet on October 23rd and 24th in Milwaukee. The association at a meeting last week studied high film rentals.

But to my surprise it did top business for me and gave better satisfaction than some of his graded "A" features, which goes to show a critic is wrong about 60 per cent of the time. Give me more "Blondies." Running time, 72 minutes.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

CALIFORNIA FRONTIER: Buck Jones, Carmen Bailey—Buck Jones still has many favorites here and continues to be a continual stimulant to our box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COAST GUARD: Randolph Scott, Frances Dee, Ralph Bellamy, Walter Connolly—Here is tops in anybody's program. We feel that this picture would draw in small towns where the fans crave action on any day of the week. Just a swell picture for action fans. Tops, excellent. The best picture that Scott ever made and the balance of the cast does not do the picture any harm. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOOD GIRLS GO TO PARIS: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell, Walter Connolly—Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell do very fine acting here. Picture is fine light comedy and pleased all. Running time, 80 minutes.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

MAN FROM SUNDOWN, THE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—A very good western. Charles Starrett certainly holds a good place among the best of the western stars. Songs in these are very good, too. Westerns as they are made now are gaining their place among the intellectuals. Played August 19.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Richard Barthelmess, Thomas Mitchell—A very fine picture in every respect. Fine directing, fine acting and full of suspense. Just a little rough for my lady trade, though. I didn't do the business I expected. Running time, 121 minutes. Played August 14-15. —B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Thomas Mitchell, Richard Barthelmess—We gave this picture the works as we had entered the exploitation contest. But after we saw it we felt that we really had something to sell. Business good.—Harland Rankin, Palaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PARENTS ON TRIAL: Jean Parker, Johnny Downs, Noah Berry, Jr.—This is a "B" picture that clicked. Nothing big but satisfactory. Running time, 57 minutes. Played August 22-23.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

First National

ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES: "Dead End Kids," Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas—This was just fair. Some liked it and some were disgusted so I recommend it for the midweek change. Well directed poor story.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY: Edward G. Robinson, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas—I thought this would prove a natural and it flopped. I guess I talked too much about how true to fact it was. Mr. and Mrs. Public want romance and fiction. If I even whisper that the picture is factual they shun it like a snake. I feel sure I slipped on this as the picture was interesting and did please those who came.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—This was high class drama and heavy. Deserves to be shown in every community but doesn't make people enjoy themselves. It is a work of art and if you are fan enough to enjoy movies for art's sake this will please. If you want relaxation and pleasure, it certainly won't fill the bill.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Humphrey Bogart—A swell picture which contains the usual wonderful acting of Bette Davis. I should say that George Brent always comes forward perfectly with his part also. Give it all you've got. It's OK. Running time, 106 minutes. Played August 10-11.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Humphrey Bogart—If you want satisfied patrons, play this one. Of course, farmers will not come to see this type of picture but those who did come were well satisfied. Bette certainly deserves praise for this one. Running time, 106 minutes. Played August 27-28.—Edward W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—This picture was played in the Sunday spot and it definitely is not a Sunday picture. It is grim, brutal and in spite of that they liked it. The characterizations of the inmates (and it all takes place in a big house) were great. Well directed. Miss Bryan was very good in her role, as were Cagney and Raft. Releases are not coming through fast enough and that was the reason for the Sunday date. But I would not want this type there if I could avoid it. It is a better Friday-Saturday picture for the small town and there it would be a natural.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

KID FROM KOKOMO, THE: Wayne Morris, Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, May Robson—A good fun picture. This one killed May Robson. It will satisfy most anyone, but business was bad. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 20-21.—Edward W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

NANCY DREW, REPORTER: Bonita Granville, John Litel, Frankie Thomas—Good little action play which pleased on family night, but failed to draw. Running time, 68 minutes. Played September 19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Grand National

SIX-GUN RHYTHM: Tex Fletcher, Joan Barclay —Best western played for months. Good singing and plenty of action. This is Fletcher's first picture. A few more of him will make him have drawing power. Played September 8-9.—W. T. Fay, Illinois Theatre, Metropolis, Ill. Rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker—This picture drew fair. A good little picture but not up to Metro's standard. Running time, 86 minutes. Played August 16-17.—Edward W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

CITADEL, THE: Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell—A very fine picture which did only normal business. Nevertheless we cannot help but sing praises for this picture and know your better class of people will enjoy it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS: Robert Donat, Greer Garson—This started rather slow but fortunately it picked up as it went along. It might be what you would call a prestige picture. Highly appreciated by the audience that likes the finer things. Donat turned in a fine performance, as did Miss Garson, and this new foreign menace definitely has that something that it takes in a supporting role.—A. E. Hancock, Columbit Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

STRONGER THAN DESIRE: Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce—A good little picture, finished in every respect, as only MGM can do, but still not heavy enough for an extended run. The big complaint from the audience is "Why don't they give Pidgeon better parts?" That sums up the entire production. Good but not good enough. Running time, 78 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON!: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Pleased them all. A very good jungle picture with plenty of action and comedy to suit the majority of movie fans. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 17-18.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON!: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Sheffield—A picture which is even better than the good business it does. Give us more of these, Mr. Lion, and we don't care how loud you roar. Some of the most beautiful scenes I have ever seen and the kid in this picture is as good as they come. Running time, 82 minutes. Played August 28-29.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

THREE COMRADES: Robert Taylor, Robert Young, Margaret Sullavan, Franchot Tone—Especially timely now. Upped business considerably and picture is excellent. Played September 13-15.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—A perfect picture. Not much can be said about this super production that with the advertising that Metro gave this picture this attendance should be more than satisfying. Top playing time. Running time, 100 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Joan Fontaine, Mary Boland, Virginia Weidler—Two hours and half of picture full of women and not a man in it. Difficult to sell, in my opinion. Mailed cards to "ladies only" mailing list. Women came and liked it; some raved about it and strange to say the men seemed to enjoy it as well. I anticipated some male walkouts, but nary a one. The picture has something. If you can sell it your worries are over. Running time, 137 minutes. Played September 24-25.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

HOTEL IMPERIAL: Isa Miranda, Ray Milland—This was fair entertainment. Rather followed the old classic "Grand Hotel," but didn't have enough box office names to draw a crowd. It classifies as one of the "neutrals," has no friends nor no enemies.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

INVITATION TO HAPPINESS: Fred MacMurray, Irene Dunne—Another production that disappointed both Paramount and me. I guess I just haven't adjusted myself to poor business, but be that as it may the people who came liked the picture.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

ISLAND OF LOST MEN: Anna May Wong, J. Carroll Naish, Anthony Quinn—Average picture that failed to get extra response from our easy-to-please audience. Running time, 63 minutes. Played September 16-19.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

played this on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday to poor business. It cost me 57% of the gross. I can remember back some months ago when I was talking to film salesmen and it was mentioned that "if the pictures don't earn it we won't take it. You can always depend upon us to adjust prices to fit the conditions." Yes, you can, if one lives long enough.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT: Claudette Colbert, Don Ameche, Francis Lederer, John Barrymore, Mary Astor—This was a swell show and people did not seem to want to see it. I was very pleased with the entertainment and disappointed in the crowd. So was Paramount and their checker, as they called him off on the second night.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

NIGHT WORK: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—Ruggles and Boland team still good here. Pleased all. Played September 9-12.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

NIGHT WORK: Mary Boland, Charles Ruggles—This is the kind of a program picture that if you charged them a dime for seeing it they think you will have gypped them. A lot of the audience walked out on it and you know that they are justified.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SOME LIKE IT HOT: Bob Hope, Shirley Ross, Gene Krupa and His Orchestra, Una Merkel—This one is a cluck. Hope was terrible and so was Shirley Ross. It was so hot that patrons got burned the first night and walked out. Gene Krupa's Band very good. Running time, 65 minutes.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—I thought this a pretty good picture but some of my customers didn't like it. Business was only fair. Running time, 94 minutes. Played September 20-21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

BLUE MONTANA SKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Jnne Storey—This was a good western. Gene is the best bet I have for outdoor adventure pictures.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

MAN OF CONQUEST: Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Edward Ellis, Joan Fontaine—If any of the majors had this on their programs, it would have been in the higher brackets. They would probably tell us it was another $3,000,000 picture and soaked us accordingly. Very good. Plenty of action, good direction. Running time, 98 minutes. Played August 27-28.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

WESTERN JAMBOREE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Autrys always do business in tis town. This is the same kind of a horse opera as the rest of the Autrys. I can't see why they can't give him a good story to work on. I can't see why he has kept his popularity as long as this. Running time, 56 minutes. Played August 18-19.—Edward W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

WOMAN DOCTOR: Frieda Inescort, Henry Wilcoxon, Claire Dodd, Sybil Jason—This drama is above average from Republic. Pleased fair business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—This was swell entertainment and did the best business I have done since April for the amount of advertising I put into it. Ginger is popular and more so since playing in this picture.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—Picture thoroughly enjoyed. Comedy paced fast and gag lines often overlapping. Audience on the alert constantly so as not to miss any part of it. This picture further enhances Rogers' star stock and all had a nice word for Niven. Pleasing entertainment. Running time, 82 minutes.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

CAREER: Anne Shirley, Edward Ellis, Alice Eden, John Archer—This Gateway to Hollywood thing should have done more business, in my opinion. All winter and spring radio buildup of Eden and Archer petered out by time picture released. Story and production OK for small towns and cast did well enough. Perhaps I expected too much. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 23.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FIVE CAME BACK: Chester Morris, Lucille Ball, Wendy Barrie—A tense drama, exceptionally well presented, but our business was below normal. Played August 30-31.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

GIRL FROM MEXICO: Lupe Velez, Leon Errol—The audience enjoyed this one. Plenty of laughs. Running time, 72 minutes. Played August 25-26.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

IN NAME ONLY: Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis—Very good. One of those two women and one man triangles. Grand stars that put it over with a bang and should do good average business in extended runs. Not big by any manner of means and McPhee knows. One of those good "B" pictures that we have to play extended run because there is nothing better and keeps the exhibitor from making money. Running time, 94 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Ruby Keeler, Anne Shirley, Fay Bainter, James Ellison—Played it weekend. People enjoyed it very much. Business better than average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY AT THE CIRCUS: Tommy Kelly, Edgar Kennedy, Spanky MacFarland—Seemed to please. Attendance fair. Played September 9.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SAINT IN LONDON: George Sanders, Shirley Grey—This is just another picture. No one razzed it but no one wanted to see it. These series pictures are above the ordinary draw of "B" productions, but at that they don't make film rental on a midweek change.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

FIVE CAME BACK: Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie, Lucille Ball—They all gave top reports on this. A good picture for any program. Running time, 74 minutes. Played September 22-23.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE: Basil Rathbone, Ida Lupino, Nigel Bruce—Disappointing to our audience and at the box office. Comment on this one was poor. Player September 9-12.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN RENO: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks, Ricardo Cortez—Just the second half of a double feature program. Nothing more. Running time, 71 minutes. Played September 19-20.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

"This department of your magazine is really a great aid to me," writes Everett Clapp, American theatre, Sidell, Ill.

Contributing the reports on products which appear over his name in the columns this week, Mr. Clapp adds:

"Perhaps there will be something here which will be of benefit to someone else."

FRONTIER MARSHAL: Randolph Scott, Nancy Kelly, Cesar Romero, Binnie Barnes—I, myself, thought this was a very interesting picture. I was not sorry I played it on Sunday. Did above average business. Running time, 71 minutes. Played September 3.4.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

GORILLA, THE: Ritz Brothers, Anita Louise Patsy Kelly, Bela Lugosi—Ritz Bros. always terrible. Audience just can't stand them. More complaints than ever heard on my show. Watson, the needle please. Running time, 66 minutes.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

GORILLA, THE: Ritz Brothers, Anita Louise, Patsy Kelly, Bela Lugosi—A natural for Saturday night or any midnight show. One of the best spook comedies I have seen. You will have to handle it just right and you can do some business. Running time, 66 minutes. Played August 23.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, THE: Richard Greene, Basil Rathbone, Wendy Barrie, Nigel Bruce—A very fine picture which will please all who see it. A natural for midnight shows. Running time, 80 minutes.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

HOUND OF THE BASKERSVILLES, THE: Richard Greene, Basil Rathbone, Wendy Barrie, Nigel Bruce—This is the first spook show that I have played in this town and it seemed to go over very good. A dandy picture that will please everyone who likes horror pictures. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 13-14.—Edward W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN "QUICK MILLIONS": Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Eddie Collins—Eddie Collins really makes this Jones Family hit the best of 'em all. Our hat's off to Eddie and he really had them belly laughing here. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 16-19.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN "QUICK MILLIONS": Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—Very funny picture. Played it double bill with "Woman Doctor" and it pleased. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MR. MOTO TAKES A CHANCE: Peter Lorre, Rochelle Hudson, Robert Kent—We had a men's impersonation contest that broke our Friday records so we cannot give this picture the credit. However, everyone seems to like it. Many thanks to my western Canada friends for the enthusiastic way you have been reading our reports. We're only sorry that more exhibitors don't give a little of their time. Mr. Lew Plottel and Harry Allen bring us their reports. These fellows are very fine chaps. We hope you like Harvey Hornick and Hat Taylor. Be careful of that man Hornick. You just can't resist him. Let's hear from some of you.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Al Jolson—After "Dodge City" I didn't think anyone would come to see a picture like this, but they did. This is a good little show, and is Al Jolson good in this one! He certainly made a great comeback. Running time, 86 minutes. Played September 10-11.—Edward W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—Swell. It even pleased me! Grossed more and was better liked than "Rose of Washington Square," although it was in a lower allocation. Played September 3-4.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Ill. Rural patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—Our patrons were pleased but personally we did not think the picture was as strong as her previous efforts. Business was fair. Played September 6-7.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—Did fair business but nothing big. I did not think the story was very strong. Running time, 87 minutes. Played September 17-19.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Loretta Young, Don Ameche, Henry Fonda, Young Sisters—A very fine picture which failed to draw. I would say that this picture should be played by everyone but not in preferred playing time as it will not do business. Will be thoroughly enjoyed by all intellectual people who see it though. Running time, 97 minutes. Played August 7-8.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Margaret Lockwood—A very good picture but, Shirley, we are so very sorry that you had to grow a little. Your pictures are as good as ever but we cannot count on you paying off our mortgages as you once did. We are all for you, though, aind you've certainly got what it takes. When you get a little older, you'll still be tops. We could all write for an hour on your good points without ever mentioning one bad one. Running time, 78 minutes. Played August 21-22.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Rural and small town patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan—This is without doubt the greatest picture that I have ever played. Fonda is tops here. His name means packed houses. Three days to dandy business. Running time, 87 minutes.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

DUKE OF WEST POINT: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Tom Brown, Richard Carlson—I cannot honestly tell you why but we just barely made film rental on this picture. I believe it was due to a sudden September heat wave.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale—Grand picture, big enough for extended runs in any spot, but you must take in consideration that one of those king and queen things never clicked yet. It's not American. Running time, 110 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea, Gene Reynolds—Just a good "B" picture not strong enough for extended runs. One of those "B" pictures all distributors have been stretching into extended runs for last three years. It'll please but just lacks the wallop to make it big. Running time, 111 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WINTER CARNIVAL: Ann Sheridan, Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish, Robert Armstrong—Every one thought this was a very weak sister. Good for midweek only. Running time, 91 minutes.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

ZENOBIA: Oliver Hardy, Harry Langdon, Billie Burke, James Ellison, Alice Brady, June Lang, Jean Parker—Paging Mr. Laurel. This picture isn't funny. Oliver, you and Stan better kiss and make up or you'll probably have to become a hermit. Running time, 72 minutes. Played September 17-18.—R. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Universal

EAST SIDE OF HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Joan Blondell, Mischa Auer, Baby Sandy—A good picture with anything you want in it! Running time, 88 minutes. Played September 20-22.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

FORGOTTEN WOMAN, THE: Sigrid Gurie, Donald Briggs—Got off to below normal biz on this. A fan picture that failed to click. Running time, 67 minutes. Played September 20-22.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

GHOST TOWN RIDERS: Bob Baker—A little better than average western which did not draw the usual business. The weather was hot. Played September 2.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MIKADO, THE: Kenny Baker, Jean Colin—A dud if there ever was one. Those who came were disappointed. Not good enough for the third feature on a triple bill. To add injury to insult they made it run 91 minutes. Running time, 91 minutes. Played August 25-26.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BLACKHAWK: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Constance Moore—Generally impossible but few action scenes bring it out of doldrums a little. Played September 13-15.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

SON OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Josephine Hutchinson—Horror pictures seem to be on their way out with our audiences. We played it one night of Joe Louis fight, other night on our festival night. Business poor.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—This was a fine entertainment. Beautiful color and fine production. It did much less business than "Union Pacific," but judge it merely suffered from the fact that the other one ran first. It is in the top bracket. O.K.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—Played this one three days, and did it bring them in! It topped all other box office receipts by a good margin. A picture like this will do business anywhere. Running time, 104 minutes. September 2-4.—Edward W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

HELL'S KITCHEN: "Dead End Kinds," Margaret Lindsay, Ronald Reagan—Every one enjoyed this immensely. Very good. Running time, 81 minutes. Played September 22-23.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, John Garfield, Claude Rains—This was a great picture, historically fine and dramatically a knockout. Didn't do big business but showed class all the way through and is a credit to any house. The kind of picture that makes them appreciate the light laughter stuff more and should have enough to these to balance up a monthly program. About two a month is plenty out of a twelve a month change.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, John Garfield, Claude Rains—This picture from a company which has led the field in action pictures is somewhat of a letdown. Just more proof that the best diretcion of the best cast in the world with the finest plot doesn't mean a thing when paper and trailer is filled with gold braid and fluff. Trailer did more harm than good. Performance excellent. Running time, 127 minutes. Played September 17-18.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Dick Powell, Ann Sheridan, Gale Page, Ronald Reagan—If there was ever a good chance to ruin Ann Sheridan's "Oomph," this was it. Very light entertainment and certainly not big enough for Sunday. Running time, 90 minutes.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID: James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart—Cagney is wonderful in this picture. It did a little extra business but not as much as I expected. You can't go wrong with this one. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 20-21.—Edward W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

WATERFRONT: Gloria Dickson, Dennis Morgan, Marie Wilson—Entertaining programmer that pleased generally. Second half in the big towns. Running time, 59 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DRIFTWOOD OF WAR STORM DELAYS BRITISH INDUSTRY ON ROAD BACK

Disturbed Releases, Slow Payment of Rentals, Delayed Shipments Present Problems; Quota Retention Demanded

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Though superficially the ancient British motto of "Business as usual" may seem, even in these first bitter weeks of the war, to be no less dominant than ever, indications are that beneath the surface the details of that business and its operations are not quite as usual. Picture houses are open again, and the masses are flocking to them, but close examination of the substructure on which this citadel of native normalcy is built reveals that the process has not been without its difficulties.

This week British producers, fearing monopolization of the British screen by foreign picture makers, meaning Americans, launched a campaign for retention of the Films Act, and circularized every member of Parliament. At a cocktail party Monday the press was urged to support the movement. Among industry leaders present were Capt. Richard Norton, Michael Balcon, Gabriel Pascal, Maurice Ostrer. John Maxwell, head of Associated British Pictures, was not at the meeting.

May Drop Exhibitor Quota

The first coherent indication of the Government's intentions towards the Films Act was given Tuesday in the House of Lords by Lord Templemore, spokesman for the Board of Trade. He suggested that the Government was considering the abolition of the exhibitors' quota while retaining the renters' quota. He said it was unreasonable to expect exhibitors to accept the requisite proportion of British films if they were locally restricted on openings.

Exhibitors and renters both have had, and to some extent are still having, to pay a more than normally uneasy price to enable the industry to carry on and to supply what it would seem the Government regards as a vital public service. Difficulties of booking and of payment, of transport and marketing, have been there for both sides to contend with, difficulties which now, thanks to impartial study and zealous regard for common rather than sectional welfare, would seem near to complete solution.

Outstanding of exhibitor difficulties has been the release situation created by the time lag in reopening picture houses. With certain cinemas opening a week ahead of others, many first-runs were reduced by the delay to second-run houses. Among those worst hit were the circuits.

Compromise Reached

A happy formula of compromise has been arrived at, and it is on the cards that by the second week in October the trade, from a booking and release point of view, will revert to normal.

Exhibitors' delays in paying for films have called forth a cri de coeur from the distributing group, a cry willingly echoed by the exhibitors' own organization. Not more than twenty per cent of exhibitors had paid their appropriate moneys in the first days of the war, it is pointed out. With unity from both sides of the table in the cry "Pay up and pay up promptly," and with other factors removed this too would seem likely of adjustment.

The difficulties of getting films and getting them in time, for the most part a result of the renters' somewhat precipitate evacuation rush, but also due to transport complications due in turn to commandeerings and to petrol rationing, have likewise provoked exhibitor complaint. This is a matter which time will right.

Prices and Programs

The matter of seat pricing, of matinee tariffs, of abbreviated programs, and of course of West End opening, have, too, presented pretty problems.

Despite these incidental obstacles to straightforward procedure, business is as close to normal as conditions would permit, far closer than anyone four weeks ago, foreseeing the cataclysm in Europe, would have believed possible.

Most vexed of exhibitor difficulties was the tangle on release dates created by the week's delay to which many picture houses were subjected in reopening, and which, since exhibitors were to carry on with their bookings as they reopened, played havoc with first and second runs. The first solution proffered was the provision of a substitute program, a solution immediately challenged by exhibitors on the vital question of film hire and exact terms. Prices are, ostensibly, not a matter upon which the Kinematograph Renters Society as a body has authority to decide, though a solution might be arrived at by joint negotiation with the exhibitors body. Nor was exhibitor enthusiasm marked for what was colloquially termed the "scratch program," suspicions being open and undisguised not only about terms but likewise about the dangers of being handed inferior product. Nor was KRS unity notable on the idea. Only nine of the Council were favourable.

Formula Agreed Upon

Eventually, after long, laborious but frank and dispassionate joint discussion this formula was agreed upon. October 9th has been set apart for cinemas closed for one week to be supplied with a substitute program for which they will not be charged more than 25 per cent, or alternatively an agreed flat rate. The program would be bookable from any distributing house.

The obvious difficulties created in the pre-Christmas weeks, one of the most difficult periods of the exhibitor's year, were to be overcome by transferring all programs booked for December 11th and 18th to later dates six months ahead, with all subsequent runs to these releases transferred to dates corresponding to prior run rights. For those exhibitors not running release films on these dates ordinary transfer machinery will operate ad lib.

Protest Payment Delays

From the distributors' camp during these perilous and troubled days the most lachrymose cries have been over the exhibitor's unwillingness to pay what he owed. Already this page has chronicled the renters' estimate that payments due were 400 per cent more than payments made. The complaint was not ignored in the exhibitor camp. The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has joined with the KRS in appealing to its members to pay up, emphasizing the essential role the renters were fulfilling, the difficulties under which they were trading at presest, and the urgency of a prompt return to normal on all sides. It might be irksome to pay up, suggested the CEA but, with a touch of ginger in its sympathy, it added it would avoid "the introduction of conditions . . . which otherwise the renters might find themselves called upon to adopt."

There may have been and may still be exhibitors ready to exploit the present circumstances to their own ends, but they are certainly exceptional. There are, too, exhibitors who protest that renters are very greatly to blame themselves for the dislocation which has caused the delay, a dislocation of transport and accountancy, of distribution and normal dealing. In the rush of evacuation, say some, renters even failed to submit accounts and then grumbled that the accounts had not been paid. Others objected to paying promptly for substitute programs of indifferent films for which they were asked to pay the forty per cent agreed upon for the films they did not receive.

Monkey Wrenches

Nor have renters been alone in suggesting that exhibitors themselves have not helped their own trade in pandering to war nerves. Oversandbagging of cinemas, exploitation to undue degree of the ARP (Air Raid Precautions) element, nervous playing up to the fear of air raids, are, they suggest, direct if unconsciously known monkey wrenches in the machinery of good business.

Outside students of the trade scene, however, see other factors, for which neither renter nor distributor can be held responsible. Many houses are doing better business than for many months. Queues are not unknown. House records have gone west in some places. In the West End daily grosses have been as low as £30 ($120) and seldom over £50. Independent exhibitors in evacuated areas are currently taking £6 and £7 a night, not enough to pay their wages bills.

To meet these conditions exhibitors and renters are adjusting themselves and their trade. Bargain matinees, at first abolished, are steadily returning. Single features and two hour programs instituted on the Odeon circuit may be more generally adopted. Organists have been dismissed from the Associated British houses. Some of the Gaumont theatres have have closed because of the restricted opening hours. However, the Home Office is doing something about that and six larger houses on the fringe of the West End now are permitted to remain open until 10 P.M.

War has a knack of cementing together grades and sections of society. This has been as true of the film industry as of any other sector of society.

BRITISH BAN OWN PROPAGANDA FILM

The British Air Ministry has banned their own war propaganda film "An Englishman's Home," in which enemy troops are dropped by parachute on English soil, according to a dispatch to the New York Times from London.

Although an Air Ministry official helped direct the film and it was passed by the Ministry of Information and the British board of film censors, the officials reconsidered their decision and evidently decided that this was no subject to cheer up the British public at the moment to say nothing of its eventual effect.

IN COURTS

Fox Hearings Now Wait On Inquiry by Cahill

John C. Knox, federal judge, this week appointed Nathan A. Smyth as special master to hear the results of an investigation into the affairs of Fox Theatres Corporation now being conducted by United States Attorney John T. Cahill. Judge Knox's opinion said that hearings on objections raised by creditors to the final report and accounting of Milton C. Weisman as receiver must wait until Mr. Cahill's investigation had disclosed whether further hearings were warranted.

This must be done, Judge Knox said, to prevent the unnecessary expenditure of funds for hearings and at the same time facilitate a hearing on the charges. A stockholders' protective committee and The Trust Company of Georgia are contending that the estate has been depleted through misappropriations and waste.

Suit Against Fox Theatres Barred

Lazfox, Inc., has been barred from continuing a $100,000 breach of contract suit against Skouras Theatres Corporation, Fox Theatres Corporation and Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., under an order signed this week by New York supreme court justice Church.

Lazfox contended in its suit that the defendants had violated an agreement made in 1931 which had awarded it the candy selling concession to the defendants' New England theatres. Justice Church ordered the preclusion when the president of Lazfox failed to appear for testimony before trial.

Seek Verdict Change

United Artists Corporation this week petitioned the appellate division of the New York supreme court to set aside a verdict of a jury which awarded $250,000, inclusive of interest, against it to William S. and Mary Hart, in the suit involving "Tumbleweeds." The court reserved decision.

File Plagiarism Suit

Paramount Pictures, Inc., and Charles Beahan were named defendants this week in a plagiarism suit filed in the United States district court in New York by Robert L. Buckner, who charged Paramount with infringing upon a play, "Dearly Beloved," written by him and Mr. Beahan in the film "Midnight." Mr. Beahan was named defendant because he allegedly refused to join in the suit.

New Bartholomew Suit

Freddie Bartholomew filed suit in Los Angeles this week against his mother, father and other relatives charging that they kept him in court so much that he did not have time to act properly in films and that their legal actions cost him so much he could save hardly a dime from his $2,900 weekly salary. He seeks an order compelling his relatives to stop suing him.

Nebraska Theatre Suit

A suit for damages totaling $4,350 has been filed in district court in Falls City, Nebr., against Oscar W. Hanson of Omaha by Dorwin L. Frank and L. M. Billings of Humboldt, Nebr. The plaintiffs charge fraud and misrepresentation, claiming the defendant failed to carry out the terms of an agreement involving the Plaza and Schuler theatres in Humboldt.

Question No. 3 in the

Bluebook School

The Bluebook School, conducted in the HERALD for many years by F. H. Richardson, has been resumed, based on the new Second Revision of the Sixth Edition of Mr. Richardson's Bluebook of Projection. Under the new presentation of the material, projectionists are asked to submit answers, as formerly, but often the answer that will be published will be that of Mr. Richardson himself, or of other specialists in projection and sound. This procedure has been adopted with the thought that it will serve the real purpose of the "school": to encourage and assist in study and at the same time facilitate preparation of effective answers.

The first question, which appeared in the issued of September 2nd, and the second, in last week's issue, are as follows:

QUESTION NO. 1: What is feedback? Reverse feedback? Interelectrode capacitance? Oscillation?

QUESTION NO. 2: (a) What is exact width of 35 mm. film sound track? (b) What characteristics of the film concern projectionists most? (c) Describe, in detail, correct method of making film splices.

QUESTION NO. 3—Name two classes of circuits found in modern amplifiers? What types of electrical power are required by sound systems? What apparatus in an amplifier functions as an electrical valve and why is it not called a valve, in this country at least?

Answers will begin to appear as soon as several questions have been submitted.

Advertiser Shows All Color Feature

A five-reel feature in color, produced as a public relations film for Westinghouse and designed for both theatrical and non-theatrical exhibition, was shown to advertising executives and the film trade press at a reception and screening at the Hotel Waldorf Astoria, New York, on Wednesday.

Produced by Audio Productions, Inc., at the Eastern Service Studios on Long Island, the film will be distributed by Modern Talking Picture Service, Inc., 9 Rockefeller Plaza, New York. F. H. Arlinghaus, president of Modern Talking, has announced that prints will be delivered to any exhibitor expressing a desire to show the picture and that no non-theatrical showings will be held in territories where such theatrical exhibition has taken place.

E. F. Maertz Dies: Exhibitor Leader

E. F. Maertz, 56, president of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, died in Milwaukee October 1st. Mr. Maertz managed the Paris theatre, Milwaukee, in 1913; built the Comfort theatre in that city in 1914, and the Zenith, also in Milwaukee, in 1927, and has operated it ever since.

New York Services Held for Laemmle

Friends and former associates of the late Carl Laemmle, who died in Hollywood September 24th at the age of 72, held services in his memory at the West End Synagogue, New York, Friday. Rabbi Nathan Stern officiated.

The honorary committee in charge included Leo Abrams, Barney Balaban, Nate J. Blumberg, Jack Cohn, Ned E. Depinet, James R. Grainger, Hal Hode, Red Kann, Jules Levy, B. S. Moss, Herman Robbins, E. M. Saunders, Nicholas M. Schenck, Pete Siebel and Herman Stern.

A similar service was held the same day in Chicago.

Herbert Gentner Dead

Herbert W. Gentner, 47, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office manager in Kansas City, died there September 28th. He was with the company 11 years, starting as cashier at the New York exchange. He was transferred to Pittsburgh in 1929, remaining there to January of this year, when he was shifted to Kansas City.

Louis Plate

Louis Plate, 78, retired exhibitor and for a number of years vice-president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Milwaukee, died in Milwaukee October 1st. Mr. Plate owned the Climax, a neighborhood house for 30 years. He retired 10 years ago.

George Daws

George Daws, 38, publicity man and writer, died October 1st in New York. At his death Mr. Daws was associated with Earl Newsom & Company, public relations company. He previously had been employed as a publicity agent by Sam Goldwyn and Warner Brothers.

Disney Suit Filed

Vincent I. Whitman has brought suit against Walt Disney and RKO claiming patent infringement, involving a composite system of motion picture photography, whereby a portion of a still background scene pictorially recorded, is photographed in superimposed relation on visual actions which occur in the foreground. "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and the forthcoming "Pinocchio" are involved. An injunction against both films and treble damages are sought.

Reopenings and openings in the New Haven territory include Lee Malcarni's Deep River theatre, October 1st; The Torans Amusement Corporation's newly constructed State theatre, in Jewett City, opened two weeks ago; Al Pickus' renovated Fairmont, now operating; Robert Schwartz' new Park Playhouse, in Thomaston, opened Wednesday; the Fishman Theatres' Winchester, now operating; Warners' Tremont, in Ansonia, now operating; Loew's Lyric, now operating on a weekend policy.

Natale DiFrancesco has begun construction of a 350-seat house in Cheshire.

PRIZE BABY OF THE INDUSTRY

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

CLOSER TO HOME

In these times of industry stress, the accent in the public prints is acutely upon the need for more effective showmanship in exhibition. There is opinion that, if exhibitors further exert themselves in the cause of better boxoffice, an important part of the slack might be taken up.

That "taking up" most often would have considerable to do with the manager. He is the lad who does the pulling and hauling. The more spirited and consistent the pull, the bigger the haul. Thus, everything should be done, especially now, to encourage the able theatreman. Definitely, nothing to discourage his quest for better grosses.

Bearing upon this, now comes information via one of this department's favorite scouts whose authority is not to be questioned. In a neighboring community a decidedly talented Round Tabler was engaged to put over a sickly theatre. His salary was modest, with a sharing arrangement over a weekly gross set by the exhibitor. The manager bestirred himself mightily and in not too long a time pushed the gross comfortably over the set figure. The same week he was discharged.

The instance may not be typical. But it is hardly an isolated one. Industry heads now are concerned with the threat to revenues brought about by the European war. It would seem that an equal concern be exercised over such practices here described. These have always been with us. They cause more losses in revenue than war ever did in killing off boxoffice showmanship, the most valuable asset the industry ever had.

SELLING HIS STOCK-IN-TRADE

It's no new story that representative members are called upon by their communities to lead projects for civic advancement, to take prominent parts in organizational activities for the betterment of general business. That would be obvious. The theatreman's stock in trade is his promotional ability. Smart city heads are quick to take advantage of it.

Does the manager profit? Do these endeavors beyond the theatre's immediate horizon aid the boxoffice? To the many who have answered in the affirmative are added current reports.

Down in Hot Springs, Ark., W. Clyde Smith recently was named general chairman of the Chamber of Commerce. The press makes frequent and prominent mention of the Malco city manager's activities in this direction. Writes Smith:

"The publicity has helped me personally as well as bringing to the theatre here a lot of solid goodwill. My civic connections have brought me important contacts in city and state."

On another page is recounted the top job done by Loewman Joe Samartano of Meriden, Conn., in opening the new show season at the Palace. Civic and business heads cooperated sensationally. Writes Samartano:

"The close relationship between the merchants' bureau, Chamber of Commerce and theatre proved a great asset. We are still receiving congratulations from city officials and the merchants already are discussing a greater campaign for next year's fall season opening."

The manager's job, first, is to get the show on the screen; second, to get people in to see the show. The quotes here set down are for the attention of theatremen who spend too much time on the first in neglecting available contacts that lead directly to the more important second.

For "Bachelor Mother" at the Harris, Findlay, Ohio, keen showman, Glenn H. Nelson, used the oldie this-is-no-bull stunt to great success, and the reason given is interesting. It is even a better idea now, says Glenn, since everything is mechanized and an animal on a busy street, especially a cow, is a strange enough sight to rate as a strong attention-attractor.

That reminds us of the time the New York Zoo exhibited an old-fashioned "bossy" alongside the wild ani-mules. It seems that many city people had never seen a cow.

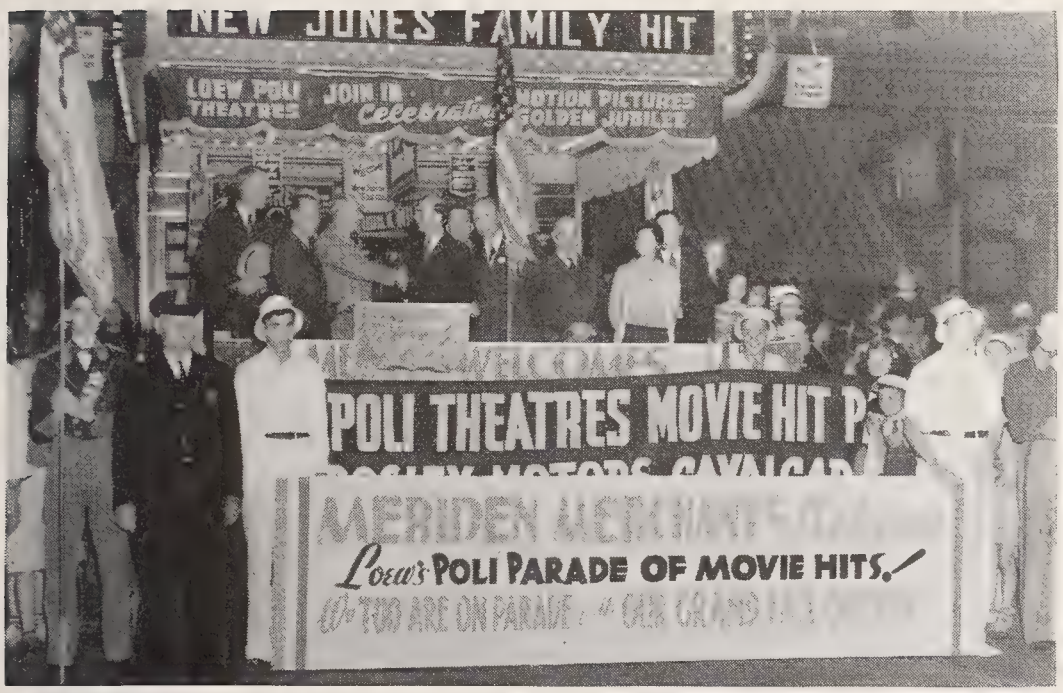
A-Mike Vogel

Discussing editorially the recent record-breaking attendance at the World's Fair, the New York Times answers its own question—"Why didn't the crowds start coming sooner?"—by pointing out that until now the Fair management did not realize it was in the show business "as a Broadway manager, however good his production, must continuously bear in mind. There was a little too much dignity. . . . "

Round Table In Pictures

That old axiom that it's the women who pay was brought out into the open by Publicist Ray Bell for "The Women" date at Loew's Capitol, Washington. Large easel was planted in lobby announcing the premiere at which the feminine contingent were requested to pay for their escorts' admission. Men were permitted to walk to the boxoffice with their ladies but it was the girls who had to "lay it on the line".

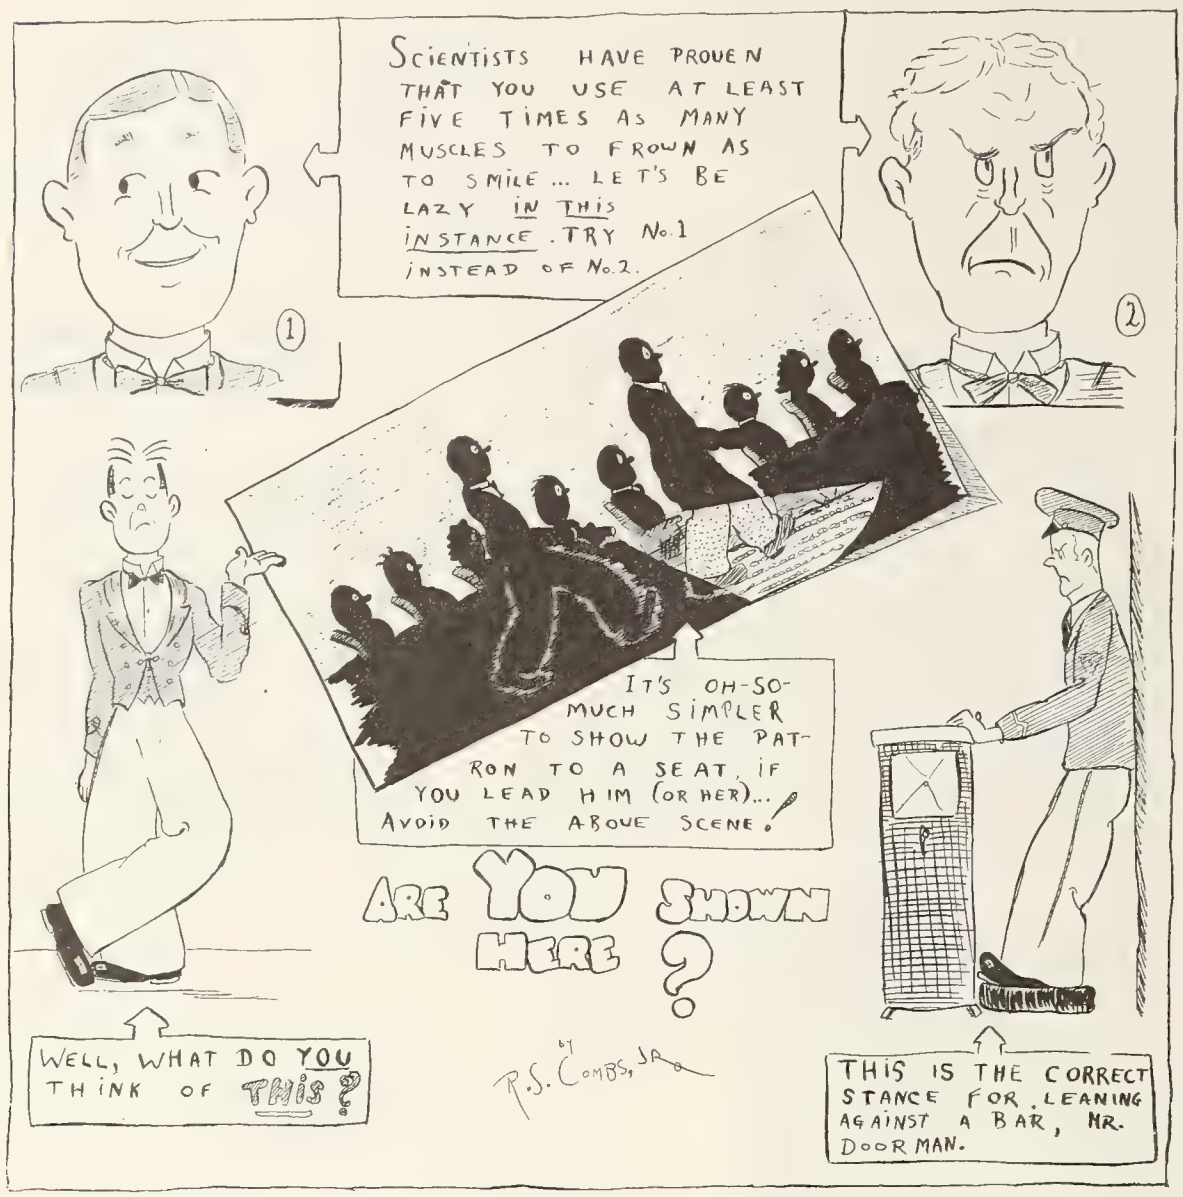
Unique was the window display promoted in leading camera store by Ralph Phillips, State Theatre, Sioux Falls, S. D., to sell his new season shows. To left is giant cutout of Ralph holding a bat to which were attached ribbons drawn to large cards carrying picture titles.



Dressed in keeping with the tropical locale of "Real Glory" was the atmospheric front of the New York Rivoli as conceived by Managing Director John Wright. Walls of split bamboo set off by miniature thatch roofs provided an arresting curtain for gigantic cutouts and scene blowups.

The side of the Hotel Clovis in Clovis, New Mexico, proved to be made to order for Barnes Perdue who secured permission to plant a banner selling Russ Hardwick's "Angels" date at the Lyceum Theatre. Measuring about 60 feet, the sign could be seen blocks distant.

As detailed on another page, here is illustrated the personal invitation telegram stunt conceived by Leonard C. Worley, city manager for the Publix Great States Theatres, for his date on "The Women" at the Madison Theatre in Peoria, Ill. Copy, which invited local women to sign the telegram to be eligible for the invitations, brought several thousand registrations. Giant book which contained the "invite" also included scene stills from the picture.



Grandstand erected in front of the Poli Theatre was hightlight of Manager Joe Samartano's campaign in Meriden, Conn., to greet the Loew New England Motorcade covering all towns in Harry Shaw's division to open the new show season. Mayor, chief of police, Chamber of Commerce heads and other prominents acted as official committee of welcome. In the group besides Samartano are Harry Shaw and Lou Brown.

Hitch-hikers carrying teaser signs in Burma Shave fashion covered the outskirts of Louisville as part of campaign put on for "The Wizard of Oz" at Loew's by Manager George Hunt and MGM exploiteer, Harold Marshall. Additional publicity was garnered by the acceptance of Mayor Schultz of a copy of the book from one of the midgets appearing in the film. The latter was also used for street bally and was stationed in front of gates of baseball games.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Not strictly a Lobby Laff, but good enough to spot in this space is the sound advice in cartoon form created by R. S. Combs, Jr., of the Omaha Theatre service staff and endorsed by Ted Emerson, Tri-States Theatres ad head.

Jitterbug Contest Proves Successful for Dallas

Twinkling feet and torrid music were in order on the stage of the Kansan Theatre, Parsons, Kan., as six couples beat it out in an all-state jitterburg contest managed by David Dallas who reports a record crowd turning out for the stunt which was put on in connection with a prevue of the musical comedy, "Naughty But Nice."

Preliminary contests were staged in smaller towns all over the state and winners were eligible for the final match. Theatreman says the only advertising used to build up the event were writeups in the local papers and a feature place in the theatre ads.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Old, New Car Parade Staged By Grundy for "Wizard of Oz"

Melvin Grundy's "Star Maker" campaign at the Rivoli Theatre in Muncie, Ind., was based on his Oldsmobile tieup with the local distributor and included a four-block parade of old and new model cars properly bannered and which was headed by police escort. During the run two of the oldest models were used for lobby display and for his street bally, sound car with p. a. system toured the city playing "In My Merry Oldsmobile" with announcements on the picture. Tieups were also effected with large music stores which featured window displays and orchestrations. Local dance bands also plugged the tunes week ahead.

For "The Wizard of Oz," Grundy planted five-foot standee cutouts of the various characters in windows about town, radio transcription on the picture was used three times ahead and once during showing, 24-sheet bally truck toured the area and a full-page coloring contest was promoted in daily paper through cooperation of local five-and-ten.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

1872 Magazine Aids "Stanley"

Promoted from a local resident was a Harper's Weekly, published in 1872 and containing a story on "Stanley and Livingstone" which was featured by Gus Lampe in his lobby display at the Keith, in Syracuse, as an advance on that picture. The Post-Standard also gave a window featuring a story of the original Stanley expedition, which was mounted on a large frame with pictures of the stars and scene stills. Book stores devoted displays to the picture, bus terminals carried tiein cards and public library system was promoted for displays of books in all their branches.

Theatremen Wage 10-Week Advance On Modernization

In taking over the management of the Lexington in the East 36th Street section of Chicago, John Burhorn, city manager for the Indiana-Illinois theatres, worked out a progressive campaign with J. R. Wheeler, manager, to maintain the theatre's regular patronage while the house was closed for remodeling. The opening gun was a comprehensive publicity campaign in the local press regarding the extensive modernizing and renaming of the theatre to the "New Lex." Patrons were also advised of the renovation by trailers, posters and other advertising before the house closed for the job.

During the 10 weeks of modernization, the theatremen worked out an ingenious idea to keep the public interest alive by taking photos of the various stages of the actual remodeling, photos planted in the leading neighborhood stores. In addition to the work actually being done, these shots included the theatre posters which details the new equipment being installed.

Decorations Cover Streets

Supplementing the newspaper publicity that kept the readers advised was a vigorous poster campaign that featured "open soon" window cards planted in the area's live stores. When the premiere date was determined, these cards were replaced with a new series stressing the opening and detailing the new equipment. Further coverage was obtained through a series of letters signed by Wheeler to local residents and imprinted shopping bags were used by the five and tens. Restaurants ran theatre copy on menus, laundries and dry cleaners placed theatre inserts in all outgoing packages and promoted programs were distributed house to house. Street coverage was gotten through a sound truck used two days ahead and flag decorations covering two city blocks, paid for by local merchants. Stores also tied in a double truck in the community newspaper which vigorously publicized the campaign.

Much was made over the opening ceremonies at which the Alderman cut the ribbons officially opening the theatre while civic and business leaders looked on. "Miss Woodlawn," recently selected local beauty queen was on hand in the lobby acting as hostess and distributing roses promoted from local florist. Conspicuously displayed was easel containing congratulatory wires received. An attractive souvenir program was gotten out for the occasion, front side cover of which carried welcome expressions from leading citizens, inside pages including brief personalities on the theatre management together with details of policy.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Store Cooperates on "Tropics"

Tieup effected with local five and ten for "Lady of the Tropics" brought Mike Chakeres the gratis distribution of imprinted envelopes selling the date. Front carried small cut of Hedy Lamarr with copy "a kiss from," etc., inside containing confection kiss. On reverse attention was called to the fact that the cosmetic counter had for sale the Perc Westmore makeup kits, now used by the stars.

QUIGLEY AWARDS ENTRIES MOUNT IN LAST LAP OF THIRD QUARTER

Increasing Number of Showmen Bid for Fortnight Honors; Final Preliminary Period Announced to End October 14th

by A-MIKE VOGEL

From the date of this issue, just one week remains to the finish of the Third Quarter. And there is a hurrying and a scurrying among theatremen to get as many of their ace ideas here to headquarters in time to be considered for the Third Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations. The date is Oct. 14, so seven big days spread themselves ahead before the final gong rings for the third quarterly period of this year's Quigley Awards.

The nearness to the finish line plus the stimulus of the new season campaigning also has had much to do with the quality and quantity of entries that received recognition in the Fifth Fortnight, the results of which were noted in last week's issue. Promotional tieins in all directions were effected for the benefit of autumn drives as well as on single attractions. The individual ideas for which the Awards were given show striking usages of skilled showmanship in calling attention to the new programs. Highlights of what the winners did are, as usual, set down for the information of all readers.

Numerous Radio Tieups Effected By DiPesa for "Four Feathers"

Tying up Boston's ace station, WEEI, for five days ahead of "Four Feathers" opening at Loew's State, in Boston, publicist Joe DiPesa received innumerable picture breaks. Vice-Consulate of the British Embassy office was interviewed on the Egyptian Sudan and the battle of Omdurman, as the highlight of the picture with picture plugs interpolated during the program. Over WMEX, transcription was planted and used evening ahead of opening with breaks before and after the broadcast, and WHDH quiz contest used "Four Feathers" questions.

Using an elaborate sound truck playing tom-tom and jungle records, the bally covered downtown shopping districts, beaches, playgrounds, etc. Balloons with imprint and containing passes were released from prominent location on opening day, series of displays were planted in travel stores and leading department stores.

Identification Contest Held By Clements for "Indianapolis"

With the county fair in full swing during Joe Clements' "Indianapolis Speedway" date at the Egyptian, in Sioux Falls, S. D., this showman took snaps of people attending the auto races, encircled certain heads and placed them in the outer lobby of his theatre. To those identifying themselves, guest tickets were awarded. Announcements were also made at the races, calling attention to the fact that Emory Collins, who appeared at the Fair was also in the picture.

Still carrying out the carnival spirit, Clements dressed his front with variegated pennants which were strung from top of canopy to top of upright sign. Lobby was dressed accordingly. Midget auto racer was promoted and duly bannered for street bally, public address system was used during entire run, plugging Emory Collins and the picture and local automobile dealer was promoted for co-op ads.

COVERS PREMIERE FOR LOCAL PAPER

When J. Knox Strachan of the LaRoy in Portsmouth, Ohio, was invited to attend the world premiere of "The Rains Came" in Mansfield, home of the author, the Round Tabler's offer to cover the opening for his local paper was accepted. The result was a by-line column-and-a-half story and review, with an editorial precede explaining the tiein.

Strachan spread himself on the well-written yarn and finished with a plug for his date, following shortly, and which he reports helped no little in bringing local attention to the attraction.

Taylor Gives "Invitation to Happiness" Comprehensive Newspaper Campaign

The highlight of the publicity end of Charlie Taylor's "Invitation to Happiness" engagement at Shea's Buffalo Theatre, in Buffalo was a contest planted in the Buffalo Times and through which local boys were invited to send in their creations of "Happies" cartoons. To the winner went "an invitation to happiness" for a day.

Valuable prizes were promoted, including complete outfit of clothes, baseball equipment, radio, etc. Luncheon for the winner together with his family was held at local restaurant and a box at the theatre provided for the party to witness the film. In addition, guest prizes were awarded to runners-up. Contest broke on page one with an eight-column strip along top of the page and two-column head and story, art and stories broke for a solid week and cooperating merchants included plugs in their ads.

An-Apple-for-the-Teacher Stunt Used on "Star Marker" by Zinn

A merchandising stunt which proved very effective for Manager Charles Zinn, at the Century, in Minneapolis for "The Star Maker" was the distribution of imprinted and stapled cellophane envelopes, each containing an apple. Copy on outside read "Bing Crosby sends 'an apple for the teacher'," etc., etc. Since school started a week ahead of playdates the stunt was very timely. Zinn picked out from the list all the high-schools with junior high schools and the largest and leading grade schools, making a total of 100. In each of these the packages were planted in the mail boxes of ten teachers picked at random.

Merchants and Studio Aid DeGrazia In Sending Girls to 'Frisco Fair

Prize of a week's trip to the San Francisco Fair, put on in cooperation with producer Joe Pasternack at the Universal Studios was the promotion conceived and executed successfully by Ted DeGrazia at the Lyric, in Bisbee, Ariz., in conjunction with the managers of the Grand Theatre in Douglas and the Crystal in Tombstone, in connection with the opening of "The Underpup." Girls in the representative towns competed in screen tests arranged by the Round Tabler, the ultimate winner selected by the Universal production executive.

Four girls were chosen from each town and entered the competition for winner of each town. DeGrazia took moving pictures of the girls and these were shown on the screen of each theatre. All merchants participating in the contest received large cards upon which were pictures of the contestants for planting in the store windows.

Ballot boxes were placed in each theatre and the girl receiving the most votes had moving pictures taken of her which were sent on to Hollywood for judging. Stunt was worked over the air and on the screens of competing theatres. Merchants paid for all publicity, film, and expenses of winner.

"Miss World's Fair" Popularity Contest Nets Borresen 27-Day Newspaper Break

With the local newspaper cooperating and 10 local merchants supporting, Harold Borresen at the State Theatre, in Winona, Minn., put over a "Miss Winona New York World's Fair Popularity Contest" which netted the theatreman 27 consecutive days of no-cost publicity except Sundays. Over the period, the theatre received a total of 415 inches of publicity.

Cooperating paper ran nominating coupons good for 1,000 votes each, the winner at the end of the contest being crowned "Miss Winona" on the stage of the State. Votes were tabulated and standings published at regular intervals. Cooperating merchants' names were listed in all newspaper ads on the contest with the line "when making purchases at the following stores, ask for vote coupons" included. Needless, to say, due plugs for his current and forthcoming attractions were landed by Borresen.

Kid Safety Patrolmen Sell "In Old Monterey" for Brien

To advertise Gene Autry's latest feature, "In Old Monterey," Lige Brien at the Prince, in Ambridge, Pa., invited the 18 safety patrolmen of nearby school to see the picture in appreciation of the job they do in protecting the other school children during school hours and from all other traffic dangers. In return, each of these patrolmen was requested to relay the message about the show to each child at school.

As the Round Tabler puts it, there is no better "gossip brigade" for word-of-mouth advertising than kiddies to kiddies.

MORE ON AWARDS

Rose Sells His Horror Show With Nurse - Ambulance Gag

Teaser campaign was engaged in by Harry Rose at Loew's Poli, in Bridgeport, to sell his double horror show of "The Return of the Frog" and "Demon Barber of Fleet Street". White ambulance with girls in nurses' uniforms with human frog atop the car were used in the local new season parade, preceded by ushers in uniform carrying 10 foot banner on the show. Night ahead of opening, the human frog did a contortion act on stage as an advance for the horror bill and was also used out front for street bally.

Entire staff wore black imprinted paper pirates hats with skull and crossbones, and for the twin picture, a complete barber shop was erected in lobby consisting of chain, dummy, supplies, etc. Live barber was used at peak hours.

Fitzpatrick's "Uproar Hour" Reported Clicking Successfully

Inaugurated as a stimulant to midweek business is the "Uproar Hour" idea put on by Manager Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., the idea being to work out several gags for which small cash prizes were awarded. Among the various stunts tried were pie eating contests, wooden egg rolling, trucking, piano playing, etc., etc. As an added inducement to "pull them in," Fitzpatrick has promoted the services of a local cameraman, who takes 8 MM shots of the activities, which are shown on the screen the following week.

McElligott Ties Merchant To Semi-Annual Style Show

A semi-annual activity at the Capitol, in Aberdeen, S. D., is the style show put on by Round Tabler Byron McElligott through the cooperation of leading ready-to-wear store. Highlight of his campaign was the choosing of a queen, who won a trip to the New York World's Fair. Much was made over the stunt in the local dailies, with one of the cooperating papers running a series of letters received from the girl en route and while visiting here. Merchant devoted windows to display of fall modes which were tied to current pictures at Capitol and plugged the show in his ads, and storewide.

Corker Inaugurates Quiz Program Through Merchant and Radio Tieup

Through the cooperation of Station WGAU and a local furniture store, Moon Corker has inaugurated a series of "Answer It If You Can" programs which are held two nights a week on the stage of the Palace Theatre, in Athens, Ga. Each program lasts 20 minutes and is broadcast direct from stage, with merchandise given the winners and time also paid for by the store. Newspaper advertising is also met by the merchant. Theatre is always mentioned in addition to plugs for the current and next attractions. Prizes are displayed in the lobby.

The program is put over in order of a quiz, persons entering the theatre are given paper on which they write their names and addresses. Three judges are selected from the audience and they in turn select six names. Those called come onto the stage and the one answering the greatest number of questions correctly gets the main prize, lesser awards going to the runnersup.

Murphy Promotes Scholarships For "They Shall Have Music"

Much was made locally over the scholarships which were promoted by Round Tabler Frank Murphy in connection with his exploitation in advance of "They Shall Have Music" at Loew's State, in Syracuse, N. Y. Three localities, well known in the music field, acted as judges at auditions which were held on stage day ahead of opening. A year of voice training was given to the winners, this being generously publicized in both local newspapers and over radio stations, in all of which the picture received excellent plugs.

McCoy Secures Mayor's Aid On "Junior Citizens Day"

An effective goodwill project was recently engaged in by Manager P. E. McCoy of the Georgia Theatre, Athens, Ga., in the form of a "Junior Citizens' Day." Thus proclaimed by Mayor A. G. Dudley, ribbons were awarded to over 800 children who had made outstanding records during the summer months at the various playgrounds. Ribbons wore the official title of "Junior Citizens of 1939," by order of the Mayor and Council and were presented to the children after brief talks by the Mayor, and leading citizens. All speakers stressed the opportunity the playgrounds offered as builders of good citizenship. On separate days the ceremonies were held at each of the various playgrounds until all had been covered.

McCoy then gave a free "Junior Citizens' Theatre Party" in honor of the youngsters who had won the coveted ribbons. Admission was restricted to those only wearing the ribbons and no one else was invited or allowed to enter the theatre, thus emphasizing the importance of winning a ribbon. Needless to say the newspapers were on hand for stories and photos, in all of which the theatre received prominent mention.

Stubblefield Inaugurates "Save Your Stubs" Stunt

Deriving the idea from the latest hobby in Miami of folks saving theatre stubs, Manager Flynn Stubblefield started a "Strand Stub Contest," running from August 1 through to October 31. Through the Wometco program mailing list, 2,000 cards calling attention to the contest were distributed at the theatre and house-to-house, in addition trailer on screen also gave complete details.

Promoted from leading merchants were attractive merchandise prizes which were displayed in the lobby in exchange for appropriate tiein copy and trailer mention. To the 12 persons saving the most stubs over the period, the prizes will be awarded on November 1st.

Football Forecast Arranged by Smith For Pigskin Tiein

Football in the Hot Springs sector is much in the public eye this year according to Round Tabler W-Clyde Smith, Malco Theatres city manager who reports arrangements now in effect to tie in on the gridiron game for boxoffice attentions.

Foremost in Smith's plans is a "Malco Theatres Football Forecast" inaugurated last year and with eight scheduled teams picked each week. Those predicting most accurately the outcome of the games receive a first prize of $5.00; second, $3.00, and the next 20, guest tickets to the Paramount, making a total of 22 prizes. Program is broadcast over KTHS each Wednesday night at 8.45, giving the week's schedule in advance. These are given out in ballot form and must be in not later than six p.m. each Friday. Winners are then announced on the following Wednesday night program. Regular ballots are made available by the theatre and station for predictions.

Athletic Board Cooperates

Smith has also arranged to have broadcasts over the speaker on the football field through the courtesy of the school board and retaliates by inviting the team to be his guests once a week. Another tieup with the athletic board permits distribution of cards each week plugging theatre attractions. Small space on bottom is devoted to football game announcement and cards are put out by the student body each week. Another tieup includes the privilege of the Paramount Theatre banner appearing in the 100 piece Trojan Band parade which takes place each week.

Paramount Book Tieup Set for "Jamaica Inn"

Nationwide book merchandising tie-up with the Sun Dial Press, publishers of Daphne du Maurier's "Jamaica Inn," has been arranged by Paramount as part of its national exploitation campaign for the picture.

Available to theatremen throughout the country, are two types of special discount coupons furnished by the book concern. The first type, to be distributed by the bookseller to every purchaser of the novel, can be redeemed at the theatre for part of the admission charge. The second, distributed by theatre grants a discount on the book to all who buy tickets to "Jamaica Inn." Sun Dial will redeem both types of discount tickets in cash.

The edition of "Jamaica Inn" on which the cooperation is based is a special one, carrying facsimile autographs of Daphne du Maurier and Laughton on the flyleaf, a frontispiece photo of Laughton, and a strong plug for the film on the back cover. Sun Dial Press is also distributing displays and posters carrying picture credits. The book publisher's salesmen will contact all exhibitors booking "Jamaica Inn." In addition, the "Jamaica Inn" press sheet will outline the whole tie-up.

Samartano Erects Stand at Theatre to Review Parade

Actual participation of civic heads and cooperation of chamber of commerce and other leading organizations featured the campaign arranged by Manager Joe Samartano, at the Poli, Meriden, Ct., in greeting the Loew New England Motorcade which covered the situations in Harry Shaw's division to mark the new show season.

Opening gun in the drive was a letter to Samartano from the Mayor noting the inauguration of the new season and commenting upon the excellence of the coming attractions, a particular plug for "Oz" included. The letter was reproduced in the local press and blown up to a 40 by 60, planted in the lobby ahead. Full pages in each paper, devoted to the new season was also promoted.

Chamber of Commerce Aids

The close relationship between the theatremen and local merchants' bureau brought about a tiein with the chamber of commerce for two full page ads on behalf of the "Loew Parade of Hits" and National Retail Demonstration Week which came during the new season campaign. Space paid for by the Bureau and Chamber included large theatre cut and copy calling attention to the theatre parade.

Parade marking the highlight of the celebration was made up of the .Crosley cars and other units in the divisional procession plus six local drum corps, floats and banners. Cooperating merchants also noted the proceedings in large window displays. To highlight the personal attendance of the Mayor, chief of police, chamber of commerce heads and other prominents who made up the official committee ,Samartano erected a stand in front of the theatre (see cut in photo section) from where the local leaders welcomed the Motorcade, and signed a scroll proclaiming the New Season and Retail week. Scroll was also reproduced by the dailies as was the grandstand shot. Loewmen greeted by the committee included Harry Shaw, division manager, and Lou Brown, zone publicity head.

The Round Tabler reports much community enthusiasm as a result with the merchants and other business organizations now discussing ways and means of making next year's new season drive bigger 'n' better.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Callow Arranges "Women" Preview in Radio Station

A combined fashion show and preview of "The Women" was arranged by MGM's James Ashcroft and Warner's Everett C. Callow and Milt Young, held in the C.W.A.U. studios in Philadelphia. First came the fashion show with Hattie Carnegie and her models who paraded in costumes "designed for all purposes from walking to viewing a picture like" etc., etc.

Canopy was erected outside the entrance to the Studios and arriving guests were greeted by station's announcer and interviewed. Newsreel shots were taken and street broadcasts held.

NEW SEASON STARTED WITH "BIG HIT WEEK"

Peoria Great States Theatres Honor Len Worley in Annual Drive; Rotary Club Assists

Tieing in the new season opening to the annual Len Worley Week, in honor of the circuit's Peoria, Ill., city manager, theatremen at the Publix Great States, Madison, Palace, Rialto and Apollo, in that sector, put together an advance campaign under Worley's supervision that made the event outstanding in local show business.

Under the heading of "Big Hit Week," the drive was inaugurated two weeks ahead with daily newspaper stories containing general information regarding the week's activities, publicity continuing throughout the program. All group ads were topped with special art calling attention to the event, and the "hit" theme carried out in 12-inch display cutouts of a drum major and drum. These were spotted in store windows and on counters, prominently placed in all theatre lobbies. Various bargain shows during the week were built up with price-coupons offering small rebates, the coupons widely advertised and sold in book-form by the staffs of all four theatres. Series of display ads was promoted by means of a classified tiein, passes offered to those finding their names on want ad page.

Club Sponsors Golf Tournament

Participation of leading organizations on behalf of the week was featured by the second annual golf tournament sponsored by Rotary, of which Worley is a member. Presentation of trophies to winners and stories of the event tieing in the circuit drive were carried in all papers.

Highlights of campaigns on individual attractions at the Great States houses during the Week were topped by a lobby register stunt engineered by Worley for "The Women" at the Madison. On a stand in front of a giant book-replica setpiece (see in photo section) was placed a register inviting local women to set down their names and addresses. Copy on setpiece explained that book of signatures would be sent to the M-G-M studio where Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell each would select 10 of the names to whom they would wire personal invitations to be guests of the star at the Madison.

Invitation Telegrams Used for Display

The wires received by the registrants and brought to the theatre as admissions were mounted in the lobby for an eye-catching display and eventually the wires were returned to their proud owners. Several thousand signatures were reported and additional publicity was obtained with a shot showing Worley with some of the winners in the theatre lobby.

Newspaper cooperation was topped by a full page co-op ad made up in regular news style plus eight-column banner head which announced the new season and the coming attractions. Publicity was generous featuring a fashion review on "The Women" by a prominent woman page editor, illustrated by giant cut of Shearer. The local ad campaign was augmented by space in weeklies, papers in the drawing area, high school and college publications.

As to be expected, the best stores in town arranged co-op ads, some as large as four-column full, most of them carrying photos of the stars. Many top windows were obtained, the style tieins using mounted six-sheets and style stills with prominently placed theatre credits.

Another attractor proved to be a full main street window entirely covered with plain paper with a peep-hole in the center. Copy above read: "For Women Only—See for Yourself." Inside, the window were a 40 by 60 and colored enlargements. For city-wide notice, Worley also used a street car on which was mounted 24-sheets, the car covering all local lines.

"Spook" Novelty Hangers Attract

Main attraction at the Rialto for the Week was a stage unit. Dr. Silkini's Midnight Ghost Show, spook copy and art used liberally. Best lobby effect was made up of three window cards stapled back to back to form a triangular hanger, a group of these hangers placed on string and suspended from a thin wire across the lobby. Since string and wire were almost invisible, the effect was as though the hangers were suspended in midair and heightened by the circulation of air which kept them spinning. Usher dressed as ghost was used advantageously for street ballyhoo.

For "Angels Have Wings," at the Apollo, a pair of plane wings mounted on an auto for street use proved to be a crowd-stopper. On "Isle of Lost Men," a three-sheet size shadow box was the main attraction. This was entirely covered with an opening in front large enough to frame a head of Carroll Naish mounted in rear of box. Title and tie-in copy was placed just above the cutout head. Cutouts figures of the cast were placed to right of copy and inside of box lighted with green lamps for further atmosphere.

Langbart Arranges Parade For Greater Movie Season

Tying the Greater Movie Season and the Golden Jubilee to the civic activities of the Bensonhurst district of Brooklyn, N. Y., George Langbart, Randforce district manager in that sector, inaugurated a safety campaign with the cooperation of the police department which obtained complete accord of city officials. Prominent in these activities was a mammoth safety parade, with local girls who had been chosen as Miss Brooklyn at the World's Fair and Miss Liberty at the Coney Island Mardi Gras heading.

Other participants who lent their support were the Junior Marines with a band and five companies of marchers, police department which was well represented with their prize winning float and various others. Line of march which covered entire district, passing by all Randforce theatres.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

"FUDGING"

A TOUCH of sardonic entertainment can be had by the writers of motion picture advertising copy, under the slight but positive restraints of "the Code," in regarding the wriggling antics of the lads who are writing motor car copy.

Certain prohibitions anent horizontal art poses arose, you'll be remembering, in a critical period of some years ago in the cinema. It was hard for some layout experts to get perpendicular, and even now some tend to slant their effects toward the angle of repose.

Likewise, the motor car industry, crying of speed and more speed, a few years back discovered that meetings of motor vehicle commissioners and conclaves of police officers were beginning to talk about legislation for the installation of governors to mechanically enforce speed limits. Then came the stab of special attention in the widely circulated article "—And Sudden Death," by Mr. J. C. Furnas. About then the organized motor industry through its trade association machinery laid down the rule there'd be no more advertising of speed.

MEANWHILE the cars got faster and faster, as they do yet. The last big speed advertisement said: "The 100 mile an hour stock car has arrived." After that the copy began to read: "Ample power for emergencies," which was the limit of what could be said.

Progressively ever since the copy writers have been edging, fudging, on toward intimations of speed.

Last week an "independent" ventured out, still mind you with no mileage figures, but with ". . . at throttle touch the country outside becomes a crazy quilt . . . seems to shoot you forward on a giant wave . . . just nudge the throttle and you'll sprint by. . . ."

That's the way codes are broken down. The problems of speed are still there. Danger still rides the road.

EPISODE 1889

OUR piece about "The First Preview" and the affairs of fifty years ago, bringing in the name of President Benjamin Harrison, caused Mr. Will Hays to remember that his father, Mr. John Hays, successful country lawyer at Sullivan, Indiana, told of a call from the newly elected president in that remote 1889. "Now that I'm in, what can I do for you, John?"

Considering quickly this and that, which is the Hays habit, he replied: "Nothing, Ben—that is, nothing that I can afford to accept."

Few Presidents have had such an answer.

WE'VE long had an impression of the considerable responsibility of the function of reviewing motion pictures, but never more acutely than the other day when a review of "Maisie" in the July 1st issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD caused Judge Brian Montague down at Del Rio in Texas, just two whoops and a holler from Mexico, to grant a new trial to one Eleuterio Gonzales, charged with criminal assault, because he had been convicted by a jury that had seen the picture. The conviction carried a sentence of 15 years. Mr. P. J. Poag, manager of the Strand at Del Rio, considered, in consequence, the picture powerful, the review, submitted in court, convincing.

A NOUN IS BORN

STATISTICALLY there are some imposing names in American business, and by reason of their connotations and significances and authorities they tend to become not only names but generic nouns—labels to you. For instance, there's Dun & Bradstreet, and Dow Jones, to say nothing of Price Waterhouse. In radio the name is Crossley, because of that concern's evaluating surveys of the listeners. So it comes that in a piece about Mr. Bob Hope in Liberty the other day Mr. Frederick L. Collins, author, is found saying: "Bob's movie Crossley—they call it a Quigley in the picture business—isn't so high yet as . . . "

That reminds us, coincidentally of course, that the annual poll of exhibitors, the world around, on the "Money Making Stars" is now in progress and that their "Quigley's" will be in due time presented, statistically in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, and both statistically and ornamentally in Fame, come New Year's.

That puts QP into history along with Fahrenheit.

FILM CLINIC

WITH the motion picture bookshelf growing by yards every year and the critical literature of the art accumulating by the acre, one is inevitably impressed with the futility of endeavours to put the film picture on the printed page.

It was this editor who many the year ago excavated that Chinese adage: "One thousand tellings are not so good as one seeing." And nowhere does it so capably apply as to the motion picture, the device which tells by seeing.

And that it is which gives so vital importance, for every student of the screen, to the scheduled and orderly classified showings of excerpts from the progress of the screen through the products of the past, carried on by the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art, in New York, and by occasional special programs in other centers.

A course now in progress at the Museum in New York runs through to November 8. There are two daily showings. These films may not exactly forecast where the motion picture is going, but they show where it has been, and some of the "why."

NATURE NOTES—The first pressing of cider at Mr. Colvin Brown's Mulberry Ledge up in Connecticut is developing considerable snap. Late this week he reported observing that a neighbor's police dog stops for traffic lights in Stamford. » » » The nuthatches have arrived from the North, but the mallards, fat and impudent, have postponed their departure for the South indefinitely. » » » Maurice McKenzie, able horticulturist of Long Ridge road and Indiana, is graduating from chrysanthemums into orchids—no doubt the consequence of the exotic influences of his years of the cinema. His best orchid will be named "Pat Casey."

Terry Ramsaye.

This Week

On the Dotted Line

A wave of product buying for the 1939-40 season, releasing buying power held up far past the usual period, is now reaching notable proportions. The ground swell was first felt in the middle weeks of September after a laggard summer during which circuit and independent buyers displayed unusual apathy toward new season negotiations. In recent weeks sales forces of the major distributors have been working overtime with contract forms and fountain pens, the record of announced deals showing at least 57 additional important contracts with large circuits closed since the first of the month. Despite the general buying trend, however, some sections, notably Chicago, were still delaying negotiations.

An analysis of the market and lists of new contracts announced by the companies are in the story starting on page 14.

Against Cuts

Suspicious of producer efforts to economize by cutting salaries and dropping personnel while at the same time granting studio workers and newsreel cameramen a 10 per cent wage increase, the Screen Actors Guild this week indicated it would "examine" the necessity for such economizing, and might even ask wage increases, especially for its extras. The Screen Directors' Guild and Screen Writers' Guild were reported allied with the SAG in this sentiment.

Meanwhile, in New York, a small CIO union, the United Theatrical and Motion Picture Service Employees, Local 258, initiated counter action from the Local 306, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, by reportedly claiming jurisdiction not only over "front office" theatre employees, but also over projectionists. The Local 306 protested to the CIO, and hurriedly chartered two new "front office" Locals, for the Bronx and Manhattan.

The story is on page 48.

Universal vs. Saenger

Universal is offering five year product franchises to any theatre owner who will open representative theatres in competition with the Saenger Circuit in any of the circuit's so-called "closed situations," in six southern states, Motion Picture Daily said Thursday, reporting the indication of a complete break with its Saenger customers in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Arkansas and Texas; Saenger in addition is booking for numerous other theatres in the same territory. A Universal home office sales executive was quoted as saying that "complete inability to obtain equitable terms caused the break."

Grand Jury

Frank Murphy, United States attorney general, will decide further moves in the federal grand jury investigation of alleged income tax evasion and labor racketeering in Hollywood, it was learned this week as the investigation was delayed to permit Mr. Murphy to read transcripts of the witnesses' testimony. Charles H. Carr, assistant U. S. attorney general in charge of the investigation, said Mr. Murphy would order the next move. He did not reconvene the grand jury in Los Angeles this week pending further word from Washington.

It was learned that Joseph M. Schenck and William Bioff, IATSE leader, would not be called before the jury, although Mr. Carr at first said he would summon them.

Cancellations

Following the publicly announced action of Warners Brothers and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer several weeks ago, to grant trade practice and contract concessions, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox will effect increased cancellation priviliges, of 20, 15 and 10 per cent, on the same basis that the abandoned industry code provided, that is a sliding scale based on the average rental paid by the exhibitor.

Boom Beginning?

A poll of major circuit executives reveals that business is better at this time than last year, and that they believe there will be a great increase in grosses "within 60 days," according to Motion Picture Daily. The increase is attributed to a general nationwide business upswing connected with the war and without revision of the Neutrality Act. National Theatres reports better business now than last year. Loew's cites an improvement in the last several weeks. Walter W. Vincent of the Wilmer and Vincent circuit, operating in coastal Virginia, points to industrial activity and expects benefits from the Administration's "Cash and Carry" proposals. Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Theatres, says the steel mill activity in the Pittsburgh area will be reflected in 60 days at the box office. H. M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for RKO, brought back to New York last week optimistic reports about business in Michigan, where he had attended the Michigan Allied convention in Kalamazoo. An Associated Press survey quotes economists that the country is embarked upon a lengthy, and healthy, business recovery.

MPTOA Officers Stay

The annual meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on October 23-24 at the Greenbrier hotel, at White Sulphur Springs, Va., is expected to result in reelection of all national officers; Ed Kuykendall, president; M. A. Lightman, Mitchell Wolfson, E. C. Beatty, A. Julian Brylawski, vice-presidents; Morris Loewenstein, secretary; Walter Vincent, treasurer, and Fred Wehrenberg, chairman of the board.

The board also will fill several executive vacancies, including that of general counsel and those created by expiration of terms of board members.

Mr. Kuykendall arrived in New York Wednesday from the Buffalo MPTO convention to arrange for the program of the directors' meeting, which he said would give "important attention" to the trade practice concessions of individual companies.

In Commons

Arguments in the British Parliament over confusing war censorship tactics of various Governmental departments reached motion pictures Wednesday night when the Government's failure to mobilize films for war use was severely criticized. Arthur Greenwood, labor leader in the House of Commons, appealed for mobilization of all film resources and a greater use of British newsreels. Sir Samuel Hoare, speaking for the Government, promised immediate action.

Crises

With Britain reported laying new exchange restrictions which might compel the holding in that country of large amounts of American revenues, and with business and receipts affected in nearly every country, there were plenty of problems for motion picture industry people here and in Europe to face this week. However, in all countries theatres are open and playing to the usual crowds; and Hollywood, despite rumors, is not expected to see suspended operations in any studio, except during the Christmas holidays, a normal lull.

The story starts on page 17.

Observance

The actual date upon which the industry fixed the observance of its Golden Jubilee was marked this week by widespread advertising and publicity designed to attract public attention to the industry as an institution and to box offices for profit on current productions. The campaigns were handled individually by circuit and independent exhibitors, using material prepared as guides by the jubilee committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors. On October 6th, anniversary of the completion of the Edison Kinetoscope, Mrs. Mina M. Edison Hughes, widow of the inventor, broadcast a commemorative address on a nationwide hookup.

Details of the observance are on page 52.

Technical

The 46th semi-annual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, meeting Monday at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York, will review technical achievement in the broad general fields of cinematography, sound recording and reproduction and projection during its three-day session. The delegates will visit the World's Fair and attend demonstrations by the Bell Telephone Company and other manufacturers.

The program of the convention is printed in full on page 36.

Realignment

Preparing for operations under the final reorganization plan, RKO Radio this week announced changes in sales personnel under which A. W. Smith, Jr., becomes eastern sales manager and Robert E. Mochrie southern manager. Meanwhile Atlas Corporation, leading factor in the reorganization, is making plans for new stock underwriting which will take into consideration conditions brought about by the war.

Personnel and corporate news of the company is on page 57.

Equity Balks

Actors' Equity, on Tuesday, became the first entertainment union to prevent a scheduled television broadcast and by so doing exercised the right to rule television, a right which, it already has been indicated, would be contested by the Screen Actors' Guild and the American Federation of Radio Artists.

A part of Max Gordon's new musical show, "Very Warm for May," had been planned for a television broadcast Wednesday night by the National Broadcasting Company. The plan was abandoned when Equity demanded the equivalent of a full week's salary for each performer taking part in the single program. NBC had hoped that the program would be a forerunner of regular television previews of Broadway shows.

Entertainment in War

The public in wartime shows little enthusiasm for entertainment which emphasizes the strain and anxiety of their ordinary daily life, but turns instead to diversion, relaxation. This is shown in a study of entertainment types which were most widely accepted during the only modern period comparable to present conditions—the years of World War I. The long run plays and best grossing motion pictures in that four-year period were listed by Motion Picture Herald last week. This week the study is rounded out with a consideration of the most loudly applauded vaudeville acts, the most popular songs and the best selling books.

The listings start on page 23.

Hollywood and Stage

The long heralded return of Hollywood backing to the Broadway stage has, after many months of negotiations, taken a decisive step forward; the council of the Dramatists' Guild having given its approval to the new agreement submitted by a committee composed of J. Robert Rubin, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vice-president and general counsel; Jake Wilk, Warner Brothers' story editor; Sidney Fleisher, Guild attorney, and Luise Sillcox, executive secretary of the Guild.

The approval of the Guild council was given at a meeting last week; the plan will now be submitted to a committee of stage managers, and in all likelihood be subject to further discussions with the film representatives before being submitted to the Guild membership for final ratification.

The desire on the part of the Guild for decisive action one way or the other on the plan, with the New York theatrical season under way, was seen as influencing the council's action. Since 1936, when the Guild enforced new conditions, there have been only isolated instances of film companies backing stage plays as a source of supply of motion picture material.

Under the arrangement considered last week, an advance of $15,000 would be paid to authors of plays backed by film companies, in three installments; $5,000 after the signing of the contract, $2,500 after the second week of the play's run, and $7,500 after the third week. The film companies had rejected the suggestion of a $15,000 down payment, and seek a reduction of the amount.

Also sought by the film interests is a reduction of the weekly gross receipts of the play which would form the royalty; and a sliding scale of payment based on the play's operating costs, as well as a time limit on the percentage arrangement.

As financial backers of the play, the film companies would receive part of their payments back from the producer, who is entitled to 40 per cent of the dramatists' share.

Anti-Trust

Department of Justice officials this week refused to confirm reports that they are temporarily abandoning the New York anti-trust suit against the majors in order to concentrate on one or two of the suits brought against large independent circuits. Officials said that all cases will be pushed with vigor. Meanwhile arguments in the Pittsburgh anti-trust suit started on Tuesday, the trial of the Newburgh anti-trust case was expected momentarily and the A. B. Momand action in Oklahoma was set for trial December 11th.

TEA is served for a Rockefeller and the Rockettes at a reception in the Radio City Music Hall studio apartment at which the French Consul General, Count Charles de Fontnouvelle, presented the dancing troupe with the diploma of the Grand Prix de Paris. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and W. G. Van Schmus, managing director at the Music Hall are at the left and right of the Rockette members.

EXPLOITATION. Mr. and Mrs. George M. Goben of Lucas, Iowa, 93 years of age, have been married 78 years,—long enough to be singled out by Walter Wanger exploitation experts as the longest married couple in the United States. The publicity gained, for the Gobens, a trip to Des Moines to see "Eternally Yours" and, for the exploiteers, awesome statistics on the longevity of wedded bliss.

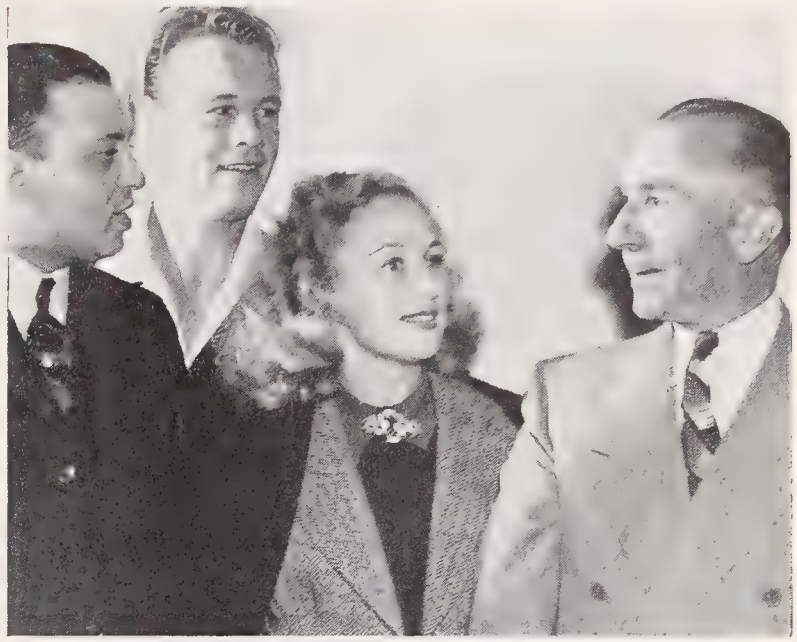
HERE we have evolution: from "It" to "Oomph." Way back then there was a redhead by the name Clara Bow and she was said to have "It," "and how." That was the discovery of Elinor Glyn. Now we have Ann Sheridan who is said to have "Oomph," "but definitely." That is the invention of the Warner-Einfeld-Blumenstock committee on the modernist movement. Miss Sheridan also has red hair. It is Oomph and Oomph is It. Possibly promotion is involved.



MISS PHYLLIS DUFFY, very much of Oklahoma, comes to New York as "Miss Cherokee Strip", a title awarded her as part of the annual commemoration of the opening to colonization of the Indian lands known as the Cherokee Strip. 57 MORE CIRCUITS BUY TEN DISTRIBUTORS' FILMS

Hundreds of Theatres Involved in Deals Marking Spurt in Both Chain and Independent Purchases

New season film buying by exhibitors, both in independent and circuit operations, has taken a marked spurt. In the past 10 days the majors have closed 57 important full-block contracts with circuits, involving several hundreds of theatres, while negotiations are proceeding smoothly on scores of others.

An explanation of the growing interest of exhibitor buyers in arranging a source of supply for 1940—after months of marking time earlier in the season—appeared in the realization that the war might have some effect on the supply emanating from Hollywood, despite assurances by producers that no curtailment is contemplated because of the international "emergency." Before the war clouds broke, independents and unaffiliated circuits in virtually every section of the country were engaged in a sort of "sitdown" on buying pending disclosure of new concessions in contracts from distributors as a result of the anticipated major's trade program. The branding of that document as illegal by Thurman Arnold, United States assistant attorney general changed that situation, and buying of a sort began almost immediately thereafter.

Anticipating Rental Increase

The delayed formulation of the code, however, had set contract signing behind many previous years. Only 36 sizeable circuit deals had been closed by the majors up to mid-July, according to their own disclosures in regularly reporting circuit product deals through their regular press relation channels.

With the death of the code and the start of war, exhibitors and circuits started the rush to buy in mid-September. Besides the reasons already mentioned, scores of the prospective theatre customers were moved to act quickly because of the fear of expected rental increases arising from curtailed rentals from the warring nations, many a buyer bargaining for long term contracts in the hope that terms might be obtained at pre-war levels.

There are, however, some sections where buying by independents has not kept the general pace. Typical is Chicago.

A check-up of exchanges there shows that film buying on the part of the Chicago independents is still being delayed. Few deals have been made by exhibitors in that city and chances are that deals for the new season's product will be held off until the last possible minute.

Independents Wait

The reasons given for the delay are several. Each year the independents wait until they learn what deals the circuits have made before they make commitments. Due to the releasing system in Chicago they are able to tell what new product is clicking best at the Loop theatres and thus get some idea as to what to expect.

Another cause for delay is the suit now pending, which has been filed against Balaban & Katz and the major companies by the U. S. Government, charging violation of a consent decree handed down in federal court in 1932. If this decree is found violated and action is taken, the release system in Chicago probably will be changed considerably. For that reason the independents are hopeful that the Government will be able to prove their case and thus bring about a change in the local clearance system, which they feel is unfavorable to them. A change in this system would make considerable difference in product deals.

Right now the eyes of independent exhibitors are turned on the Essaness circuit. Deals with that group, a member of Allied Theatres of Illinois, powerful independent organization, are pending with various film companies, including Warners and 20th Century-Fox. Essaness deals made last year with Paramount and MGM are said to hold over this year. Essaness already has bought the RKO-Radio product for this season. The type of deals Essaness makes will probably have a bearing on the theatres that are competitive to the houses of this circuit. In Chicago the usual film buying procedure is to see what your competitor has bought before you make your deal.

No Concerted Action

As a group Allied Theatres of Illinois has taken no action to hold off film buying as has been done on previous occasions. When queried regarding film deals the organization members usually say, "What's the hurry?" Statements from producers and distributors that film rentals may go upward shortly because of the war, apparently have made no impression on Chicago exhibitors, who feel that they are paying top rentals now and that film companies will have to take what they are offered or no deal will result. At least that's the stand most exhibitors there are taking.

With the restoration of a voluntary 5 per cent cut taken last year by the Operators Union and new contracts signed with that group by local showmen, this problem appears settled for another year. Reports that the union may ask for an increase later on were neither confirmed nor denied by union officials.

Theatre Business Rises

In the meantime theatre business in the Chicago territory has taken a decided upswing. Especially in the steel mill area has this been pronounced with the advent of the fall season. The steel mills are running 95 per cent of capacity, indicating good business through the winter months at least.

Good crops throughout that part of the midwest and general business improvement also have made their favorable impression upon theatre box offices.

The only problems that noticeably now confront the industry in Chicagoland are the settlement of the pending suits and the selling and buying of the new product.

Warners Most Active

Warners in recent days has been among the most active circuit sellers, according to actual announcements coming from the New York home office sales departments through their press departments.

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of Warner-First National, this week declared, "Exhibitor favor of Warners' new merchandising plan has manifested itself in a huge spurt in company sales, which have reached a new high. Practically all of the major circuits have closed with Warners for its complete lineup of 1939-40, plus Vitaphone shorts and trailers." He mentioned the new merchandising plan, referring to the company's own "trade practice program" as disclosed last month.

Circuit buyers in new Warner deals include the Dubinsky Circuit of 12 theatres in Kansas and Missouri; Commonwealth, 41 theatres in Iowa, Kansas and Missouri; Minnesota Amusements, 93 houses in Minnesota, South Dakota, Wisconsin; Interstate, 131 theatres in Texas and New Mexico; Graphic Theatres, 19 in New England; Kincey, 74 in Alabama, Tennessee and the Carolinas; Jefferson Amusement, 64 in Texas, and Great States, in Illinois.

Other new deals have been closed with M. A. Shea, for 42 houses in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island; Walter Reade Enterprises, 40 in New Jersey, New York; A. H. Blank, 78 in Iowa and Nebraska; Prudential Theatres, 51 in Long Island and lower New York State; Maine and New Hampshire Theatre, 39 in Maine, Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire; St. Louis Amusement, 102 neighborhood theatres in St. Louis and environs; Chakeres Circuit, seven in Ohio; Hildinger Theatres, eight in New Jersey, and St. Louis Amusement Company.

Resume Fox West Coast Talks

As important as any Warner sales development this season is the resumption of negotiations with Fox West Coast for its 500-odd theatres, following a split between the buyer and seller over trading earlier in the season, when Warners started selling away from this large customer. Negotiations for healing the breach were started in New York several weeks ago and have been continuing since in Hollywood.

Previously Warner circuit customers for 1939-40 product included John Danz Circuit of 18 Sterling Theatres in Oregon and Washington; Gibraltar Enterprises of 30 in Colorado;

SELF-REGULATION ASKED IN CANADA

Self-regulation in the motion picture business in Canada has been asked by N. A. Taylor, vice-president of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario, in a statement referring to the move for trade reforms by the Anti-Protection League of Canada, which has requested distributors for national and regional conciliation boards. Mr. Taylor declared that "A national clearance board just now may turn the tide towards industry peace."

No definite reply has been received as yet by the League, which has asked for representative conciliation boards in six cities of the Dominion, with a national appeal board in Toronto. The matter probably will be taken up at the next regular gathering of the film exchange representatives under the auspices of the Film Section of the Toronto Board of Trade.

THEATRES ANTICIPATE RENTAL RISE

Black Hills Amusements, 10 in South Dakota; Wilmer and Vincent, 20 in Pennsylvania and Virginia; Shea's Publix, 13 in Buffalo; J. J. Parker Circuit, six in Oregon; B. F. Shearer, four in Washington; Johnson Circuit, nine in Washington, and J. Blumenfeld Circuit of 15 around San Francisco; Comerford Theatres, 105 in Pennsylvania and New York.

Other early Warner circuit buyers were: Balaban and Katz in Illinois, the 105 theatres of Comerford Circuit in New York and Pennsylvania; Famous Players Canadian, 158 in Canada; Ike Libson Circuit, 14 in Ohio and Kentucky; Mullins and Pinanski, 96 throughout New England; Thalheimer Theatres; Schine Circuit, 119 in New York, Ohio and elsewhere in the east; M. A. Shea, 42 in Massachusetts, New York, Ohio, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island; Loew's Metropolitan New York Circuit of 42; RKO's Metropolitan New York houses, numbering 37; Hamline Theatres, nine in Illinois; Fourth Avenue Theatres, 16 in Kentucky and Indiana, and RKO's 103 houses in several states.

New Columbia Deals

Griffith Amusements, one of the largest in the south, with 204 theatres in Oklahoma, Texas, Arizona, Kansas, Nebraska and Arkansas, is one of Columbia's new season's contractees, likewise Wometco Circuit of 19 houses around Miami and West Palm beaches.

Columbia earlier had sold the related National Theatres' 169, Fox West Coast, 42; Fox Wisconsin, 120; Fox Midwest, and the 65 Fox Intermountain Theatres.

UA and B&K In Deal

United Artists and Balaban & Katz have been progressing with their negotiations to furnish that important Illinois circuit with product in 1939-40, with indications Monday pointing to individual picture deals being made by the circuit on U. A. product. Only recently the circuit purchased two individual Goldwyn and a single Korda picture.

Some of United Artists' early buyers for 1939-40 product were the Interstate Circuit of 38 in New England; Notes Theatres, four in the District of Columbia; Robb and Rowley, 102 in Arkansas, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas; Warner Theatres of 459 in 19 states; Durkee Enterprises, 23 in Maryland; Skouras Metropolitan Circuit, 67 in New York and New Jersey; Rome Enterprises, 14 in Maryland and the 400 theatres of National Theatres and its Fox West Coast affiliates in California to the midwest, and RKO's 103 theatres.

Monogram Active

W. Ray Johnston's Monogram Pictures has been most active in the past ten days in circuit selling, closing with Affiliated Theatres of 16 houses in New Jersey and Pennsylvania; Freeman and Newbold, Cincinnati; Jay Emanuel, with about nine in Pennsylvania; H. G. Anas, Pittsburgh; Gerald Hardy, Fresno, California; E. M. Loew Theatres, operating 42 in Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts and Rhode Island; Kincey, 86 in the Carolinas and Virginias; Anderson Theatres, 10 in Illinois; Sheedon Grengs, Minneapolis; Harry Walken, in Omaha; E. F. Burgan, Kansas; the Morse Circuit of 17 in New England; Stein Circuit, St. Louis; Louis Long in California, Anderson Circuit, Waters Theatres of 12 in the south.

As far back as three weeks ago, George W. Weeks, Monogram's general sales manager, reported that company sales for 1939-40 are up about 20 per cent over last year.

New Paramount Deals

The backbone of Paramount's circuit sales, of course, are made to its partners and affiliates, operating well over 1,200 theatres from coast to coast, and where new franchises are in order the partners have been in negotiation and consummation these several weeks, one group or another traveling to New York home office executives from their respective field operations almost every week.

Paramount has closed new producct deals with the Anderson Circuit of 10 in Illinois and Alliance Theatres. Two weeks ago, Neil F. Agnew, general sales manager disclosed that at that time some 6,000 theatres had been sold for 1939-40.

One of the big Paramount partner franchises, of course, is Balaban and Katz's large circuit in the middle west. Other new deals previously consummated include Interstate, Hamline and RKO circuits, the latter with 103 houses.

11% PLAY BINGO; EXHIBITORS TROUBLED

Cincinnati exhibitors are viewing the situation as regards the competition of Bingo very gravely, it is reported. Police Chief Eugene Weatherly, in his recent report, said that "eleven per cent of all Cincinnatians 15 years or over are Bingo players". This compilation is predicated on statistics compiled since January 1st, from which time the game has been legal only when played under a permit issued by City Manager C. O. Sherrill.

Republic Sells Circuits

Another active new season seller of block product is Republic Pictures, which in the past few days has sold the Essaness Circuit of 27 in Chicago; Fanchon and Marco's first run houses in St. Louis; St. Louis Amusement, 26 in the same city; Robb and Rowley, 28 in Texas; Si Fabian Circuit, for Brooklyn, Albany, Schenectady, Troy and Cohoes, all in New York; Lucas and Jenkins, 44 in Georgia; E. J. Sparks, 74 in Florida; Lichtman Theatres, 20 in the District of Columbia, North Carolina and Virginia; the Great States Circuit in Illinois; and Loew's Metropolitan circuit of 42, for the serial, "Dick Tracy."

Previously, the company had sold its new product group to the Durkee Circuit of 20 in Maryland; Interstate Circuit, 32 in New England, and 21 Maine and New Hampshire Theatres in the same territory.

Also, in early Republic deals were Turner and Dahnken, with 34 theatres in California and Nevada; Butterfield, 105 in Michigan; National Theatres' 400 houses in the west and midwest; Griffith Amusement's 77 in Texas; Interstate, 131 in Texas and New Mexico; Jefferson Amusement, 64 in Texas; Notes Theatres, 4 in the District of Columbia; Waters Theatres, 12 in Alabama; Schine, 102 in New York, Ohio and elsewhere in the east; Warner Theatres, for seven territories on the west coast; Golden State Theatres, 27 in California; Publix Great States, 58 in Illinois; Saenger, 62 in the southeast.

20th Century-Fox Sells Canada

One of the largest buys of Twentieth Century-Fox in the past week was by Famous-Players Canadian Corporation, for its 160 theatres in the Dominion. Although the distributor has a long term contract with the circuit, it provides for yearly renewals.

Earlier Twentieth Century-Fox circuit sales were made to the RKO Circuit of 103, running from coast to coast; to about 250 of Warners 400 houses; nine theatres of W. N. Skirball; Balaban & Katz in Illinois; Butterfield, 105 in Michigan; Comerford, 105 in New York and Pennsylvania; National Theatres, being a continuance of the franchise with the 400 theatres in which the distributor has an interest with the Chase Bank, and Griffith Amusements, 77 in Texas.

Also in early deals: Interstate, 131, in Texas and New Mexico; Jefferson Amusement, 64, Texas; and Interstate of New England, 38 in New England; Ike Libson Circuit, five in Ohio; Maine and New Hampshire Theatres, 29 in New England; M. A. Lightman, 42 in the south; Minnesota Amusement, 93 in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas; Mullins & Pinanski, 96 in New England; Rome Enterprises, 14 in Maryland; Robb & Rowley, 102 in Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma; the Thalheimer Circuit; Waters Theatre Company, 12 in Alabama; Schine Circuit, 112 in New York and Ohio; M. A. Shea, 42 in New York, Ohio and elsewhere in the east; Loew's Metropolitan New Theatres, 42; RKO Metropolitan Theatres, 37; 250 of Warners 400 houses; E. E. Alger, 13 in Illinois; William Benton, eight in New York, and J. H. Cooper, nine in Colorado.

Other early deals: Cooperative of Michigan, 78 in that state; Si Fabian, 29 in New York; Harris Amusement, 14 in Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania; Kallett Theatres, 15 in New York; Lam Amusement, 12 in Alabama and Georgia; Lucas & Jenkins, 40 in Georgia, and Neighborhood Theatres, nine in Virginia.

Also, Lewen Pizor, nine in Pennsylvania; Randforce, 43 in New York; Saxe Amusement, 16 in Wisconsin; E. J. Sparks, 73 in Florida; Tri-State Theatres, 38 in Iowa, Illinois and Nebraska; Wilby-Kincey, 122 in South and North Carolina, Virginia, Alabama and Tennessee; Wometcco, 13 in Florida, and Durkee, 23 in Maryland.

More RKO Circuit Deals

Added to the several circuit purchases of RKO product are new deals closed by Shea Publix in western New York, the Basil Circuit of 11 in New York, Interstate's 115 theatres in Texas, and, of course, a continuation of the company's own 103 theatres. The Dipson circuit, Buffalo, bought RKO this week.

Universal Sells Many

Universal's midwest branch in Chicago, besides selling virtually all of the downstate groups in Illinois, has sold the Essaness Circuit of 28, Warners' 17 and Illinois-Indiana, with 27, all in Illinois.

This week, the company's Philadelphia office started negotiations with the Warner circuit, largest in that area.

Earlier, Universal has sold the 105 Comerford theatres in New York and Pennsylvania; 29 Maine and New Hampshire houses in New England; eight M. A. Lightman theatres in the south, 102 Schine theatres in New York and Ohio, 14 Dipson houses in New York, Ohio and elsewhere.

William A. Scully, general sales manager, reported that the company was selling an unusually large number of circuits for this time.

RKO's large circuit has bought Universal's product for 90 per cent of its situations.

Metro Started Early

One of the first to delve actively into circuit negotiations for the new year was Loew-Metro. Some of its important early sales were made to the 400 National-Fox West Coast Circuit in California and the midwest; to Butterfield Theatres, 96 in Michigan; Minnesota Amusement, 91 in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas; Warners' 459 theatres, among others.

PITTSBURGH SUIT OPENS; U. S. DENIES A LETUP

Erie State Theatre Case in Pittsburgh Underway; Orange County Action Up

Arguments in one of the two-score anti-trust suits pending against majors as instituted by independents got under way this week in Pittsburgh, and trial of the Newburgh, N. Y., anti-trust suit may be begun on Friday or Monday in U. S. district court in New York City.

Meanwhile Department of Justice officials this week refused to confirm reports that they temporarily were abandoning the New York "key" anti-trust film case against the majors in order to concentrate on one or two of the suits brought against large independent circuits, among them the Schine circuit in New York State.

On the contrary, it was said, "all the cases" will be pushed with vigor.

It was suggested in Washington that reports that the New York case would be laid aside probably arose from the numerous delays which that suit has encountered. However, it was pointed out, this is merely "jockeying for position," likely to be encountered in any suit brought by the Government.

The Department of Justice this week granted the majors a further tentative extension to November 1st for filing exceptions to interrogatories.

First Served by UA

United Artists served the first defendant's interrogatories in the Government about two weeks ago, asking for names and addresses of Government witnesses to all of the industry practices alleged by the Department to be illegal. It is believed that the interrogatories of other defendants will differ in many respects from those of United Artists.

In filing the queries, defendant companies are adopting a procedure initiated by the Government in the New York case. The defendants have until October 17th to make known their exceptions to the interrogatories put to them by the Government. Thereafter, when it has been determined what portions of the federal interrogatories must be answered, several months may be required for the preparation of answers.

Under the procedure, industry attorneys now regard the start of trial as highly unlikely before spring or even next fall.

Pittsburgh Suit Starts

Argument in the suit of the Erie State Theatre Corporation against the majors and a dozen Erie theatres was started Tuesday in U. S. district court in Pittsburgh.

The State Theatre Corporation claimed that illegal agreements between distributors and Erie film theatre operators prevented it from purchasing better films. Damages totaling $450,000 are asked.

Defendants are the RKO Distributing Company and RKO Pictures, Paramount, Inc., United Artists, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal, Columbia, Republic and Monogram.

Newburgh Case To Start

Opening of the trial of the anti-trust suit against George Walsh, Paramount theatre associate in Newburgh, N. Y., and five major distribution companies, was awaited in U. S. district court in New York City.

The action was brought by Orange County Theatres, which operates the Academy, Newburgh, and triple damages of $125,000 are asked. Inability to obtain the required product for profitable operation of the Academy is blamed to contracts between Mr. Walsh's theatres, Paramount, RKO, Universal, United Artists and Twentieth Century-Fox.

Set Oklahoma Hearing

At a hearing before A. P. Murrah, federal judge, in Oklahoma City last week, November 14th was set for the pre-trial conference and December 11th for trial of case on merits in A. B. Momand's application for an injunction to force Oklahoma City distributing companies to sell him second run product in Shawnee, Okla., where he operates the Odeon theatre.

On September 29th the Griffith Amusement Company of Oklahoma City, operator of three theatres in Shawnee in opposition to the Odeon, also a defendant in the suit, denied that it is attempting to stop competition from the Odeon theatre there, in an answer filed in federal district court to the suit brought by Oklahoma Theatres, Inc., operators of the Odeon.

Schine Motion Filed

On Tuesday John Knight, federal judge, in Buffalo, reserved decision on a motion for a bill of particulars asking for a "more definite and certain" complaint by the Department of Justice in its anti-trust suit against the Schine circuit which was filed by five mayor defendants and the circuit.

Lenrose Officers Examined

Examination of officers of the Lenrose Amusement Corporation, plaintiff in an anti-trust suit for $150,000 damages against the eight major companies and Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was started last week in the office of Louis Nizer, New York, of the law firm of Phillips & Nizer. Testimony under stipulation filed in the federal court will be deemed equivalent to a bill of particulars. The plaintiff was owner of a Newark, N. J., theatre.

Examined in Gary Case

Max Halperin, Warner circuit booker, last week was examined in Chicago before Sigmund Davis, attorney, regarding Warner theatre booking classification in the Chicago territory, and various types of competition between circuit and independent theatres. Albert Gavit, attorney for W. H. Young, Gary theatre owner, will check both the Walter Immerman, Balaban & Katz general manager, and Halperin statements for the next move in the Gary case, assigned to Federal Judge Holly's court but with no trial date set.

Producers Corporation Plans Eight Pictures

Producers Corporation of America, an independently financed unit, has entered the production field in Hollywood, with plans for eight pictures in the coming year, the first to star John Charles Thomas, baritone, in Adela Rogers St. John's "Kingdom Come."

Officers of the new corporation are George Green, president; Carl Winston, vice-president; Howard Levi, treasurer, and Harry Sokolow, secretary. Mr. Green and Mr. Winston have been director-writers. No releasing arrangements for the new company's product have been revealed.

Warner Brothers plan to increase its program of historical short subjects for the new season.

LABOR COUNSEL ASKS "TRUST BUSTERS" CURB

Joseph Padway, chief counsel for the American Federation of Labor, charged this week that "trust busters" have invaded the rights of labor, and he appealed to Attorney General Frank Murphy to "curb and possibly suppress" activities of the anti-trust department.

Mr. Padway told the 59th annual American Federation of Labor convention in Cincinnati that Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of anti-trust prosecutions (who is leading the Government's anti-trust prosecutions of the film industry), was a college professor and asked that "God deliver us from college professors and army generals in administrative positions."

Mr. Padway in his address referred to Mr. Arnold as "this crusader who has sought and probably procured more indictments against labor unions than he has against capital and industry or other persons who are charged with violating the anti-trust laws."

Film Library Museum Sets New Program

Museum of Modern Art Film Library in New York, which recently changed the time of its showings of famous films of the past from 2 and 4 P. M. to 3 and 5:30 P. M., has announced its program for the coming week.

On October 15th—War in Retrospect: "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," Rudolph Valentino and Alice Terry (1921).

On October 16th—The Western Film: "The Great Train Robbery" (1903); "The Last Card," with William S. Hart (1915); "The Covered Wagon" (1923).

October 17th—Fairbanks and the Costume Piece: "Robin Hood," with Douglas Fairbanks (1922).

October 18th—The Swedish Film: "The Outlaw and His Wife" (1917); "The Story of Gosta Berling," with Lars Hanson and Greta Garbo (1923-24).

October 19th—The French Films by Louis Lumiere (1895); "The Runaway Horse" (1907); "Fantomas" (1913); "The Crazy Ray" (1923).

October 20th—The German Film (II): "Hamlet," with Asta Nielsen (1921); "The Last Laugh," with Emil Jannings (1924).

October 21st—Von Stroheim, the Realist: "Greed" (1924).

October 22nd—Comedies (I): "Dream of a Rarebit Fiend" (1906); "High and Dizzy," with Harold Lloyd (1920); "The Navigator," with Buster Keaton (1924).

There is no charge made for these film programs save for the usual entrance fee to the museum of 25 cents daily and 10 cents Sunday.

Arthur Silverstone, former general sales manager for United Artists in Great Britain, has been appointed assistant eastern general sales manager by Harry L. Gold, vice-president and eastern general sales manager of United Artists. Mr. Silverstone recently returned to the United States, after spending 16 years abroad.

BRITISH MONEY PLAN; FRENCH OUST REDS; CANADIAN COSTS INCREASE

Americans Face Possibility of "Freezing" of Cash in England; Canadian Accessories Prices Up 15%

As Great Britain rejected the "peace" offers of the German chancellor, Adolf Hitler, indicating to observers a lengthy European War, Britain planned to impose more stringent economic regulations upon foreign imports and exchange, which would seriously affect the American motion picture industry in Britain.

Representatives of the American companies learned of the new British plans at a meeting in the British Board of Trade offices in London on Tuesday. Oliver Stanley, board president, presided.

Money Delays Threatened

It was anticipated, before the meeting, that American distributors might be compelled to hold large amounts of money in England under more severe remittance restrictions.

This week, British exhibition interests were fighting for retention of the quota act provisions, and the American distributors for its revision.

It was said that British exhibitors believed that if the Americans were forced to hold large amounts of money in the country they would press for abolition of the Films Acts clause which provides for a minimum of $75,000 per picture. By doing this, the Americans could use larger amounts of the tied up money for high budget pictures.

On the other hand, it was pointed out that the production of expensive pictures would mean fewer pictures for the British market, and a shortage of product for British houses.

A conference of all branches of the motion picture industry was expected this week, in London.

In the meantime, the British Home Office approved the opening of theatres in London's West End, under a staggered system of hours. On alternate weeks, each group of houses is permitted to remain open till 10 P. M., the others closing at 6 P. M.

Reports from London indicate a return to "nearer normal" in motion picture attendance. The public was reported accepting re-issues, in many cases, without complaint.

Offices on Wardour Street—London's "Film Row"—have reopened, and there is even a resumption of "trade shows."

Blackouts are still bothersome, and production is stagnant. However, the Government is reported anxious that British production not be slowed up, and is expected to lend whatever support is necessary.

Transport of films, because of the gasoline rationing, is still a problem this week, but all branches of the industry are reported in constant conference to straighten out these, and all other, problems.

London film editors report a desire for lighter stories from Hollywood, and warn the coast not to cut down on production, because the British exhibitor's chief problem is film supply.

Canadian Accessories Prices Up 15 Per Cent

Canadian film exchanges in Toronto estimate that cost of advertising film accessories has risen 15 per cent since the war's beginning.

The Government has fixed the exchange rate difference at 11 per cent and payments to the United States must be "purchased" at this premium. There is a further four per cent increase because of the policy of the Customs and Excise branch of the Department of National Revenue.

This method consists of adding the 11 per cent premium on United States money on to the face value of the invoices for goods imported from the states because the prices quoted are ruled to be in American funds. This premium is added to the invoice before the duties are computed, with the result that a surtax is imposed on the shipments through the levying of the tariff on United States quoted value, plus the currency premium.

The 400-odd theatres of Ontario are complying with the Government regulation for the installment of auxiliary lighting equipment, as war precautions.

Film War News

British Government's consideration of limiting monetary remittances and foreign exchange causes concern among representatives of American distributors.

English companies and American branches in tug-o'-war over Quota Act changes, with a climax due this week.

Burdens of war already being felt by Canadian film industry; 400 Ontario theatres rush new auxiliary lighting equipment as wartime precaution; wartime radio censorship battle starts.

Holland, like many another "neutral", hard hit by the war around it.

Effect of war conditions upon the public's taste in entertainment is surveyed (see page 23).

"Professor Mamlock", anti-Hitler film, shown at Moscow Agricultural Exhibition, but theatres in the city bar it.

Berlin theatre trade was reported brisk and strong preferences shown for films of military nature, by returning film executive.

Soviet films presumed to be included in "purge" of Soviet Reds in France.

Hollywood producers, acting under "pressure" of curtailed film incomes from warring nations, move toward retrenchments, but talent opposes any salary cuts (see page 48).

Hollywood sees no heavy production letdown or studio closings as result of war.

Executives of majors in New York continue conferences on emergency, as MPPDA headquarters effects salary and personnel reductions, described as "temporary", due to foreign conditions and income of its members.

Eastman Kodak announces that war will not raise its film prices, unless "absolutely necessary".

Independent Theatre Owners of America, in New York, advises exhibitors not to "dissipate" product at this time.

"Parents should guard against the effect on children's minds of terrifying screen battle scenes and propaganda," warned Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University and of Motion Picture Research Council.

Fight Against Canada's Wartime Censor Rulings

The cutting off from the air of a Montreal lawyer's speech has precipitated a fight over the wartime attitude of the Canadian Province of Quebec towards censorship.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation had insisted that all political speeches be censored by the Ottawa government. The Quebec government has regarded this as "Federal interference." Mr. Coderre, the lawyer in question and a campaigner, opened his speech with a declaration that he would not make his address because it had been censored. He was immediately cut off the air.

There is extensive censorship in Canada, particularly of radio, to which the corporation has thoroughly acceded. Last week, C. D. Howe, Canada's Federal Minister of Transport, denied that the government would take over the corporation. He said the Government would "supervise" and CBC officials remain in charge.

The CBC is giving special programs for the troops.

Last week, Sir Ernest McMillan, head of the Toronto Conservatory of Music and a leader in Canadian musical circles, pleaded for tolerance of German music.

Film Business in Holland Hit by War

Like many other neutrals, Holland finds her business drastically affected by the war; and the film business in that country partakes of these effects.

In the first days of the war, when the army was mobilized, people did not go to the theatres. Then, shipments of film to theatres was demoralized, because all transport was taken by troops.

The film industry's major organization, the Dutch Bioscoop Bund, having normalized shipments, there then occurred a government censorship of war material in newsreels.

Then there has been the calling into the army of numerous theatre managers and owners—who left without being able to arrange their affairs. The indemnity paid to them has not been sufficient to cover losses.

Soldiers are allowed into theatres at a 50 per cent admission reduction.

Cessation of British and French product has caused a film shortage; and films are coming in only with difficulty, as it is.

Inasmuch as American films have always dominated the market, representatives of American companies in Holland feel that now is the time to obtain 100 per cent domination.

The Dutch censors banned "Inside the Maginot Line," March of Time short subject.

Theatre owners of the country are worried by the broadcasting of news by the ANP, national radio station, at 8 P.M., best theatre hour.

"Professor Mamlock" Shown in Moscow

Strangely in contrast to the Soviet Union's newly professed friendship for Nazi Germany—heretofore its eternal enemy"—has been the showing of the anti-Nazi film, "Professor Mamlock" at the agricultural exhibition in that city, as reported by a representative of the New York Times, in that city.

However, the film has been withdrawn from the theatres of the city itself.

Reports Berlin Theatres Booming Before War

Joseph Pollack, formerly quite active in films in the United States, and founder of the National Screen trailer service, reported on his arrival in New York from Europe last week that Berlin theatres were doing well up to the outbreak of the war. Mr. Pollack left Germany four days before the war's outbreak.

German production has deteriorated, he said. Films of a military nature had been the most popular.

French Crush All Red Manifestations

Press reports from Paris telling of France's "crushing" of the Red elements within its borders, presumably are involving the exhibition there of Soviet films, of which there have been many. A decree of September 26th bans "under any form whatsoever, either direct or indirect, the propagation of the orders of the Third Internationale of the Communist Party."

Meanwhile, with French production slowed or stopped, and its foothold in the world markets threatened, the French Ministry of Information announced that all films in work when the war began would be completed. The year's production would amount to about 50 pictures, it was said.

From Paris, came word this week that 34 of the city's houses were now open till 11 P.M., some 24 of these being newsreel theatres. It was said 10 houses were playing American product; two, English.

Hollywood Denies Shutdown Stories

Partial excuse for the rumors in Hollywood regarding studio shutdowns is said to be that studios met the present emergency with more completed pictures in vaults than ever before; hence, Paramount's cessation of shooting during the Christmas holidays may be duplicated on other lots, but was not to be regarded as ominous.

Y. Frank Freeman, in charge of studio operations for Paramount, said this week that there would be no suspension of activity, but that all production in work and to be started soon, would be finished by December 20th, so that there would be a one week lull.

RKO was reported this week dropping eight low budget pictures, and using the money on higher bracket pictures.

Heavy reductions are being made in studio forces.

Hays Office Salary Cuts Go Into Effect

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America last week announced salary cuts, in effect last weekend, and possible personnel cuts. The salary reductions range from five to 10 per cent on salaries from $50 to $100 per week, to 20 per cent on salaries over $100.

Will H. Hays, the organization president, voluntarily reduced his own salary.

The cut in the home New York home office salaries followed by one week similar cuts in the offices of the Motion Picture Producers Association, in Hollywood.

The measures were described as "temporary." The MPPDA income is based upon revenues of member companies, which were reduced by the war.

The organization's directors next week will continue the discussion of the war's effect on the industry. They met last Friday, but reached no conclusions. Their meeting was preceded by a meeting of the majors foreign managers, with, again, no decisive action taken.

Early last week, the Hollywood office of the MPPDA, through Alice Winter, its chairman of community service, told social and civic leaders that the picture world would be "the servant of all America in helping to keep us out of war and in giving us true impressions of what is going on in the world; and second, the screen product will probably emphasize two major topics, one of which will be the insistent war interest and the other will be relief from that interest by giving us light comedy."

ITOA Warns Exhibitors To Play Pictures Safely

"The Independent," organ of the New York Independent Theatre Owners Association, warned exhibitors editorially last week against dissipating their "good product," doubting at the same time whether Hollywood would keep its promise not to cut quality and production.

Eastman Promises Price Maintenance

The Eastman Kodak Company this week told its dealers that because during the years of the last war, prices were kept virtually constant, it expected to be able to do the same in this war.

Wilbur Warns Against Terrifying Children

President Ray Lyman Wilbur, of Leland Stanford University and national head of the Motion Picture Research Council, this week warned against two many war pictures, because of their effect upon children.

He added that the reduced market abroad for American motion pictures might be beneficial to the American public; they may now see pictures geared for their own mentality, he said.

Hollywood need not suffer, he noted, and added:

"If the public, through organization, can make its real wants known, we can get the kind of pictures we prefer. For thoughtful parents and citizens that means good pictures for all and special pictures for the children."

NORTHWEST MANAGERS BAN CANADIAN MONEY

Managers of both Oregon and Washington have issued explicit instructions to their box office cashiers to watch out for Canadian money. Owing to the exchange control set up by a special Canadian dominion board, it is uncertain when funds held by United States banks could be converted into American money. Many of the banks have refused to handle any Canadian money, so it appears that the theatres near the border will temporarily have to turn down their Canadian patronage.

$50,000 Rogers Memorial Fund Given Children

Distribution of $50,000 to institutions specializing in the care of handicapped children was begun Friday in 25 cities through funds contributed by the Will Rogers Memorial Commission. In 15 cities were held ceremonies at which zone chairmen of the Will Rogers National Theatre Week presented checks to the chapter chairmen of the Infantile Paralysis Foundation.

The largest gift was $14,595 presented on behalf of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission by Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Ft. Worth Star-Telegram to General Hugh S. Johnson, chairman of the recent Greater New York Infantile Paralysis Campaign. The presentation was at a luncheon on October 9th at the Rockefeller Center Luncheon Club.

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Major L. E. Thompson of RKO, chairmen of the Will Rogers National Theatre Week, praised the cooperation of exhibitors.

Cites Rogers' Interest

Basil O'Connor, president of the Foundation, spoke of Will Rogers' interest in aiding the paralysis foundation at Warm Springs, Ga.

Others at the luncheon were: Richard C. Patterson, Jr., chairman of the board of RKO; John J. O'Connor, RKO circuit head; Joseph Bernhard, president, Warner Theatres; William Powers, representing Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres; W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall; John C. Wright, Rivoli theatre; Harry Brandt, Brandt Theatres; Arthur Israel, representing Barney Balaban, president of Paramount; J. R. Springer and Samuel Goodman, Century Circuit; Walter Trumbull, assistant to Will H. Hays; Harry H. Buxbaum, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. The Will Rogers Memorial Commission was represented, in addition to Mr. Hays, by the following: Amon G. Carter, Col. J. M. Hartfield, James G. Blaine, J. J. Gallagher and John W. Elwood.

The Will Rogers Memorial Fund was represented by Senator J. Henry Walters, Harold Rodner and Herman Levine; the Will Rogers Memorial Campaign by Major L. E. Thompson and A. P. Waxman. Besides General Johnson and Mr. O'Connor, the Infantile Paralysis Foundation was represented by Keith Morgan, Tom Wrigley and George V. Reilly.

Other presentations were made the same day by the following: Los Angeles, Clayton T. Lynch, MGM; San Francisco, Dennis J. McNerny, U.A.; Hartford, Lou Wechsler, U.A.; Milwaukee, Arthur N. Schmitz, RKO; Portland, Louis Amacher, MGM; Dallas and Houston, Doak Roberts, Warners; Boston and Springfield, Morris Wolf, MGM; Kansas City, James Winn, Warners; Hoboken (New Jersey zone) Harry H. Buxbaum, Twentieth Century-Fox; Cleveland, Frank D. Drew, MGM; Oklahoma and Tulsa, Ralph B. Williams, RKO.

The National Theatres contribution of $5,310 was turned over to the Commission in Los Angeles this week by Charles P. Skouras.

ENTERTAINMENT vs. WAR

PART II

PARALLELING the incidental treatment of war material on the stage and screen of the period of World War I, analysis of vaudeville, popular songs and best selling books, the three remaining channels of public entertainment of the day, shows little effect of the impact of military thunder or patriotic fever upon popular taste in entertainment. The lists presented herewith continue the study of entertainment in war begun last week with studies of the Broadway stage during the 1914-18 period and of the motion picture which only then was gaining its majority.

Standard Ingredients

Vaudeville at that time held the place now occupied and very much amplified by the sound motion picture. The stars of the day and their hold upon the public favor are regarded still with nostalgic reverence. Many of them have continued their careers in the newer modern fields. From a study of box office and booking records for the period of the war it is apparent that they relied, except for minor exceptions, on the standard comic, sentimental, romantic or spectacular ingredients which had made them great.

Elsie Janis' War Songs

The period and the special circumstances of course produced some manifestations of the war spirit, some of them still remembered. Elsie Janis made entertainment history with her military songs on the stage at home and later with her songs of home and mother for the men over there. Others were Lieutenant Gitz Rice and Sliding Billie Watson whose merriment gained him place among the two-a-day immortals.

But these and others like them were extraordinary products of the times. For the most part the war hysteria intruded on the vaudeville stage only by incidental reference. The record shows only a minute percentage of popular acts built entirely around war themes in the first years of the conflict. Even during the 1917-18 season with the United States at war there were only five such acts on a long list of favorites.

The people's favorite songs, a more accurate barometer of entertainment taste then than now, when their public life is more meteoric, showed a similar reaction. Aside from the comparatively few outright war ditties written actually as marching songs or purposefully to arouse war emotion, the output confined itself to the tested ingredients of moon, June, home and mother. Writers of the day were concerned principally with the development of jazz, then evolving from the "St. Louis Blues." It is notable that several of the songs which are remembered now as having a war flavor acquired that flavor because they became immensely popular with the soldiers at home and abroad.

Among the best selling books the emphasis on the materials of realism so readily at hand is slightly more marked than in any other reflection of public taste but even here it is not overwhelming. Best seller lists for the first years of the war show a low percentage of war books. In the last year of the conflict five of the first eleven could be classified as partaking of a contemporary war character but one, at least, of these sold especially well because of the name and reputation of its author, Mary Roberts Rinehart.

With this presentation of the vaudeville acts, songs and books which found particular favor with the public during the years of World War I, MOTION PICTURE HERALD rounds out a study of the effect of war conditions upon public taste in entertainment. The study was begun last week with analyses of the motion pictures and stage plays which made box-office history from 1914 to 1918.

Vaudeville at Peak in 1914

THE opening of the war came when vaudeville was at the peak which preceded its rise in public favor by the motion picture, then in the full flood of its first wave of development as full "feature length" entertainment—and of the processes by which it took over vaudeville's functions. The standard bill of acrobats, comedians or monologists, song-and-dance teams and a final short dramatic sketch or elaborate stage presentation left little room for the injection of the war spirit except for the flag waving which traditionally was and is good for long and loud applause with or without war.

Among ten outstanding acts of the 1914-15 season only one—Alla Nazimova in a dramatic sketch called "War Brides"—touched on the European conflict. Among nearly 50 acts which received the heaviest bookings in the following season only three were of a definite war tinge. Our entry into the war in 1917 brought only one outstanding act to mark the event, Elsie Janis. In a much longer list of heavily booked acts for the 1917-18 season only five were of a war character.

In the following seasonal list of outstanding vaudeville acts and the supplementary list of popular entertainers those built entirely around war themes are denoted by asterisks and color:

OLDTIMERS RECALL WARTIME VAUDEVILLE

Executives of today who recall the quality and tempo of vaudeville entertainment of the World War period confirm the thesis that martial spirit entered but little into the comedy of the day. Charles McDonald, New York division manager for the RKO circuit, said there was very little use of the war theme on the stage during the early years and certainly not too much even after we entered the conflict.

"They used the war songs," he said, and also the French songs which came in later. These featured the 'oo-la-la' style of singing. Generally, however, the vaudeville actors did not make the war a part of their routine."

A similar recollection was offered by Pat Casey, former B. F. Keith executive and now labor contact for film producers. "There were no changes among the big stars," Mr. Casey said, "the old favorites continued right through the years when we were in the war. The only difference was in the inclusion of a few war sketches and the singing of war and patriotic songs. The headliners kept away from the war situation as much as possible."

*Emmett Corrigan, "War Ballads," dramatic sketch.
Valeska Suratt, "The Purple Poppy," sketch.
Lady Duff Gordon, fashion parade.
Fred Allen, juggling, and comedy talk.
Hobart Bosworth and Company, "The Sea Wolf," sketch.
Julian Eltinge, "delineator of fashion types."
Robert Edeson and Company, "Pearls," sketch.
Edwin Arden and Company, "The Trap."
Laura Hope Crews and Company, "Divorceans."
*Effie Shannon and Company, "Her Bit."
Victor Moore, comedy recitations.
Annette Kellermann, fashion and swimming.
Joe Welch, monologue.
Courtney Sisters, Florence and Fay; songs.
Jack Gardner, songs and stories.
Blanch Ring, song hits.
Bessie Clayton and Company, dancing.
Grace La Rue, songs.
Bessie McCoy Davis and Company, singing and dancing.

BEST SELLING SONGS OF 1914-18

Songs Echo War Periods

WARS in which America has had a hand have almost always been musically productive, as witness "Yankee Doodle", "America" and the "Star-Spangled Banner" of the War of 1812; "Battle Cry of Freedom", "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching" and "Just Before the Battle, Mother", all by George Root, and Henry Clay Work's "Marching Through Georgia", from the Civil War. In the Civil War period, too, Stephen Collins Foster, "born on the Fourth of July", as George M. Cohan later sang of himself in "Yankee Doodle Dandy", was writing his matchless Southern melodies, although a Northerner by birth.

The Spanish-American War was the exception to prove the rule. Very little music, martial or otherwise, produced in that period was of lasting quality. But that was an odd war to begin with—remember the canned beef—and the leading song hit was "Good-bye, Dolly Gray". But the war to make the world safe for democracy reverted to type, again musically speaking.

It was the transition period from ragtime to jazz and the formation of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, with the subsequent fading from the contemporary scene of the song-book and song-sheet "piracy" business. In that period, too, a new band of composers and lyricists had arisen. Isaac Goldberg, Harvard, 1910, and among other achievements considered the outstanding Savoyard authority in this country, in his book, "Tin Pan Alley", 1930, calls the composers and lyricists "veritable gamins" lured to 14th Street in New York, "from their native hills and meadows".

And they were names not soon to be forgotten. Among them were Irving Berlin, W. C. Handy, Victor Herbert, Oley Speaks, Jerome Kern, Walter Donaldson, Harry Von Tilzer, Ivor Novello with his "Keep the Home-fires Burning", Sigmund Romberg and George M. Cohan who, like Stephen Foster, was born on the Fourth of July. They were all of the times if not all the "veritable gamins" that Dr. Goldberg speaks of.

The war tunes began to appear sparingly. In 1914 Herman Darewski wrote "Sister Susie's Sewing Shirts for Soldiers", the only war theme song to appear in the list of some 17 most popular songs for that year. In the next year the count increased to three war songs of the 20 most popular, namely, "Keep the Home-fires Burning", "I Didn't Raise My Boy To Be a Soldier" and that old favorite, "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag and Smile".

In 1916, an off year for songs of "derring-do", there were but two out of the 18 but in 1917 some half of the 21 most popular songs had war themes. The increase in 1917 followed America's entry into the Great Struggle and continued through 1918. In that final year of the war out of a listing of 50 most popular songs of the year 24 were, in one way or another, of the war.

A point worth noting in this listing of the songs of 1914–1918 that follows is: that with few exceptions, such as "I'd Like to See the Kaiser with a Lily in His Hand", they were of the sentimental brand. The war song writers of the Great War were not warlike in thought. Their songs were directed to the heartstrings. The war theme songs are indicated by asterisks and color.

"HEIGH-HO" AND THE WAR

The old songs like "Tipperary" and "Long, Long Trail", adopted by the British Tommies for war songs, are still being sung in England, but the most popular tune among the troops, currently, is "Heigh-Ho" from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs".

The soldiers have changed it to "Heigh-Ho, Heigh-Ho, Away to War We Go" instead of "Heigh-Ho, Heigh-Ho, Away to Work We Go".

As far as the French are concerned, this is not a musical war. In 1914 the troops departed singing and cheering with crowds hurling flowers. At the front, when the Poilus relax, the old songs, such as "Madelon", remain the most popular.

WAR'S EFFECTS ON BOOK THEMES

Leaders in Book Parade

FOR the first two years of the European conflict, the leaders in the book parade were such non-military contributions as "The Eyes of the World" by Harold Bell Wright, "Pollyanna" and "Pollyanna Grows Up" by Eleanor H. Porter, two books by Booth Tarkington, "Penrod" and "The Turmoil", "Michael O'Halloran" by Gene Stratton-Porter and "K" by Mary Roberts Rinehart. It was in 1916 that a work with a definite war background first made the listing of best sellers. A novel by H. G. Wells, "Mr. Britling Sees It Through", made fourth place for that year and for the following annual list achieved first position in the fiction lineup. The book's popularity in this country can be credited largely to the literary reputation of its author.

Although the opening years of the war saw the publication of works on the war situation, especially in the field of history and foreign affairs, such as "The Guns of Europe" by Joseph A. Altsheler, "America and the World War" by Theodore Roosevelt, and Stanley Shaw's "The Kaiser", none of the works in this division attained country-wide popularity to merit its inclusion in the columns of best sellers. The American entrance on the war stage cued the rise of interest of the United States reading sections in European war affairs. The Wells work continued its popularity position and shared place with other war works such as the phenomenally successful books as "Over the Top" by Arthur Guy Empey, "Carry On" by Coningsby Dawson, "My Four Years in Germany" and "Face to Face with Kaiserism" by James W. Gerard, "A Minstrel in France" by Harry Lauder, "Private Peat" by Harold R. Peat and "Outwitting the Hun" by Pat O'Brien. A great deal of the sales success of these books can be credited to the reputations of the authors and the lecture work conducted by Empey, Peat and O'Brien in this country.

Despite the appearance of war-toned tomes in readers' preferences during the closing period of the war, the American book-buying public still preserved an interested eye and pocketbook for spending its money and time in reading popular and general romantic fiction. Such favorite fictioners as Ethel M. Dell, Temple Bailey, Zane Grey and Edgar Rice Burroughs were still able to win places in best sellers' tabulations for their non-military writings against the timely competition of the war works. Such a juxtaposition of opposite book themes on the same popular sellers would apparently seem to indicate that the literary maxim that the story is the thing still holds with the reading public, come hell, high water or war.

Books of a war character are indicated by an asterisk and color in the following lists of best sellers compiled by Publisher's Weekly and Books of the Month:

1. The Eyes of the World. Harold Bell Wright, Book Supply. Preachment against the the world's way of looking at things.

GLORIFYING THE AMERICAN WAY

Tin Pan Alley is already well stocked for the war. The titles are quite different from those that appeared in the years 1914-18. These songs are all about America and are probably representative of the opinion now prevalent in this country that we should stay out of this war.

Irving Berlin, who wrote so many popular songs in the years of the First World War, has "God Bless America". Other titles and their authors are: "God's Country" by Harold Arlen, "America, We All Love You" by Joe Weber and Charles McCarthy, "Stand by America" by Ethel Wall, "I Am an American" by Benjamin Neal, "The Eyes of the Fleet" by Lieut.-Com. McEdluff, "Our Glorious America" by Kenneth Clark, and "My Own U. S. A." by Frank Westdahl.

WAR COSTS AFFECT BOOK PUBLISHING

Rising costs in labor and material, together with the conditions at home and abroad, seriously affect book publishing in war time. In 1914 there were 12,010 titles published in this country including 2,852 imported works, a high in the book business since 1910 and a total not to be reached again for over ten years.

There was a decrease of 500 imported titles for 1915 and the total for all works published in this country at that time fell to 9,734. Although the number of imports diminished by 700 for 1916, the total published for that year rose by 700 over the low mark of 1915. 1917 can be called the publication year for war books in this country.

Despite the popularity of such works here, imports continued to drop by 300 odd titles with a corresponding decrease in the totals of books published. The disruption of shipping caused a low of 903 imported titles for 1918.

The figures for American book production and book imports for 1914-1918 were:

	Books Published in the U. S. Including Imports	Imported Books Published in U. S.
1914.....	12,010	2,852
1915.....	9,734	2,338
1916.....	10,445	1,648
1917.....	10,060	1,324
1918.....	9,237	903

The final year of the war, 1918, was the most disastrous for the publishing business generally.

1918

1. The U. P. Trail. Zane Grey, Harper. Railroad western.

2. The Tree of Heaven. May Sinclair, Macmillan. Social novel.

*3. The Amazing Interlude. Mary Roberts Rinehart, Doran. Romance with a war background.

*4. Dere Mable. Edward Streeter, Stokes. Love letters of a rookie.

5. Oh, Money! Money!, Eleanor H. Porter, Mifflin. The effect of money on the lives of three people.

Eastman Using 187-Foot Screen In Fair Exhibit

Foreign governments, cities and states, commercial and civic organizations, the United States Government and various documentary film makers have placed on screens of scores of buildings, exhibits and "little theatres" at New York's World's Fair, what is called probably the greatest concentration of historical, educational, travel, scientific and miscellaneous assortment of socalled documentary and non-theatrical subjects. Their messages are aimed to sell almost everything imaginable. In but a single instance is attention drawn to the camera, and this at the Kodak Exhibit, where a screen, 187-feet wide, is used by Eastman to show "the beauty and simplicity of full-color photography today, and point the way toward its wider use in the 'world of tomorrow.'"

Arc on the Wall

The screen spreads in a broad arc high up on the wall of a great semi-circular chamber. Below, a crowd watches, as across this screen there moves what the usually conservative Eastman company describes as "the greatest show of color photography on earth."

Familiar scenes melt into places strange and far away. Time is condensed along with space as the world passes in review across the screen from left to right—the 187-foot screen can be divided to give 11 different scenes. Summer scenes fade swiftly into winter, and just as swiftly back in a kaleidoscopic march. Sometimes they show one scene 187 feet wide.

The wide scene is projected by a roughly cubical, full-ton twin projector, described as "unique in optical history." Eleven smaller twin projectors for the smaller pictures are concealed in a booth erected higher, near the roof. Tiny colorfilm transparencies, each about one and one-half inches, made on standard Kodachrome Film, pass through these gates—to become full-color screen pictures approximately 50,000 times larger in area. Each of the 11 screen-pictures is 17 feet wide and 22 feet high, and the 11 fill the 187-foot screen. (The pictures on the 17 by 22-foot sections each average the size of the average theatre screen; the 187 by 22-foot large screen compares with the largest screen in U. S. theatres, at New York's Music Hall, which is 70 feet wide by 40 feet high.)

1/10,000 Inch Accuracy

As each small full-color transparency comes into position, it is registered in place to an accuracy of 1/10,000 inch, through a combination of optical and mechanical registration. Eastman Kodak observes that this is a degree of registration never before attained in projection equipment. Moreover, this same registering system operates so that even while the transparency is in motion in the projector gates, its enlarged image is held rock-steady on the screen.

Each of the 11 hidden projectors is synchronized with the others by an elaborate electrical interlock, operating through a fully-automatic control system. It took months and many thousands of dollars to design and build the apparatus.

Through the electrical interlock and control, the projection system can be operated with complete flexibility. Some pictures projected on certain of the 11 screens can be changed in speeds differing from others—one group remaining on the screen a half-minute, while others are changed up to four times a second. Fades, dissolves, motion effects also can be presented—"all in a continuous flow of mellow, glowing color," as Kodak describes the screen-pictures.

The "heart" of the projection system control is a specially notched sound-film, which not only carries the voice of a commentator and special musical accompaniment, but also regulates the movement of the projector shutters and the shifting of pictures—keeping pictures and comment in perfect synchronism.

Designed in Eastman's laboratories in Kodak Park, Rochester, these projectors are described as applying a wholly new principle to color-film projection, being so adaptable that they can be used for any type of slide projection which calls for high magnifications.

The illuminating system of each projector is centrally housed, with the ring gears and film drums revolving around it. Water cells are used for cooling, and a blast of air, chilled almost to freezing, is directed on each projector gate. Large-aperture, long focus projection lenses are used, and specially designed shutters are utilized for many screen effects.

For the World's Fair color show, photographers of Eastman prepared a special collection of more than 100,000 Kodachrome transparencies. The design of the Kodak projectors make it possible to change the whole color show overnight, by unbolting one group of slides, and replacing them with another.

Pictures are shown continuously from 10 to 10, each show 12 minutes.

Gregg Reports ERPI Far East Business Up 40%

An increase of 40 per cent in Electrical Research Products, Inc., business in the Far East and Australia in the first eight months of the current year over the same period last year was reported this week by E. S. Gregg, general foreign manager, on his return to New York from a three and one-half months tour of the two territories.

Mr. Gregg attributed the increase to the introduction of new equipment and other factors. He evidenced no pessimism over the effects of the war on ERPI's foreign business, voicing the opinion that the increased circulation of money due to war purchases throughout the world may aid theatre business in many world markets.

B&K Separate Deals with United Artists Indicated

Individual film deals may be negotiated by Balaban & Katz with United Artists, it was indicated this week prior to the departure from New York of John Balaban, B&K head, for Chicago. Although Mr. Balaban had planned to discuss a product deal with L. J. Schlaifer, United Artists western sales head, while in New York, no meeting was arranged and the matter will go over to a later date.

B&K recently closed for two Samuel Goldwyn and one Alexander Korda pictures, and a similar procedure of negotiating for individual releases as available may be followed.

Film Alliance Has 25 Pictures Ready

Film Alliance of the U. S., Inc., has 25 pictures for 1939-40 release through key city exchanges. Among them are: "Second Bureau," starring Danielle Darrieux; "The Pirate"; "The Citadel of Silence," with Annabella; "The Deserter," Jean Pierre Aumont and Corinne Luchaire; "Sunset in Vienna"; "Hostages," Annie Vernay; "Cavalcade of Love," Simone Simon. Euglish studios are expected to account for nine of Film Alliance's program; the others are to come from French studios.

Press Club and Autos to Sponsor Film Openings

Both Columbia and Paramount in the coming week will put on big-ballyhoo exhibitions of new pictures under circumstances each claim to be unprecedented, the former sending off its new "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" under the first support ever given by the National Press Club of Washington to a film premiere, and Paramount getting the sponsorship of the automobile industry in Detroit for the first time, for its new "Disputed Passage."

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt, members of the Cabinet, the Diplomatic Corps and members of Congress will be invited to attend the premiere of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" on October 17. The National Press Club's Glee Club will make its debut at the opening of the picture. Efforts are being made to secure the services of either the Marine or Navy Band. Newspaper men from New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore will be invited to hear part of the Neutrality debate in the Senate and then attend a cocktail party given by the Press Club before witnessing the premiere of the motion picture.

Frank Capra, producer of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," will attend the Washington premiere.

The automobile industry will stage a parade of the 1940 models to mark the premiere of "Disputed Passage." After the parade the new cars will be on display in front of the Michigan theatre so that the public may get a "preview" of the new autos and at the same time be on hand to attend the premiere of "Disputed Passage." The combination of the advance auto show and the opening of a picture whose action takes place at the medical school of the University of Michigan is expected to occasion a great civic celebration.

Six "World Premieres"

No less than six "world premieres" are announced by Twentieth Century-Fox in New York for the introduction of its "Drums Along the Mohawk," to take place in New York's Mohawk Valley on November 2nd for its 14-reel color feature, one of the longest to be released in color. The theatres and towns selected: Palace, Albany; Proctor's, Schenectady; Rialto, Amsterdam; Glove, Gloversville; Olympic, Utica, and the Capitol in Rome.

The studio will send east a company of players who will be routed over the six neighboring towns on the night of the opening.

Reorganize Dufaycolor

Dufaycolor Co., Inc., filed a petition for reorganization under the Chandler Act, in New York District Court on Tuesday, listing liabilities of $518,197, and assets of $119,717. Under the proposed plan, general unsecured creditors will receive three per cent notes payable in greater part three years after the plan's acceptance. Color Corporation is the largest creditor. Dufaycolor will attempt to raise $500,000 in the next six months, as working capital.

Hollywood's production bill for October, 1939, will be $50,000,000 and then some. The figure represents the approximate cost of 31 "big" films now in production and to be completed in the month and 24 high bracket ventures that will start prior to November 1st. For the 31, a total cost of $25,425,000 has been rung up on the cash register. An estimate of $19,100,000 was haazrded as the charges for the two dozen to come. The total cost for both groups is $44,325,000.

In the $4,475,000 difference are included five pictures which 20th Century-Fox has in the work cost of which will be nearly $3,300,000 and three debited to Paramount at an average cost of $200,000 each. The pictures, together with various others that will start, will run the month's production costs to well over $50,000,000.

Fox's $7,025,000 for Six

The flag bearer of the October parade is 20th Century-Fox, whose banner bears the figure $7,025,000 for six productions. The price tag on "The Bluebird," which is being very efficiently made, is quite close to $1,500,000. "Drums along the Mohawk" was brought in at a similar figure. "Swanee River" is down on the books for a million and "Little Old New York" won't be finished for much less. Sonja Henie will skate a $900,000 tune in "Everything Happens at Night" and more than a million will be spent to photograph John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath."

Columbia expects the total cost of its two big October pictures, "The Incredible Mrs. Williams" and "His Girl Friday," will border on the $900,000 mark. Universal is spreading around $2,375,000 over four October productions, "Tower of London," "Green Hell," "Destry Rides Again" and "First Love." The two first named cost the most with the Marlene Dietrich and Deanna Durbin films splitting the balance.

$4,000,000 at RKO Radio

RKO Radio's stake in the month's pot is about $4,000,000 as the cards it holds read: "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," $1,500,000; "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "Vigil in the Night," $750,000 each and "Swiss Family Robinson" and "That's Right, You're Wrong" $500,000 respectively. MGM put up a round $3,000,000 for its October activity. "Northwest Passage," production of which continued over a year, accounts for about half of it with the finishing "Balalaika" and the in-the-work "Broadway Melody of 1940" accounting for more than what was left.

It is acknowledged at Paramount that the total cost for three pictures, "Typhoon," "The Gay Days of Victor Herbert" and "Road to Singapore" will exceed $2,500,000. Warner Bros., not spending any extravagant sums at the moment, has "The Fighting 69th" down for $900,000 and lists "Invisible Stripes" at $750,000 and "Brother Rat and the Baby" at $600,000 at least.

Between them, skipping over Charlie Chaplin who undoubtedly will spend around $1,500,000 on "The Dictators," United Artists producers have a $2,000,000 production cost. The Hal Roach-Lewis Milestone "Of Mice and Men" will be brought in at around $400,000. Samuel Goldwyn has penciled more than $600,000 as the price of "Raffles." Send "Another Coffin," Wanger Productions, will bear a similar price tag, as will Selznick's "Rebecca."

FAN MAIL GOES TO YOUNGSTERS

In order, Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney and Ann Rutherford now are the leading recipients of fan mail at MGM.

Not only has the youthful trio outstripped the erstwhile leaders—Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Norma Shearer—in number of letters received, but more requests are received for autographed photos of the Misses Garland and Rutherford and young Mr. Rooney than of any of the studio's older stars.

Average Cost $800,000

The average cost of the 24 "big" pictures slated to start during the month will be approximately $800,000, a trifle less than is the average for the 31 to be completed. Among the 31, production economies, effected since the outbreak of Europe's war, are beginning to work.

Nevertheless, a recapitulation of the $19,000,000 to be spent during the month shows that Paramount has allotted $2,050,000 to three productions. "Buck Benny Rides Again" has been earmarked at $850,000. The "Safari" budget reads something like $700,000 and a good $500,000, including the cost of a location trip, has been set aside for "Good Old Siwash." RKO-Radio has set up a sum of more than $600,000 which Orson Welles may draw on to make "Hearts of Darkness."

The making of "My Son, My Son," Edward Small production, will entail an expense of a million plus. Samuel Goldwyn's next two pictures, "The Outlaw" with Gary Cooper and "Sweetheart of Turret No. 1," will involve about $2,000,000. At the same time Hal Roach will be spending around three quarters of a million for "1,000,000 B. C." and another $200,000 for a Laurel and Hardy featurette. Walter Wanger's production of Vincent Sheean's "Personal History" is rated as a $700,000 picture. ture.

MGM has $3,750,000 in the till with which to make four big October pictures. Cost estimate on "Lover Come Back to Me" is $1,250,000 while "Shop Around the Corner" will stand at about a million. "The Earl of Chicago" is estimated at $750,000 as is "Young Tom Edison."

At Universal $2,000,000 has been allotted to four pictures. "Charlie McCarthy—Detective" and the May West-W. C. Fields picture will probably take the lion's share of it with "The Invisible Man Returns" and "No Power On Earth" being in the high budget class. Republic's "Wagons Westward" is in the same class as last year's "Man of Conquest" which has been classified as a $650,000 picture.

The intensive production program at 20th-Century-Fox will taper off with two pictures, Gene Autry and Jane Withers in "Shooting High" and a followup on the "Hotel for Women" idea. Together they will require a million and a half.

Like MGM, Warners also has reserved $3,750,000 for October production. Four pictures are contemplated. "Virginia City," with Errol Flynn, will need $1,125,000, and "The Life of Dr. Ehrlich" is estimated at $750,000. A million will go for "We Shall Meet Again," a Bette Davis picture, and the all-star "Three Cheers for the Irish" will cost around $750,000.

9 Start, 14 Finish

Between the time it devotes to thinking of football and that used up in speculating on war and its repercussions, Hollywood started nine and finished fourteen pictures in the first week in October.

RKO-Radio was the busiest studio. Three started there. Newcomers Jimmy Lydon and Joan Dradell, with J. M. Kerrigan and Arthur Hohl will be featured in "Sunset." "Mexican Spitfire" began with Lupe Velez, Donald Woods, Leon Errol and Linda Hayes in the leading role. "The Play's The Thing" Productions launched its initial effort, "Swiss Family Robinson," in which Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn and Tim Holt are the principals.

Two pictures started at Paramount. Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bop Hope and Judith Barrett are the top line names in "Road to Singapore." Charles Ruggles, William Frawley, Robert Paige and Janice Logan head the "Opened by Mistake" cast.

Work started at Monogram on "Roll Wagons Roll," an Edward Finney production starring Tex Ritter. At the same time cameras began turning at Warner Bros. on "Timber" in which John Payne, Gloria Dickson and Stanley Fields are the feature names.

So crowded for space that the facilities of two studios are needed to accommodate its activities, 20th Century-Fox launched two productions to raise the total of films actually in work to ten. With John Ford directing, the much talked of "Grapes of Wrath" got under way. Henry Fonda, Dorris Bowdon, Charlie Grapewin, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Eddie Quillan, Russell Simpson, John Qualen, Frank Darien and Frank Sully will interpret the principal John Steinbeck characters. In the second picture, "He Married His Wife," Joe McCrea, Nancy Kelly, Roland Young, Mary Boland, Mary Healy and Lyle Talbot will be featured.

Finishing three each, three companies accounted for nine of the fourteen finished pictures. Off the active list at MGM are "Northwest Passage," "Bad Little Angel" and "Judge Hardy and Son." The Paramount trio includes "Typhoon," "The Gay Days of Victor Herbert" and "The Farmer's Daughter." "The City," "The Man Who Wouldn't Talk" and "20,000 Men a Year" are in the 20th Century-Fox group.

Two productions came off the line at Republic, "Washington Cowboy" and "Covered Trailer." Universal likewise checked off a pair, "Tower of London" and "Test Driver."

RKO-Radio's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" reached the finish line.

FILM ENGINEERS AND TECHNICIANS OPEN SESSION IN NEW YORK MONDAY

Mayor LaGuardia Will Welcome SMPE at Opening Luncheon; Television Exhibition at World's Fair First Night

The motion picture's engineers, technicians and laboratory workers will make their semi-annual emergence from their work benches on Monday for purposes of open discussion of technical progress and procedure at the fall meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, beginning a four-day conference at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York, which also will be attended by manufacturers and executives of motion picture equipment companies and others. The meeting will be the 46th semi-annual gathering since the Society was founded in 1916.

Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York will leave his "summer City Hall" at Flushing Meadows World's Fair to extend the city's welcome at the opening luncheon Monday, when he will be presented by E. A. Williford, SMPE president.

Official visit of the convention to the World's Fair will be made Monday evening, concluding with a special television demonstration by NBC and RCA at RCA's Exhibit.

Socially, the convention will highlight its semi-annual banquet and dance Wednesday night in the Pennsylvania hotel, where officers-elect for 1940 will be introduced, winners of the SMPE Progress Medal and SMPE Journal Award will be announced.

Group-sessions will be conducted for general matters, laboratory practice, projection, 16mm films, sound, color, television, studio-practice, and other divisions, as detailed in the complete program, which follows:

MONDAY, OCTOBER 16

9:00 to 12 Noon

Banquet Room; Registration.
Banquet Room; General and Business Session.
Report of the Convention Arrangements Committee; W. C. Kunzmann, Convention Vice-President.
Report of the Membership and Admissions Committee; E. R. Geib, Chairman.
Welcome by the President; E. A. Williford.
Society Business:
Election Officers for 1940.
Proposed Amendments of the By-Laws.
"Partial Deafness and Hearing Aid Design," W. C. Beasley, National Institute of Health, U. S. Public Service, Bethesda, Md.
"The Problem of Distortion in the Human Ear," S. S. Stevens, Department of Psychology, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.
Progress Report of the Academy Research Sub-Committee on Acoustical Characteristics; F. Durst, Chairman, Hollywood, Calif.

12:30 P. M.

Grand Ballroom; Informal Get-Together Luncheon; E. A. Williford, Chairman.
Address of Welcome by the Honorable Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Mayor of the City of New York.
Guests: Hon. Bruce Barton, Mr. W. G. Van Schmus.

2:00 P. M.

Banquet Room; General Session.
"Photographic Duping of Variable-Area Sound," F. W. Roberts and E. Taenzer, Ace Film Laboratories, Brooklyn, N. Y. (Demonstration.)
"Volume Distortion," S. L. Reiches, Cleveland, Ohio. (Demonstration.)
"Optical Control of Wave-Shape and Amplitude Characteristics in Variable-Density Recording," G. L. Dimmick, RCA Manufacturing Co., Camden, N. J. (Demonstration.)
"Synthetic Reverberation for Motion Picture Studios"; P. C. Goldmark and P. S. Hendricks, Columbia Broadcasting Co., New York, N. Y. (Demonstration.)

8:00 P. M.

Chrysler Auditorium, New York World's Fair.
"Three Dimensional Motion Pictures"; J. A. Norling, Loucks & Norling, New York, N. Y. (Demonstration.) Delegates must congregate in the Chrysler Auditorium promptly at 8 p.m.

8:35 P. M.

"Automatic Slide Projectors for the New York World's Fair," F. Tuttle, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N. Y. (Demonstration.)

9:00 P. M.

RCA Exhibit, New York World's Fair. Special Demonstration of Television by engineers of the RCA. As this will be a special exhibit for the SMPE Convention, after the usual closing hour, members and guests are requested to be on hand promptly at 9:00 P. M.

9:45 P. M.

American Telephone & Telegraph Building, New York World's Fair.
Demonstration of Two-Channel Recording and Reproduction with Steel Tape, with participation by the visiting delegates, followed by a demonstration of the "Voder." Aural acuity tests will also be made by means of special tone-hearing test machines. These demonstrations will be a special contribution to the Convention Program by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, after the usual closing hour of the Exhibit. It is important that all delegates be present by 9:45 P. M.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 17

10:00 A. M.

Banquet Room; Laboratory Session.
Report of the Laboratory Practice Committee; D. E. Hyndman, Chairman.
"Photographic Tone Reproduction—Theory and Practice;" L. A. Jones, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N. Y.
"Sensitometry of Subtractive Color Film;" R. H. Bingham and H. Hoerlin, Agfa Ansco Corp., Binghampton, N. Y.
"A Sound-Track Center-Line Measuring Device;" F. W. Roberts and H. R. Cook, Jr., Ace Film Laboratories, Brooklyn, N. Y.

2:00 P. M.

This afternoon has been left open in order that delegates to the Convention may visit the World's Fair. Trains for the Fair can be taken at the Pennsylvania Station directly opposite the Hotel Pennsylvania. Trains run every fifteen minutes; time to the Fair is 10 minutes (fare, 10c).
Full information concerning the attractions at the Fair may be obtained at the General Registration Desk in the lobby of the Hotel.

8:00 P. M.

Joint Meeting with the New York Electrical Society, in the Auditorium of the Engineering Societies Building, 29 West 39th Street, New York, N. Y.
Speaker: Homer Dudley, Bell Telephone Laboratories, New York, N. Y.
In the Bell Telephone Laboratories Mr. Dudley and his associates have developed electric circuits for the artificial production of speech. One form of the device is itself voice-controlled, thus differing fundamentally from the Voder of the World's Fair which is controlled by keys and pedals. It has been christened the "Vocoder" or voice coder."
The speaker will demonstrate the effects which result when the code is varied.

Admittance by Convention registration card only.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 18

10:00 A. M.

Banquet Room; Projection Session.
"Future Development in the Field of the Projectionist"; A. N. Goldsmith, New York, N. Y.
"Motion Picture Auditorium Lighting;" B. Schlanger, New York, N. Y.
"Simplex 4-Star Double-Film Attachment;" W. Borberg and B. Pirner, International Projector Corp., New York, N. Y.
"The Projectionist's Part in Maintenance and Servicing;" J. R. Prater, Congress Theater, Palouse, Wash.
"Suggestions for Encouraging Study by Projectionists;" F. H. Richardson, Quigley Publishing Co., New York, N. Y.
"Delivering Laboratory Results to Theater Patrons;" J. R. Prater, Congress Theater, Palouse, Wash.
"A Review of the Question of 50-mm. Film, with Suggestions and Recommendations;" H. Griffin, International Projector Corp., New York, N. Y.
Report of the Projection Practice Committee; H. Rubin, Chairman.
"Projection Room Planning for Safety;" E. R. Morin, State of Connecticut, Department of State Police, Hartford, Conn.

2:00 P. M.

Banquet Room; General Session.
Report of the Television Committee; A. N. Goldsmith, Chairman.
"Television Control Equipment for Film Transmission;" R. L. Campbell, Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Passaic, N. J.
"A Narrow-Band Transmission System for Animated Line Images;" A. M. Skellett, Bell Telephone Laboratories, New York, N. Y. (Demonstration.)
Report of the Studio Lighting Committee; C. W. Handley, Chairman.
"Starting Characteristics of Speech Sound;" R. O. Drew and E. W. Kellogg, RCA Manufacturing Co., Camden, N. J.
"The Importance of Cooperation between Story Construction and Sound to Achieve a New Personality in Motion Pictures;" L. L. Ryder, Paramount Studios, Hollywood, Calif.

8:30 P. M.

Grand Ballroom; Semi-Annual Banquet and Dance.
Introduction of Officers-Elect for 1940.
Presentation of the SMPE Progress Medal.
Presentation of the SMPE Journal Award.
Entertainment and Dancing.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1939

10 A. M.

Banquet Room; Sixteen-Mm. Session.
"Some Industrial Applications of Current 16-Mm. Sound Motion Picture Equipment;" W. H. Offenhauser, Jr., and F. H. Hargrove, Berndt-Mauer Corp., New York, N. Y.
"The Production of 16-Mm. Sound Pictures for Promoting Safety in the Mineral Industries;" M. J. Ankeny, Bureau of Mines, U. S. Department of the Interior, Pittsburgh, Pa. (Demonstration.)
"Lenses for Amateur Motion Picture Equipment (16-Mm. and 8-Mm.);" R. Kingslake, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N. Y.
Report of the Non-Theatrical Equipment Committee; R. C. Holslag, Chairman.
"A New Non-Intermittent Motion Picture Projector;" F. Ehrenhaft and F. G. Back, New York, N. Y. (Demonstration.)
"A Flexible Time-Lapse Outfit;" A. B. Fuller and W. W. Eaton, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N. Y.

2:00 P. M.

Banquet Room; Sound Session.
"Considerations Relating to Warbled Frequency Films;" E. S. Seeley, Altec Service Corp., New York, N. Y.
"Investigation of the Influence of the Negative on the Ground-Noise of Photographic Sound Prints;" O. Sandvik and W. K. Grimwood, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N. Y.
Report of the Standards Committee; E. K. Carver, Chairman.
"Tape Splicers for Film Developing Machines;" J. G. Capstaff and J. S. Beggs, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N. Y.
"Fine-Grain Films Applied to Variable-Density Sound Recording;" C. R. Daily, Paramount Studios, Hollywood, Calif.
"A Multiduty Motor System;" A. L. Holcomb, Electrical Research Products, Inc., Hollywood, Calif.
"Class B Push-Pull for Original Recording"; C. L. Lootens, Republic Productions, Inc., Hollywood, Calif.
"New High-Quality Sound System;" G. Friedl, Jr., H. Barnett, and E. J. Shortt, International Projector Corp., New York, N. Y.

At the banquet the annual presentation of the SMPE Progress Medal and the Journal Award will be made, and the officers-elect for 1940 will be introduced.

FRENCH TRAIN WOMEN TO BE PROJECTIONISTS

With most of the regular projectionists answering the national call to arms to fight on the Western front, French theatres are having difficulty in reopening. As a result of the shortage of projectionists, film companies are now training women who fill the vacancies.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Runaway Angel

(MGM)

An Allegory

A short time ago MGM produced "On Borrowed Time," a picture that dared to get out of the rut. With "Runaway Angel" (formerly titled "Looking After Sandy"), the studio is attempting another unusual entertainment venture. The picture will tell the story of an orphaned girl whose influence and faith guide the destinies of an interesting group of persons. The orphan believes herself to be a jinx, because all who try to befriend her get hurt, but she has a strangely strong belief in what Bible passages mean, and her interpretations and applications of those passages bring happiness where previously misfortune and greed reigned.

The story is semi-modern in context and locales—New York and Brooklyn in the late 1880's. It is from a novel written by Margaret Turnbull a decade ago. It was adapted by Dorothy Yost. "Runaway Angel" is an Albert Levoy picture, which William Thiele, who made "Beg, Borrow and Steal" and "Bridal Suite," is directing.

Virginia Wiedler, last in "The Hardys Out West" and "The Women," will be the star. The featured cast lists Gene Reynolds, featured in "Boys' Town" and starred in "They Shall Have Music." Ian Hunter and Lois Wilson, who is returning to the screen, Henry Hull, Guy Kibbee and Reginald Owen. The principal supporting cast will include Elizabeth Patterson, Arthur Aylesworth, Esther Dale, Ann Todd, Russell Hicks, Harlan Briggs and Barbara Bedford.

Release date: Oct. 27, 1938.

Reno

(RKO Radio)

Melodramatic Romance

In one way this will be the story of "the biggest little city in the world," Reno, Nevada, the divorce capital of the nation, a wide open city. In another way, it is the story of a man who fought to rescue his daughter from the Frankenstein he had helped to create—the divorce mill. The divorce mill saved Reno from becoming a ghost town after its mining potentialities had petered out. The divorce mill made more money for Reno than all the gambling. But many probably are going to be much more interested in the personal story than in the recording of history. A great many men very likely will be interested primarily because Richard Dix will be the star and because there are more than a few competent screen artisans in the cast. Dix recently has had successful roles in "Man of Conquest" and "Here I am a Stranger," and Gail Patrick numbers "Man of Conquest" among her best pictures. Then there will be Anita Louise, Paul Cavanaugh, last in "The Underpup," Astrid Allwyn, Hobart Cavanaugh, Laura Hope Crews, Louis Jean Heydt, Joyce Compton and Frank Faylen.

John Twist is the adaptor of Ellis St. Joseph's original story. Robert Sisk is producing and John Farrow is directing.

Release date: Nov. 17, 1939.

Northwest Passage

(MGM)

Historical Adventure

Few recent books have been as widely read as Kenneth Roberts' historical novel, "Northwest Passage." Few productions ever attempted by MGM have been such ambitious undertakings. In digest the film will present an authentic historical picture of the days when the state of Maine was still a frontier, when men still dreamed of discovering the then mythical northwest passage to the riches of Asia. That setting and the pre-Revolutionary War events which took place in it provide the occasion for the story of Major Robert Rogers, one of the most interesting figures of Colonial history, and the romantic story of an aristocratic Tory scion, Langdon Towne, and Ann Potter, a girl from the slums of London. In simple, "Northwest Passage" is a story of Indian wars and of love.

Two-time Academy award winner, Spencer Tracy will be seen as the indomitable Major Rogers, Robert Young as "Towne" and Laraine Day as Ann Potter. Another two-time academy winner, Walter Brennan, has a featured role. Donald MacBride, Isabel Jewell, Helen MacKeller, Lumsden Hare and Regis Toomey are in the supporting cast. It is to be expected that such a pretentious production will have the values of great big exterior and interior settings and that thousands of extras will appear as Indians, pioneers, soldiers, and what not.

Producer Hunt Stromberg chose as director King Vidor, maker of the great "The Big Parade," the original "Stella Dallas," "The Champ" and others.

Release date: To be determined.

Remember the Night

(Paramount)

Dramatic Romance

A little while ago Mitchell Leisen directed "Midnight," a gay and airy picture that registered well with many. Immediately preceding were such music-glamour pictures as "Artists And Models Abroad," two of Paramount's "Big Broadcast" annuals and "Swing High, Swing Low." To get an idea of the character of Mr. Leisen's present endeavor, "Remember the Night," one must go back to 1935 and "Hands Across the Table" and "Four Hours to Kill."

The story to be told, an original screen play by Preston Sturges, writer of such photoplays as "If I Were King," "Imitation of Life," "We Live Again" and "The Power and the Glory," is a melodramatic romance. It's fiction, but it's about down-to-earth folk. It's one of those things that might have happened. The hero is an assistant district attorney, the heroine a jewel thief. They fall in love. The trial goes on with the assistant D. A. prosecuting the girl he loves.

Fred MacMurray, last in the surprising "Honeymoon in Bali," is the man. Barbara Stanwyck is the girl. Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson, "Snowflake" and Tom Kennedy head the supporting troupe. There is a feeling at Paramount that "Remember the Night" will prove the "sleeper" attraction of the season.

Release date: Jan. 26, 1940 (tentative).

Destry Rides Again

(Universal)

Western

The heroine of this picture will be a glamorous feminine character, star entertainer at the Last Chance saloon, a lady who fights, sings and gambles, a woman who finds out too late that love is the greatest thing in life. The hero is a deputy sheriff who fights for law and order by putting aside his six shooters and brings a new kind of justice to the roaring frontier. That set-up is according to formula for wild and wooly western stories. It is very non-formula, however, that the heroine will be Marlene Dietrich in a role that sharply contrasts with her earlier screen appearances. This bit of casting appears to give showmen a running head start in exploiting "Destry Rides Again." It certainly is a production answer to the cries of those managers and patrons who yell that their screen idols be given different characterizations.

With Miss Dietrich's name serving as a peg upon which to hang everything else, the feature also will make available a platoon of other worthy personalities. James Stewart, now in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," will be the peace loving but quick thinking hero-sheriff, and Brian Donlevy, riding the crest of a popularity wave because of "Jesse James," "Union Pacific" and "Beau Geste," will be the lead villain. For prime supporting names the show will offer Charles Winniger, Mischa Auer, Una Merkel, Irene Hervey and Allan Jenkins.

A Joe Pasternak production, whose record at Universal is a string of successful pictures, direction is in the hands of George Marshall, who had "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," with Edward Bergen-Charlie McCarthy and William O. Fields.

The songs which Miss Dietrich will sing, "Little Joe," rip-roaring cowboy melody, and "You've Got That Look," a teasing ballad to be sung in typical Dietrich style, were composed by Frank Loesser and Frederick Hollander, authors of "Two Sleepy People" and "Moonlight and Shadows."

Release Date: To be determined.

Covered Trailer

(Republic)

Domestic Comedy

Plain comedy will be the entertainment substance of "Covered Trailer." That lure is the first exploitation factor of this Republic production.

Of more direct significance to many, however, is the fact that the picture is one of the "Higgins Family" series. It will feature the regular troupe, James, Lucile and Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport, Tommy Ryan and Maude Eburne. The picture also will have the services of Mary Beth Hughes, who now is in "Fast and Furious," Maurice Murphy and Willie Best.

The story, an original by Jack Townley and Coates Webster, which Townley and Ralph Spence adapted for production and direction by Gus Meins, is a comedy of misadventure. The Higginses, individually and collectively, get into jams financial, pride effacing and criminal.

Release date: To be announced.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

Ninotchka

(MGM)

Comedy

The Hollywood crowd leaving Grauman's Chinese theatre Friday night after viewing "Ninotchka" was groggy. It had just received the surprise of its collective life. It had just seen Greta Garbo in a gay and airy comedy. It had seen Garbo as a slick, suave comedienne. It agreed that "Ninotchka" will prove one of the year's big money pictures.

It's no revelation that a great transition has been effected in Miss Garbo. In various ways MGM's publicity corps has been preparing the public to expect something startling when it sees "Ninotchka." It offers a showman's carnival.

Miss Garbo is absolutely different. She kids herself; she gets tipsy; when she falls in love she forgets her Spartan-like Bolshevik training to find great joy in pursuing the things which the Paris bourgeois pursue. They way she does her job not only proves her own artistry but more than justifies the daring of Ernst Lubitsch, producer-director, who had the courage to present the screen's emotional actress as a screen clown.

Next, naturally, is the supporting cast. Audiences have seen Melvyn Douglas in so many funny pictures since "Theodora Goes Wild" that they are well acquainted with what he can do. Many, after they have followed the merry-mad gyrations of the three "Reds," Sig Rumann, Felix Bressart and Alexander Granach, may hold the opinion that they come near stealing the show. Ina Claire, Bela Lugosi, Gregory Gaye, Rolfe Sedan, Edwin Maxwell and Richard Carle round out a hand picked cast that gives sparkle to a show, which pauses for only 10 of its 110 minutes to become serious.

The screen story itself is a sleekly smooth job. Using Melchior Lengyel's original, writers Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder and Walter Riesch embellished it with zippy dialogue and cleverly constructed situations.

The plot may be summed up tersely. Bolshevik "Ninotchka" goes from Moscow to Paris to see that red agents, "Iranoff," "Buljanoff" and "Kopalski," commissioned to sell the imperial jewels, don't indulge in any monkey business. But a man-about Paris, "Leon," appears and the stoic disciple of Lenin, who in the picture cannot help but smile when he sees what happens, falls in love with him. After that, it's pretty much of a case of to heck with communism for the fun of being in love in Paris. The business of disposing of the jewels is taken care of as a sub plot. Yet when that is over "Ninotchka" is only back in Moscow long enough to get orders to proceed to Constantinople where "Leon" induces her to marry him.

Previewed at Grauman's Chinese Theatre. The insiders who knew what was going to happen sat back like so many happy cats that ate the canary as they listened to the laughing audience.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Mutiny in the Big House

(Monogram)

Story of a Heroic Priest

One of the most ambitious and successful works to come from the Monogram workshops is this pulsating prison problem play of a character conflict between a crusading chaplain and a hardened convict for the future of a newly committed inmate. The film carries a glowing dedicatory message on the work done by prison chaplains and in particular on the heroism of the Benedictine cleric, Rev. Patrick O'Neil, who quelled a big house break at Canon City, Col., and received the Carnegie medal for bravery.

The production carries additional appeal and value to educational and social betterment groups. For others the showman can promise a smartly contrived and briskly stimulating scenario exhibition. Romance is missing from the plot but this only adds to the credibility and punch. Sentimental and comic sequences, especially of a senile inmate who knows no home but his prison cell, and the song and dance preparations for the institution's show, leaven the mixture.

Charles Bickford plays "Father Joe" into a clergyman character as memorable as "Father Flanagan" of "Boy's Town." As the prison big number, Barton MacLane offers a convincing and experienced portrayal. The supporting company, although of not very great name prominence, supplies the principals with strong character playing assistance. William Nigh gave the piece a fast directorial pace. Martin Mooney, who concocted the original theme, as suggested by Father O'Neil's actual story, and Robert D. Andrews, as screen play author, have cleverly combined excitement material with some sound and sensible statements on correctional handling of prison personnel.

Both "Father Joe" and "Red Manson" make a play to win the friendship of a new prisoner, "Johnny Davis," who has been sentenced for forging a check to pay for a sick mother's doctor bills. The priest finds work for him in the prison library. "Red," the boy's cellmate, uses one of the books from the shelves to formulate a code message for a prison break and, despite the clergyman's protestations, the prison heads believe "Johnny" implicated. The break takes place in the jail's workshop and "Father Joe" goes to plead for reason and mercy with "Red," the ringleader. "Johnny" saves the life of the priest and is wounded. The revolt is broken and the boy has good prospects for a parole.

Pack Up Your Troubles

Farce, War Style

"Pack Up Your Troubles" is one of the greatest farces with World War background, since "Two Arabian Nights." It has the three Ritz Brothers in as silly an exhibition of their talents as they have had, Jane Withers, whose boxoffice power is something to be reckoned with, and the supporting players, among them Lynn Bari, Joseph Schildkraut, Stanley Fields, Fritz Leiber and Lionel Royce.

It is a worthwhile picture to exploit as a caricature of World War days, but it must be handled delicately.

The Ritz Brothers, having played a German act in vaudeville, get involved in the World War, capture the general, and make everything come out all right.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

James Earnhardt, conductor of the Taylor theatre at Edenton, North Carolina, arrived in New York the other day to visit the World's Fair, and he isn't feeling particularly happy over his arrival either.

He had been in town but a few hours when a high fever brought a doctor's diagnosis of scarlet fever. They shipped him to a local hospital's isolation ward, without any wasted moments, and there they ordered him to a long and forced confinement, despite his protestations that the fever was nothing more than the reaction of a precautionary injection of diphtheria serum taken from his own doctor down in North Carolina before his departure for the north. A lot of long distance telephoning in the tempo of the frantic finally brought verification of Earnhardt's story from his physician in the south, and with the aid of RKO distributor friends, half a dozen affidavits and an order from the New York Board of Health, Exhibitor Earnhardt obtained a release—to find that meanwhile the hospital had burned all his clothes when they first confined him.

Reading just like a Hollywood scenario writer's word-picture of a Hollywood producer's version of a newspaper office, the New York Daily News tells of how, "In a downtown newspaper office, a telephone jangled, and the city editor, wise in the ways of his craft, picked up the receiver."

Myrtle, a 5,500-pound elephant, one of three in Adelaide Nelson's Dancing Elephants act at the films-and-vaudeville RKO Shubert, in Cincinnati, crashed through the stage floor during the second show at 4:30 P. M. last Friday, the opening day, and plunged 15 feet to the cement basement floor in full view of the audience.

Until noon Saturday all efforts to induce the elephant to ascent a hastily constructed ramp were unavailing. Even the fire department was called into action without success. Arrangements were made with a rigging company to use a hydraulic lift, when John Boles, headlining the show, conceived the idea of turning high-pressure fire hoses on the animal's posterior apex. Almost immediately, the elephant walked to the stage, via the ramp.

A catchy little ditty—"We're Going to Hang Out the Washing on the Siegfried Line"—is being played in London night clubs and theatres as a successor to the first World War song, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

With the tune reminiscent of "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag," the words of the chorus go like this:

We're going to hang out the washing on
the Siegfried Line;
Have you any dirty washing, mother
dear?
We're going to hang out the washing on
the Siegfried Line
'Cause the washing day is here.
Whether the weather may be wet or fine,
We'll just rub along with a care.
We're going to hang out the washing on
the Siegfried Line
If the Siegfried Line's still there.

The Nazis in news broadcasts are complaining that "the lines do not ring true," adding: "The washing will be very dirty before it is hung out on the Siegfried line."

How did the knights get their helmets off when they met a lady?

What does (England's) Princess Elizabeth wear around her neck?

Is there such a thing as a dead mule?

If someone has broken his arm, is it possible to hear the crack?

If cats have kittens and dogs have pups, what do mice have?

My friend and I had a discussion about the sadness of President McKinley's funeral. I said the horses cried. Was I right or wrong?

I would like to know when my husband was born, and in what state.

How many quarts in an average cow?

Can a pigeon fly if it has sore feet?

When ants fall, do they hurt themselves?

Do horses get mad when they get new horseshoes?

If one Siamese twin pinched the other, would the first one feel it?

There's a good piece of business in RKO's new "Fifth Avenue Girl" wherein the socialite wife and her millionaire mate are reconciled through the medium of a big, old-fashioned beefstew. The scene so impressed our A-Mike Vogel of the Managers' Round Table department that he engaged, before RKO's press agents, in one of those typically long Vogel anecdoting chin-fests, of the days he spent with beefstew as far back as American army kitchen days in the woods of France in the World War. The press agents, in turn, became so impressed—or, maybe they were seeking relief—that they turned their heart and hospitality over to Mike with a big beefstew stew at Dinty Moore's, off Longacre Square in New York. Mike stewed for hours. Good ol' stew.

first of the Boris Morros productions for RKO release. They go through their antics for one of their best vehicles and, although some of it belongs to a certain dated era, the comedy is hilarious, judging from audience reaction at the preview. It is Morros' first release for RKO.

The story, which will please Laurel and Hardy fans and then some, is a remake of the French "Les Aviateurs," the rights to which Morros purchased. Credit for the "original" story and screenplay is given Ralph Spence, Alfred Schiller, Charles Rogers and Harry Langdon.

A. Edward Sutherland directed in a competent manner. Laurel and Hardy are the prime factors, which is what was wanted anyway. They are supported by Jean Parker, Reginald Gardiner, Charles Middleton, Jean Del Val, Clem Wilenchick, and James Finlayson.

Sued for Libel

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

Woven into this picture story are three elements, comedy, romance and mystery-melodrama, which common folk understand and usually appreciate. What happens, more than who makes the things happen, is the showmanship exploitation value of "Sued for Libel."

Basically the production is a newspaper story. In it is detailed what occurs when a supposed practical joke backfires and those who started out to have fun find themselves involved in two kinds of worry, a libel suit and a series of murders which cause the hero to turn detective in order to save some innocent, if playful, persons.

No big screen names are concerned. Kent Taylor, Linda Hayes and Richard Lane are principals. Keye Luke, Morgan Conway, Lillian Bond, Emory Parnell, Roger Pryor, Thurston Hall and Roy Gordon compose the troupe which does good work in support.

In the newspaper yarn, with its unique variations coming out of the horseplay that follows romantic rivalry, personal danger, suspense and heroism have their moments prior to the climax in which the crimes are solved and faces saved. Cliff Reid, who has handled a great many of this company's standby offerings, turning out such attractions as "The Informer," "Lost Patrol" and "Bringing Up Baby," produced and Leslie Goodwins, maker of the recent "The Day the Bookies Wept," directed.

Action is the film's keynote, yet dialogue and situations, sometimes involved and complicated, give the picture a swing that leads to more than one or two surprises.

Previewed at the RKO Hillstreet theatre, in Hollywood, the contrast between the feature attraction, "Fifth Avenue Girl," and the preview produced some startling effects. The balcony crowd nevertheless waited around until the screen story had proved what it had anticipated.—Gus McCarthy.

Television Spy

(Paramount)

Espionage, Anonymous

This unimpressively fabricated melodrama purports to show what might happen if an American inventor perfected long distance television and foreign agents found out about it. After imagining that said invention has been achieved, however, imaginations of the four writers credited with the script seem to have gone dead, for nothing exciting to children over 10 follows. Nor did the actors manage to imagine themselves seriously enough employed to make their doings and sayings seem realistic.

The film is from the Harold Hurley side of Paramount, produced by Edward T. Lowe and directed by Edward Dmytryk. The best charactization is by William Collier, Sr., playing an invalid and irascible millionaire who finances the invention of the long distance equipment.

A certain timeliness accrues from slight early dialogue mention of the value of such an invention to any nation at war, but this is not developed.

The Arizona Kid

(Republic)

Western

The war between the states and the action in and around Missouri form the background for this Roy Rogers western. The bit shown of the war at large is in montage form, for here the important thing is guerrilla warfare, and that between two factions in the Confederate Army. Rogers' job, as a captain of scouts, is to capture a guerrilla band led by a former officer of the Army of the South.

Although there are uniforms aplenty in evidence the film is strictly in the western tradition, but the story does become a little confused at times in trying to cover too much territory and the action suffers in consequence. Rogers sings two or three songs, the last in a climactic part of the film.

George "Gabby" Hayes continues as Rogers' constant companion and in his own special way adds much to the picture. The girl is Sally March, a "Gateway to Hollywood" contestant, and the villain of the piece is Stuart Hamblen, better known for his radio and vaudeville work.

The story: Roy Rogers, a native of Kelso, Mo., but for many years living in Arizona, returns to his native town with his friend "Gabby." They have a run-in with "McBride," who practically controls the town. When war is declared Missouri remains in the federal government but in and around Kelso the sympathy is towards the South. "McBride" becomes a captain in the Confederate Army but is reprimanded for looting and other crimes. He becomes a guerrilla band leader. Roy is sent after him with his band, and after several unsuccessful attempts finally gets his man.

Rio

(Universal)

Melodrama

The significance of the title of this mild melodrama of a money and marriage mixup is difficult to interpret from the picture's thesis. True, a great part of the play's action transpires in the South American city of Rio de Janeiro, but outside of some cabaret and carnival scenes the story could have been deposited in any other situation.

An array of upper bracket names and talent has been assembled for the histrionic lineup but the opportunities are few. Basil Rathbone and Victor McLaglen have roles that could be very well executed by performers of less valuable abilities. Sigrid Gurie regulates her performance along the stylization of an harassed heroine of the early days. Robert Cummings is less sprightly than usual—perhaps it was the mustache.

John Braham directed from a screen play by Stephen Morehouse Avery, Frank Partos, Edwin Justus Mayer and Aben Kandel.

"Reynard" is sentenced to a French penal colony off South America for forgery and embezzlement. To be near him, his wife, "Irene," and his semi-valet and bodyguard, "Dirk," make headquarters in Rio de Janeiro. "Irene" finds employment as a cafe singer and a bit of unwelcome romance from "Bill Gregory," an American engineer, who is having an uneven battle with his conscience and a case of acute alcoholism. The pair fall in love finally, which partly accounts for "Gregory's" stand on the water wagon. In the meantime, "Reynard" has

I Met a Murderer

(York Pictures)

Realistic Drama

"I Met a Murderer" is a dreary tale and the telling of it is just as dreary. There is a realistic and artistic approach but the picture has comparatively little to entertain the average film audience. In brief it is a tale of a young farmer, who is goaded into murdering his wife, becomes a fugitive, falls in love with a girl novelist, and then, finally trapped on the English coast, drowns himself. The locale is England and all the photography is out of doors.

The picture was independently produced by three of England's younger cinema generation. Roy Kellino directed, photographed and adapted the story from a screen play by James Mason and Pamela (Mrs.) Kellino. Mason and Mrs. Kellino also play the leads. The only other featured players are Sylvia Coleridge, playing the nagging wife who is murdered, and William Devlin, as the wife's brother.

Interesting, too, is the film's emphasis on facial expression and the camera rather than dialogue to describe a scene. What dialogue there is of the monosyllabic variety, yet the film, depending so much on dramatic intensity is singularly lacking in that quality.

Reviewed at the 55th Street Playhouse, New York. A small afternoon audience viewed the film in silence, but was quite demonstrative shortly thereafter when a cartoon was on the screen.—P. C. M., Jr.

Sabotage

(Republic)

Melodrama and Romance

The sensitivity of this country to the threat of espionage resulting from a spy trial in New York last year has brought a succession of films dealing in that topic. This Republic film, part melodrama and part romance, concerns an espionage ring of unnamed affiliation doing its dirty work in an aircraft factory. The story is an original screen play by Lionel Houser and Alice Altschuler and was directed by Harold Young.

The cast includes Arleen Whelan, Gordon Oliver, Charley Grapewin, Lucien Littlefield, Paul Guilfoyle and J. M. Kerrigan.

A young mechanic, "Tommy Grayson," employee of the Midland Aircraft Corporation, meets "Gail," show girl of a touring musical comedy, and the two plan to marry. Meanwhile sabotage has been discovered at the factory and on his wedding day "Tommy" is arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"Tommy's" father, "Major Matt Grayson," is determined to clear his son and enlists the help of three old cronies who live at the veteran's home. The trail leads them to "Barsht," another mechanic at the factory, and through him to other members of the espionage ring. In a melodramatic climax the "Major," his cronies, other aged veterans of the home take the law into their own hands and obtain the confessions.

Peru

(Paramount)

Travelogue

The Color Cruise cameraman here visits one of South America's most pictorially interesting nations, Peru, from its rugged coastline to the towering Andes. Peru is a study in contrast. On the Pacific coast fishermen live a primitive existence but in Lima, Peru's greatest city, life is on the grander scale. The invasion by camera includes stops at cathedrals, a carnival, pre-Inca ruins and a bull fight. Running time, nine minutes.

Bird Study

Many of the strange birds of the Western Hemisphere have been captured by the camera in this interesting short subject. First is shown the toucan with its large beak and its gentle manner. There is the macaw of the parrot family with its powerful bill. The remainder of the short has to do with the habits and amusing antics of such birds as the crane, the owl, Canadian geese, coromants, the pelican and other birds found in this and neighboring countries.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Cupid Rides The Range

(RKO Radio)

Musical Western

Another in the Ray Whitley western musicals, the subject depends mostly on Ray's singing, accompanied by the 6 Bar Cowboys, with the plot as a secondary factor. Ray is in love with the Spanish Lolita but Lolita's father has promised her to Banning, an unscrupulous business man. Ray and Lolita, after many narrow escapes, manage to rid themselves of Banning. Ray and the 6 Bar Cowboys have ample opportunity to serenade Lolita.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Radio Rogues

A situation involving fake operators of a corporation that is supposed to have a machine which projects any scene from past history is here employed to allow the Radio Rogues to mimic film and radio stars. The Rogues imitate Jimmy Durante, Ned Sparks, Baby Snooks, Lionel Barrymore, Edward G. Robinson, Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Jack Benny, Rochester, Ben Bernie and Charles Laughton. Directed by Lloyd French.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Screen Snapshots, No. 1

Make-up

The first issue in series 19 of "Screen Snapshots" is an interesting excursion into the inner sanctums of Hollywood make-up artists. There are other, and famous, make-up artists in Hollywood who appear in this reel, but the Westmore brothers, are overwhelmingly ahead at least in point of numbers and footage. The art of make-up is demonstrated on such well-known performers as Penny Singleton, Gloria Dickson, Rosemary Lane, Janet Beecher, Jean Arthur, Fay Bainter, Melvyn Douglas, Akim Tamiroff and Charles Laughton.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Unseen Guardians

(MGM)

Passing Parade Particular

Paying tribute to a trio of society's policing patrol is the business of this Passing Parade number. Selecting three instances of organizations whose work to protect the public's interest is either unknown or carelessly overlooked, the miniature reveals the work of the Federal Post Office inspectors in safeguarding the mails against fraudulent use, the testing work done by the Underwriters' Laboratories in analyzing and checking claims over the contents of product, and finally the method of an orphan asylum in selecting parents suitable for adopting children. After viewing the laudable work of each one of the agencies, the audience will feel the valuable reaction of having been entertained and instructed at the same time without any loss to either end result—Running time, 11 minutes.

Travel Tour

The camera invades darkest Africa and reveals the advances made by civilization. Beautiful estate and plantations are shown. Many onetime savages are employed in the various industries of the continent. Further inland are seen mysterious temples built by savages as far back as 2,000 B.C., believed at one time to be the center of African civilization. Finally the gold mining industry is brought to the screen.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Roy Atwell, the exponent of the twisted words, runs into many misfortunes with a blonde salesgirl and his wife. When the sales girl comes to Mr. Atwell's home to demonstrate a cooking set which is to be a surprise gift for his wife, the Missus misinterprets the situation. Roy gets his words so twisted that he only gets himself into more trouble. An amusing and entertaining short subject.—Running time, 16 minutes.

Oily to Bed, Oily to Rise

(Columbia)

Three Stooges

Moe, Curly and Larry, otherwise known as the Three Stooges, continue unchecked their accustomed antics. Conforming to the title, if they did, would possibly result in making Moe healthy, Curly wealthy and Larry wise, but here are exceptions. The boys have done most everything but discover an oil well, so in this subject they discover an oil well. There's dirty work afoot, too, what with swindlers trying to defraud a widow and her three lovely daughters, but the Rover boys, who greatly resemble the Stooges, rush to save the widow, and the three lovely daughters, for themselves. Dick Curtis, Eddie Laughton, James Craig, Eva McKenzie, Dorothy Moore, Linda Winters, Lorna Gray and Dick Fiske are in support. Running time, 18½ minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 67
(Universal)
Oddity

Number 67 of Universal's "Stranger Than Fiction" series contains many interesting items. The first is a collection of the various types of guns and pistols used as far back as 1815. A Bridgeport artist has made a duplicate in miniature of the White House, all in mother of pearl salvaged from the handles of old penknives. Ralph Veady, a college student of Bellflower, Cal., lost both legs in an accident some years back, but this doesn't keep him from enjoying sports the same as other folk. The camera shows Veady ice-skating with specially built skates. The remainder of the subject concerns a miniature fleet of the U. S. Navy, a farmer of Perry, Okla., who uses an old hearse as a truck and pleasure car, and finally a scene of fishing without the aid of tackle. The fish, cornered at one end of a pond, jump into the boats.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

Ice Frolic
(Vitaphone)
Broadway Brevity

Eleanor (Snooky) Gardner, a youngster of some seven years, is the star of this two-reel Broadway Brevity subject, which also has Mabel Taliaferro, The Merry Macs, Adele Inge, Alfred Trenkler and Peggy Fahy and Richard Toucey. Snooky, watching the skaters from her house, wants to go out and join them but her mother insists the youngster practice her singing. Snooky falls asleep and dreams of an ice carnival in which she has the leading role.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Sheep in the Meadow
Terry-Toon

A black and white pastorale from the Terry-Toon studios depicts the big bad wolf and his nasty temperament in seducing one of the sheep from the meadow for slaughtering purposes. The dirty trick is prevented by a last minute rescue-arrival of the shepherd lad. The idyll has been done before and in certain respects to better results, but it is of some interest.—Running time, seven minutes.

Information Please, No. 1
(RKO Pathe)
Radio Program on Film

Pathe has invaded the radio field and returned with a reel of the popular program "Information please." John Kieran, Frank P. Adams, Rex Stout and Oscar Levant, seated side by side at a table, are questioned by Clifton Fadiman, and are seldom stumped. The casual nonchalance of the five before the camera is not the least entertaining asset of a short subject which drew applause at the Radio City Music Hall.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Crop Chasers
(Columbia)
Color Rhapsody

A Color Rhapsody satire on the protection rackets concerns a farmer visited by a committee of black crows who, for a price, will insure his crops against invasion. The farmer turns down the offer and disaster follows as the crows ruin his crops. The farmer then hires a couple of scarecrows but the black crows are worldly wise and soon rout the hired help. As the scarecrows dejectedly leave the fields a baby crow falls into a well. The scarecrows rescue the chee-ild and for this good deed the crows restore the crops and the farmer rewards the scarecrows.—Running time, 7½ minutes.

Football Thrills of 1938
(MGM)
Pete Smith Recollects

The showing of this pigskin parade featuring the football highlights of the past year is a "push over" date for this time of the year. What with newspapers and the nationally circulated magazines beginning to blossom forth with page wide details of the coming season, the showman will only have to sound the query to his patronage as to whether history will repeat itself as excitingly as it did during the preceding pigskin period. The thrill moments of the subject consist of a compilation from a variety of topnotch games of last year and in their retelling they contain as much thrill and sport skill as they did in the original. Careful editing, welcome use of the slow motion camera inspection and a few dabs of Pete Smith witticisms combine to make the material first class.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Orphan Duck
Colored Terry-Toon

The plight of a familyless duckling is the material colored brightly and breezily pointed in this number from the Terry-Toon listings. The creature attempts to crash the home circles of a chicken family but papa rooster refuses to have any addition to his brood. Things look dark and cold for the orphaned bird until he rescues one of the chick family's youngsters from the falls. The resultant adoption proceedings are amusingly done.—Running time, seven minutes.

Gun Play
(RKO Pathe)
Skeet Shooting

At one of New York State's exclusive gun clubs sportsmen experienced in the art of handling guns demonstrate their ability in skeet shooting on differing ranges. These ranges present many obstacles which the gunners must overcome to sight the target. With skeet shooting becoming more popular, sports fans can be expected to enjoy this subject.—Running time, 9 minutes.

The Fresh Vegetable Mystery
(Paramount)
Color Cartoon

A Max Fleischer Color Classic, this cartoon has to do with crime, of all things. It's a rather disconcerting crime to write about, for the characters, if they can be called that, consists of carrots, potatoes (they're policemen), onions on a vacation from Bermuda, and other assorted delicacies to delight the heart of a vegetarian. The potatoes are scarcely a match for the arch criminal until luck plays its part and right once again wins out. The arch criminal turns out to be three mice in search of a disguise. Running time, seven minutes.

Land of the Midnight Fun
(Vitaphone)
Merrie Melody

The travelogue comes in for a bit of ribbing in this Leon Schlesinger color cartoon. A luxury liner leaves New York Harbor with Alaska as its destination. On arrival in the land of the Eskimo the liner miscalculates the distance to the landing and the passengers are disembarked into the water. Then follows a tour of the points of interest, all treated with tongue in cheek, including an Eskimo night club. On the return trip home the liner becomes lost and when the fog clears the liner is perched atop the Trylon of the New York World's Fair. —Running time, seven minutes.

Act Your Age
(RKO Radio)
Edgar Kennedy Comedy

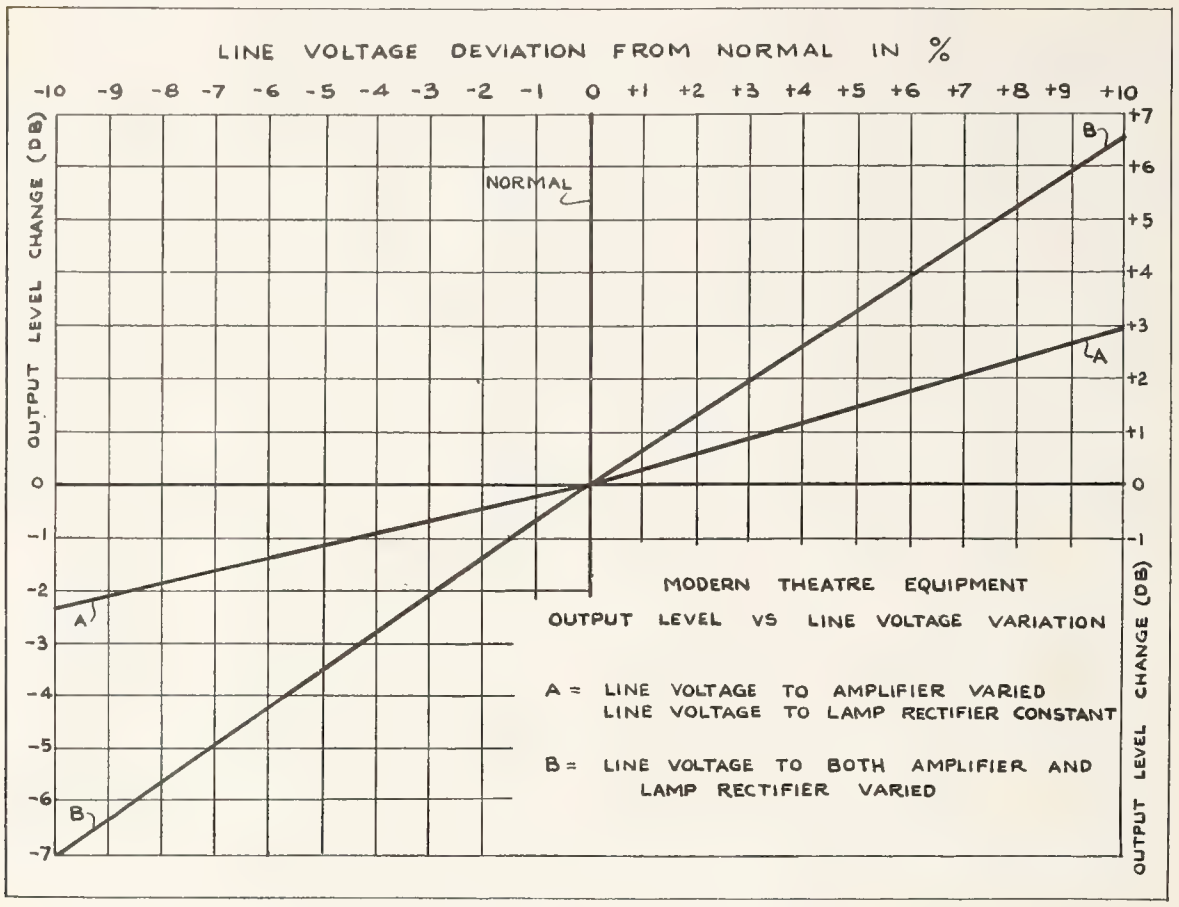
Edgar Kennedy, exponent of the "slow-burn," returns in the first of the new 1939-40 two-reel comedies. Difficulties arise when Edgar endeavors to get his father-in-law a job as night watchman at the office. The old man writes a letter requesting an executive position and unwittingly deprives his son-in-law of the job after a number of adventures on the part of Edgar in trying to appear young to hold his present job by dressing like a college boy and undergoing numerous home-made treatments to cover his cranial nakedness. An entertaining and amusing comedy in the Kennedy manner.—Running time, 18 minutes.

The Blue Danube Waltz
(Paramount)
Philharmonic Orchestra

Those who appreciate good music may be expected to consider this an outstanding short subject, and the average patron will be satisfied because the "Blue Danube" melody is known by everyone. The National Philharmonic Orchestra of the U.S.A., directed by Frederick Feher, beautifully interprets Johann Strauss' waltz. The photography and editing are first class. This short is printed in a blue tint which harmonizes with the music and provides pleasing effects.—Running time, ten minutes.

Sword Fishing
(Vitaphone)
Howard Hill

This is an exciting and excellently photographed subject on fishing with bow and arrow. Howard Hill, world's champion archer, is the fisherman. In Hill's hands it is deadly. Of course the bow and arrow only is used to spear the sword fish. The rod and reel occupy the same strategic position otherwise as in any other manner of fishing. The subject has some comedy, as when a rowboat is rammed by a sword fish while the two occupants dive into the water. Narration by Ronald Reagan.—Running time, 10 minutes.



Unusual Occupations—L9-1
(Paramount)
Color Variety

In this unusual issue of "Unusual Occupations" we find a woman cattle rancher in Texas, an Ohio dentist who has spent his idle moments searching for the secret of Damascus steel, a woman in Chicago who makes pictures out of every kind of discarded object, a whip-cracking railroad watchman on the island of Java, Olympe Bradna and her collection of miniature furniture, and finally a man in New Jersey whose hobby is war and weapons of war. —Running time, 11 minutes.

Swing Hotel
(Universal)
Musical Variety Program

"Swing Hotel" is a musical variety show staged by the employees of a hotel after the guests have gone to bed. With Duke Daly's orchestra accompanying the entertainers, The Three Charming Screwballs are introduced, followed by Martha Mears, singer, Edna and John Torrence, ballroom dancers, the Three Rockets, the Notables Quartet. Jerry Lester and Milton Charleston handle the introductions.—Running time, 17 minutes.

Power Fluctuation Shown Cause of Sound Variation

by WILLIAM A. MUELLER
Chief Engineer,
Warner Brothers Sound Department

Sound pictures as released by major studios are very carefully recorded so that they can be reproduced on one fader setting. All studios spend a great deal of time and money to secure a release print that is absolutely uniform and of the correct sound level throughout. In the case of variable area recordings, variations in print density do not change the sound level so that if the negative has been correctly recorded the sound level of all prints must be identical regardless of processing conditions.

Complaints Studied

In spite of this, however, all studios receive numerous complaints that certain reels or sequences are higher or lower than the remainder of the picture. The theatre manager and operators complain that they have to continually adjust the fader in order to secure a good show.

The sound department at Warner Bros. has investigated many of these complaints and invariably has found that the print was satisfactory and that the trouble was in wide alternating current voltage fluctuation of the power supply to the theatre.

The graph above shows how the output of modern sound reproducing equipment varies with line voltage. It will be noted that the output of this sound system goes up 6.5 DB if the voltage rises 10 per cent. If the voltage decreases 10 per cent the output of the sound system drops 7 DB. Everyone knows that such output variations are disastrous to any show. Even with a voltage variation of 5 per cent which is average, the output of the theatre equipment varies ±3.5 DB, or a total variation of 7.0 DB, and even this variation will ruin almost any show unless it is corrected by manual changes of the fader setting.

This condition is not one of occasional occurrence but is common to most theatres in the United States. Many times our service engineers have reported a variation in output level of 3 or 4 DB between runnings of the same test frequency film, which has a running time of 4 minutes. The trouble seems to be most prevalent in the deluxe first run houses which are usually located in sections where there is a heavy electrical load variation.

The difficulty is easily and inexpensively remedied by the installation of voltage regulators of the instantaneous type which are commercially available, and our experience shows that the output of a sound system can be maintained constant to within ½ DB by such regulators. In every case where regulators have been installed the theatre managers are amazed at the smoothness of the show. The correct fader setting is determined at the first showing and is left unchanged for the run of the picture with the exception of a possible change of one fader step as the house fills with people.

The heads of all the sound departments in the Hollywood studios express themselves freely to the effect that a good show cannot be obtained without proper voltage regulation of the power supply.

The services of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences are available to any theatre operator for consultation and guidance on this subject.

Other Disturbances

A familiar source of annoyance to the sound equipment trouble-shooter is brought to trial in Mr. Mueller's convincing discussion. Voltage fluctuation can, and too often does, noticeably affect volume. It also is guilty of other and often more serious disturbances in the sound system. These include distortion caused by forcing amplifiers and other apparatus to function at operating voltages for which they were not designed; deterioration of parts resulting from overheating at high voltage; and occasionally even a burn-out that interrupts the performance and requires more or less extensive repairs.

While it may very likely be true that not all sound systems will show themselves quite so sensitive to voltage fluctuation as those which supplied the basis of the chart presented, some might react even more unfavorably. And it is to be noted that Mr. Mueller limits his voltage deviations to plus or minus ten per cent. Commercial power supplies, as used, uncompensated, in many American theatres today, may vary by plus or minus 20 per cent, or even more, in the course of a single evening.

Exhibitors usually can check the steadiness of their own supply by enlisting the co-operation of the power company. Utility companies will sometimes install recording voltmeters for a period of a week or so, so as to obtain an accurate record of the fluctuation. If the generating plant equipment does not allow the power company to compensate for the fluctuating demands of the community, the only other remedy is installation by the theatre of its own voltage regulators.—GEORGE SCHULTZ, Editor of Better Theatres.

Pathe May Sell DuPont Holdings

Officers of Pathe Laboratories and the DuPont Film Manufacturing Corporation met this week to discuss disposal of the film manufacturing company's stock owned by the non-operative Pathe Film Corporation. The assumption of operating control of Pathe by the laboratory, and the desire of the directors of the former holding corporation to conclude its affairs, has brought the move for the liquidation of the stock.

Discussed were a possible stock dividend among Pathe stockholders, and a possible sale of the stock at a reasonable price, the money to be distributed to Pathe stockholders as a cash dividend. The plans were reported rejected, but Pathe, it is said, is determined to dispose of the stock before the year's end.

Pathe is understood to own 35 per cent of DuPont's common.

Meanwhile, O. Henry Briggs of Pathe was to arrive on the coast this week to negotiate for acquisition of Cinema Laboratories, Inc., The Pathe plan, it was said, would set up a Pathe Laboratories, Inc., of California, as a wholly-owned Pathe subsidiary.

National Decency Legion Classifies 11 Pictures

Of 11 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week three were approved for general patronage, six were listed as unobjectionable for adults and two were cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Hollywood Cavalcade," "Kustens Glada Kavaljerer" (Swedish), "U-Boat 29." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Fast and Furious," "Intermezzo, a Love Story," "Una Luz en Mi Camino" (Spanish), "Ninotchka," "Mutiny in the Big House," "Three Sons." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Eternally Yours," "Harvest" (French).

RAISES, NOT CUTS, TALENT DEMAND; NEW AFL-CIO FIGHT NEAR IN EAST

New York Projectionists Answer CIO Jurisdiction Challenge on Coast by Forming Two New Locals

While John L. Lewis's Congress for Industrial Organization, recently defeated in its attempt to invade the motion picture industry on the coast, convened in San Francisco this week, one of its small unions appeared to have precipitated a violent reaction from the American Federation of Labor's International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, by claiming jurisdiction over New York projectionists.

Two New Locals Chartered

The New York propectionists' Local 306, an IATSE affiliate, moved quickly this week to forestall any CIO invasion of its territory and its field, either in projection or in any part of the operation of theatres. Taking its protests directly to national CIO officials, it also chartered two new local unions, B-171 and B-172, in the Manhattan and Bronx respectively, for doormen and ushers, lining up 1,600 members.

The moves are the result of the reported chartering last week of the United Theatrical and Motion Picture Service Employees, Local 258, by the CIO United Retail and Wholesale Employees of America. This local is headed by Bernard Deckoff, and originally was chartered for "front office" employees; but Mr. Deckoff claimed jurisdiction over all unorganized theatre workers.

Conferences were held last week between Local 306 officials, and Samuel Wolchak, president of the Retail and Wholesale Employees union, which had chartered Mr. Deckoff's union. In the absence of a statement from Mr. Wolchak, Local 306 spokesmen said he had denied granting Mr. Deckoff's union jurisdiction over projectionists.

Empire State Adds Protest

The Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union, the only other New York projectionists' union, and unaffiliated, added its protest to the CIO, with that of Local 306.

Meanwhile, in New York also, representatives of Local 306 and those of the major circuits on an arbitration board, as provided by an existing contract, continued to meet, seeking a fifth "neutral" arbitrator, in the negotiations on a wage increase and additional vacation time. A federal district court judge was to pick the neutral man, if the two sides could not agree.

Negotiations between the local and the Independent Theatre Owners Association were expected to be resumed. The local seeks a wage boost.

Meantime, again in New York this week, the treasurers' division of the IATSE held its first meeting this Friday. The division broke away recently from the Theatrical Agents, Managers and Treasurers' Union.

In the field, negotiations continued between various local projectionists' and stage hands' unions and circuit and independent operators.

The projectionists' union Local 164, of Milwaukee, called a strike this week against the Tosa, independent neighborhood theatre. The union claims Ross Baldwin, owner, broke a wage scale agreement in union contract.

In Chicago, the theatre building engineers' union won restoration of a pay cut of five per cent, imposed last year, from Balaban and Katz and other circuits and independents.

In Dover, Delaware, the Wilmington operators' Local 473 filed an appeal this week in the State Supreme Court against a Chancery Court decision enjoining it from picketing the New Rialto theatre, Wilmington.

In St. Louis, the board of directors of the St. Louis Amusement Company discussed the picketing of six neighborhood houses by the operators' Local 143.

In Oklahoma City, the operators' union is asking a five per cent wage increase and a three year contract from the Standard Theatres Corporation, it was said.

WAGES UP, HOURS DOWN, OCTOBER 24TH

Minimum hourly wages for all workers under the wages and hours act will increase from 25 to 30 cents on October 24th; and at the same time, the maximum working week will be reduced to 42 hours. The new wage scales are constant for six years; at that time, the minimum will be raised to 40 cents per hour, except in those industries which prove they cannot stand such an increase. The reduction in working hours, however, is for one year; and the end of that period, the hours will be reduced to 40.

Luncheon for Van Schmus

A surprise birthday party luncheon was given on Wednesday for W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall, by executives and department heads of the theatre. The following were present: G. S. Eyssell, Leon Leonidoff, Erno Rapee, Russell Markert, Florence Rogge, Hattie Rogge, Gene Snyder, Hazel Flynn, Eugene Braun, Robert Henderson, Runo Maine, Marco Montedoro, Fred A. Cruise and Willa Van.

MGM Claims "Chips" Record

"Goodbye, Mr. Chips" will complete next Sunday its sixth month at the Astor theatre, New York. This run breaks the record preously held by Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," according to MGM, which claims that more than 700,000 people have seen "Chips" during the engagement.

Studio Talent and Technicians Consider Asking Increase After Noting Raises Given Cameramen and IATSE

Moving directly against their producer and studio employers who are seeking to reduce overhead expenditures and actual filming costs to conform with reduced income from Europe's warring nations, technical workers and studio talent not only are refusing to accept salary reductions but in some cases are demanding increases.

Fred Pelton on Wednesday was appointed Hollywood labor contact by producers and Victor Clarke was named as his assistant, Pat Casey, general labor representative for the majors, will continue his principal duties in New York.

Cameramen Win Increase

Cameramen have won a ten per cent increase, following a similar increase obtained three weeks ago by some 12,000 IATSE studio workers; extras of the Screen Actors Guild now are demanding a 15 per cent raise, and the 2,000 Class A actors of the same organization are demanding a full accounting of the war "emergency" before considering any petitions by producers for relief.

Meanwhile, the long struggle between members of the Studio Technicians' Local 37 and the international officership of its superior organization, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, appeared over as representatives signed an agreement restoring autonomy to the local and returning to it part of its jurisdictional authority.

The Newsreel Cameramen's Local 644 on Tuesday in Hollywood won a 10 per cent wage boost, with the expectation that hours adjustments would be made later. Involved in the productive negotiations were Charles Downs, business agent of the local; Mr. Casey and William Bioff, representative of the IATSE.

The American Society of Cinematographers, which holds a bargaining contract with major studios for first cameramen, voted Monday in Hollywood to reject any proposal for merging with IATSE Photographers Local 659.

Laboratory Strikes Over

In New York, a strike at the Paramount News laboratories flared up briefly this week and last, and each time was settled by long distance telephone conversations with Mr. Casey on the coast. The misunderstandings arose out of economy moves, and the attempted dropping of a sound man. The local involved was the Studio Mechanics Local 52.

In Hollywood last week, the Screen Actors Guild warned its members not to accept any salary cuts until the results of an investigation by its officers on the effects of the war.

"We believe that actors should learn from their own officers the extent of the emergency, if any," the notice said. "We do not believe that a percentage cut of the salaries of the talent groups is the answer."

The Screen Directors Guild board of directors Wednesday decided to refer all producers' requests for salary cuts of its members to a conciliation committee.

The studio painters also are asking for a wage increase—15 per cent, by October 16th. The demands were authorized at a meeting of 500 painters, presided over by Herb Sorrell, business representative.

"BIGGEST SHOW" OF DOCUMENTARY PICTURES IS HELD AT WORLD'S FAIR

31 Subjects Exhibited by Science and Education Department and New Association of Documentary Film Producers

This was "Documentary Film Festival Week" at New York's World's Fair's Little Theatre, standing in the middle of the big-show built on Flushing Meadows, Long Island.

The World's Fair management, always receptive to proposals of any special events to swell their much-jeopardized gate receipts, put on the "Festival" for "the most complete and comprehensive list of documentary films that has ever been shown in a single theatre." The Fair's Science and Education Department officially sponsored the exhibit, embracing some 31 subjects, assisted by the Association of Documentary Film Producers, which was formed in New York in mid-June as the first organization of its kind in this country, and one of the first in the world. A constitution was adopted, officers elected, headquarters established at 1600 Broadway and a basic intention set down: "To develop, publicize and promote the artistic and technical standards of independent creative films" (all recorded in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, June 24th, page 56).

Films Not Seen by Public

The World's Fair pictures were selected by the Association of Documentary Film Producers and included many films never seen by the general public. England, France, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Holland and Russia, as well as the United States, were represented in the program.

Two-hour programs free to the public were shown daily between four and six in the afternoon.

"The United States is reputed to produce the world's best documentary pictures," said the Fair's official report, adding, "comparatively few Americans outside the larger cities have seen many documentary films or know what they are. Comparatively few professional critics devote much review space to them.

"Nevertheless," they add, "such pictures as 'The River,' 'The 400,000,000,' 'Spanish Earth,' 'Plow That Broke the Plains,' 'The City,' 'The School,' and 'Crisis,' have aroused keen interest and enthusiasm of a sort rarely manifested by film audiences.

Called "New Art Form"

"Almost without exception the producers are young men and women in their early thirties. Many of them are noted technicians who have quit salaried jobs in the commercial motion picture studios to enter a new field that offers them their first chance to manufacture something that has not only entertainment value, but other values in addition.

"It is not too much to call the documentary film a new art form; an art, which is an authentic product of our time. That the 'documentary' is well along towards acceptance as such an art is indicated by the amazing way in which producers are springing in a dozen nations.

"The Association of Documentary Film Producers wishes to call attention particularly to the Czech film 'The Earth in Song,' an idyll of Czech peasant life as it existed before the conquest of Nazism. This picture has never been shown publicly in this country, although it won the Gold Cup in Venice in 1936."

Scientists Show First, But Halt Series Because of War Pressures

The men who direct the research activities of leading manufacturers will witness the first film—and the last, for a while—of the Nobel Science Series when they attend the meeting of the Industrial Research Institute at Westchester Country Club, Harrison, N. Y., Friday and Saturday.

The Institute comprises executives and personnel of research laboratories of large and small industries.

The "Nobel Science Series" of short subjects had been planned to include a group of films showing the experiments of such researchers and scientists as Davidson of Bell Telephone, Urey of Columbia, Compton of the University of Chicago, and Milliken of California. The idea was both to preserve these experiments for the historical record, and to favorably influence young people along lines of scientific research as a career.

Back of the project were Maurice Holland and Edward Dorfman, the former an industrial engineer and director of the scientific advisory committee of the World's Fair, as well as acting director of the Industrial Research Institute; Mr. Dorfman is president of the American Institute of Motion Pictures, and made the series of films on Harvard Law School men, as well as "Peace and Democracy", which depicted the opinions of Einstein, Thomas Mann, Hull, Ickes, Senator Taft, Benes, also shown at the World's Fair.

The war has put the plans of Messrs. Holland and Dorfman temporarily in the discard, due to the "increased pressure on research men", according to Mr. Holland. The one film made, "Langmuir", is two reels, 35 mm., sound. General Electric paid for it, with Holland and Dorfman acting as producers. It has only had showings before scientific groups, and there is no thought of showing it in theatres. If anywhere else, it would be in Y.M.C.A.'s or before adult education groups.

U. S. Issues Two-Reel Housing Documentary

The United States Housing Authority in Washington is issuing a two-reel documentary film on housing conditions entitled "Housing in Our Time." Methods of physical distribution are still to be set by Nathan Straus, administrator of the Authority in Washington, but it is expected that, as in the case of other films produced by Government agencies, the picture will be distributed in theatres, local clubs and other interested organizations rental free. Transportation will also probably be paid by the Authority.

Harold McCracken, explorer and freelance producer, with headquarters in New York under the name "Courier Productions," produced the film. He was also the cameraman. Alois Havrilla is the narrator.

The film, 20 minutes in length, explains the purpose of the Federal Housing project and illustrates how blighted sections may be turned into bright residential areas for low-incomed workers. A Jacksonville, Fla., project is shown as being typical.

Mr. McCracken is understood to be making a second picture for the Pittsburgh Housing Authority. The New York City Housing Authority is also embarked upon another picture, the working title of which is "General Housing Conditions in New York," and which will have for its climax the opening of the Queens bridge housing project in New York on October 25th.

Documentary Films Slated for Canada

British Acoustics, Ltd., London, have completed arrangements for distribution in Canada through Associated Screen News, Montreal, of a number of British documentary films on educational topics.

The films were used at the New York World's Fair in connection with the "School of Tomorrow," showing English advances in visual education. Screen News will distribute them in Canada, to be screened for the benefit of Canadian school children who were unable to visit the Fair in New York.

Motion Pictures on Forum Program

Frank Nugent, motion picture critic of the New York Times and Arthur DeBra of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, will be the principal speakers at a group meeting on motion pictures at the Biltmore hotel, New York, on Saturday at the National Conference on Civil Liberties in the Present Emergency. The conference is sponsored by the American Civil Liberties Union. Saturday's group meeting will deal with government censorship in relation to films, radio, stage, press, books and periodicals. This session will be in charge of the National Council on Freedom and Censorship, with Quincy Howe as chairman. Other speakers will be Sidney Kaye, CBS counsel; Elmer Rice, playwright and Elmer Davis, radio commentator.

"Gulliver", "Herbert" For Holiday Release

Max Fleischer's feature length color cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels," will be released Christmas week and Paramount's other holiday special, "The Gay Days of Victor Herbert", will follow at New Year's time. Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, announced intensive national advertising and exploitation campaigns for both productions.

A total of $210,000 has been appropriated for advertising "Gulliver's Travels." The money will be spent in newspapers and in national magazines. The campaign hopes to bring to the attention of 50 million readers the first feature-length cartoon since "Snow White." Six exploiteers will be sent on the road to work on the cartoon and the Victor Herbert picture. Also the original songs of the former and Victor Herbert's melodies will be plugged on national radio networks from the end of October.

Only a limited number of prints will be available on "Gulliver" for Christmas.

B'nai B'rith Cinema Lodge Holds First Meeting

The first meeting of the new Cinema Lodge of the national B'nai B'rith was held last Thursday night at the Hotel Edison in New York City, with more than 100 representing the motion picture industry. Dr. William F. Rosenblum, chairman of the Metropolitan Anti-Defamation League, was the chief speaker. The charter will be presented Thursday evening, November 3rd. The officers of the Cinema Lodge are: A. W. Schwalberg, president; Stuart H. Aarons, secretary, and Max B. Blackman, treasurer.

Rothacker to Coast

Watterson R. Rothacker, Hollywood vice-president of Quigley Publishing Company, left New York Tuesday following a visit of several weeks. Before returning to Hollywood he will be the guest of Warren Wright at the Calumet Farm, Lexington, Ky., for the duration of the Keeneland Race Meet. Mr. Rothacker will return to his Hollywood office on October 26th.

SPLIT IN NEW YORK ALLIED WIDENS; KUYKENDALL URGES EXHIBITOR UNITY

Thornton Kelly Calls Meeting October 17th, to Bring Issue with Max Cohen Group to a Showdown

With the calling of another meeting of the E. Thornton Kelly faction of New York Allied for October 17th the fight between the two sections of that organization is expected to arrive at a victory for one or the other group at that time.

The dispute—a sort of "Cohens and Kellys in Dilemma"—came to a head last week, with a meeting held in Syracuse Tuesday, called by Mr. Kelly, to form a new Allied unit in New York, affiliated with the national body, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of October 7th.

Expelled by National Allied

New York Allied, while continuing to use that name, had been expelled from the national group for the opposition of its leader, Max Cohen, to the national body's rejection of the code of fair trade practices and his protest against its faith in legislation as opposed to self-regulation.

A bulletin issued by Mr. Kelly to Allied of New York members disclosed that the October 17th meeting, also called for Syracuse, was made at the motion of Murry Briskin of Homer and Clarence Dopp of Johnstown. The meeting was authorized by Mitchel Conery, Albany regional vice-president; Max Fogel, Rochester; John Gardner, Schenectady; Charles Wilson, Troy; William Tishkoff, Rochester, nad Harry Savett, Greene.

National Allied officers have promised to attend the meeting, which is "to determine the future status of this organization with relation to National Allied," according to the bulletin.

Mr. Cohen said Monday in New York that he will not attend the meeting, not wishing to enter a controversy "started by a disgruntled employe," and adding that there can be no official meeting of the New York unit unless he, as president, called it.

A statement by the Independent Theatre Owners of America made over the weekend said that "Typical Abram Myers' tactics are evident."

"Myers, for his own protection, expelled N. Y. Allied from the national group and is reported to be splitting the present organization," said the statement.

Michigan Reelects Branch

The Allied Theatre Owners of Michigan, at their annual convention ended last week, asked for continued negotiation of the industry code, and petitioned National Allied, distributors and the Department of Justice to place the arbitration clauses of the originally conceived code into effect.

Ray Branch of Hastings was re-elected president; other officers elected being Cass Beechler, vice-president; and Ed Kirschner, secretary-treasurer.

National Allied plans to hold its eastern regional meeting in Philadelphia November 13th.

Samuel Pinanski has been elected president of Allied Theatres of Massachusetts, Inc. Vice-president is John H. Devlin, treasurer is Stanley Sumner and secretary is Joseph H. Brennan.

Harry Alexander of Toronto was elected new president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of Ontario Tuesday. Nat Taylor was named vice-president. The organization voted to seek a conciliation board.

BITTINGER'S PATRONS PREFER MUSICALS

Theatre patrons of Bloomsbury, Pa., and the surrounding territory in Columbia County prefer musicals, according to a survey conducted by George Bittinger, manager of the Capitol. A check of his ten box-office hits shows that six are musical, three are straight drama and one is a comedy. The Astaire-Rogers productions head the list, and Bing Crosby and the Eddy-MacDonald pictures are close behind. The humor picture in the first ten attractions was the late Will Rogers' "In Old Kentucky". The third engagement of "Naughty Marietta" played to more persons than the previous runs.

Directors include the officers and: M. J. Mullin, E. A. Cuddy, H. M. Addison, Fred Greenway, Harry McDonald, Benjamin Domingo, Max Melincoff, H. E. Hoffman, John J. Ford, John S. Giles, James H. Doyle and Walter A. Brown.

The executive board includes: Samuel Pinanski, M. J. Mullin, Harry McDonald, Max Melincoff, John J. Ford, Stanley Sumner, Joseph H. Brennan, H. M. Addison and John H. Devlin.

The advisory committee is composed of: Abner Eilenberg, George A. Ramsdell, Francis C. Lydon, Philip Bloomberg and Nathan Goldstein.

Circuits Answer Brandt

The suggestion advanced by Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, for united action in arbitrating clearance disputes in the New York metropolitan area has been answered by the Prudential, Cocalis and Skouras circuits, all of which are reported to have asked for further information.

The Association, in a recent statement, said that "arbitration would prove a boon to exhibitors everywhere. The major distributors have been contacted on the matter, and likewise the circuits in the metropolitan area.

Ned Stevenson Forms Public Relations Agency

Ned Stevenson, former president of Visuphonic Pictures, Inc., has organized a firm to handle general public relations and motion pictures. The organization, Ned Stevenson and Associates, has Suzanne Silvercruys, author, sculptor and radio performer, Robert J. Caldwell, authority on labor relations and manufacturing problems, and Mathilda Rowland, fashion expert.

Honor Alban Mestanza

H. Alban Mestanza, editor of Teatro al Dia, a Quigley publication, has been elected a director of the newly created Ecuadorean-American Chamber of Commerce in the United States. He will act in an honorary capacity as editorial consultant for Ecuador, monthly publication in England issued under auspices of the Chamber.

Western New York Showmen Urged to "Take Stock of Themselves"; Calls Neely Bill Unworkable

by JAMES F. SCHRADER
in Buffalo

A plea for unity and harmony among exhibitors was made Monday in Buffalo at a session of the western New York unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Ed Kuykendall, national president of the organization, placed the blame for the many anti-trust suits squarely upon the shoulders of the exhibitors and distributors themselves.

Leading up to a discussion of the many Department of Justice suits filed against exhibitors and distributors throughout the country, Mr. Kuykendall told 100 Buffalo and western New York theatre owners, that "never before in the history of the industry has there been so much turmoil, dissension and hatred among ourselves."

With a plea to "take stock of ourselves," Mr. Kuykendall suggested that "everybody sit down, weigh and measure their differences and get together to solve our own problems. I can see nothing good coming out of these suits," he said, "nothing worthwhile or constructive."

"We have brought it on ourselves by our selfishness and our desire to get everything out of the business we can," Mr. Kuykendall added, with reference to the anti-trust suits. "We should give more time to the running of our own theatres than we do to the running of a competitor's across the street."

Calls Neely Bill "Unworkable"

Calling the Neely bill "unworkable," The MPTOA head said that it would be a physical impossibility to comply with its provisions, and that it would only serve "to make the exhibitor the goat." The only answer to the present problem in this field, he said, is the working out of reasonable cancellation privileges.

Hundreds of organizations that formerly were in favor of passage of the bill, according to Mr. Kuykendall, are now against it, "simply because they have taken the time to make themselves aware of all its provisions." He described it as a "camouflaged piece of hypocrisy," and urged exhibitors to correct those who have been "misinformed."

Mr. Kuykendall also called the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers an "unfair set-up," though it is protected by law.

As for business in general, the organization's leader forecast a decided upturn in the next few months. After that, he said the outlook is doubtful. "The European war is going to seriously hamper production of motion pictures here," he added, "It will make for cheaper production and fewer pictures.

"Buy accordingly," he warned, "and don't go crazy increasing overhead and starting a lot of building and redecorating."

The MPTOA of western New York, through its president, A. C. Hayman, is conducting a movement to reduce its members' power bills by presenting figures to the Public Service Commission.

Time Adds Office Space

The March of Time has added another floor of office space to its quarters at 369 Lexington Avenue, New York, making a total of three floors.

"JUBILEE" OBSERVED ON RADIO AND IN THE FIELD

MPPDA Pays Tribute to Edison and Eastman; Mayor Joins the Celebration in Chicago

The motion picture industry all this week observed its Golden Jubilee, officially commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Kinetoscope of Thomas A. Edison.

The observance in the field was for the most part concentrated by circuits and independents on banners and ballyhoo to turn attention to the industry as an institution and to the box offices for current patronage.

Last week end in New York a resolution of tribute to Mr. Edison and George Eastman was adopted by the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. Radio also observed the date last Friday with a broadcast over a nationwide hookup by Mrs. Mina M. Edison Hughes, the inventor's widow.

Television Broadcast

Additionally, a television broadcast was scheduled for Friday over the NBC New York station, with scenes from the interior of the "Black Maria," Edison's former laboratory in West Orange, New Jersey. Children's Book Week also will make use of the anniversary theme from November 12th to 18th.

The motion picture industry's resolution, which was adopted at the regular quarterly meeting of the MPPDA board, read:

"Whereas, Thomas A. Edison, using flexible film prepared by George Eastman, perfected the Kinetoscope on October 6, 1889, and

"Whereas, this marked the birth of the motion picture,

"Therefore, we, the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, wish to pay the industry's tribute on the Fiftieth Anniversary to the genius which made possible this great service of entertainment and education."

Interview Is Broadcast

Mr. Edison's widow reminisced about the discoveries of fifty years ago in an interview with Mrs. Malcolm Parker MacCoy, chairman of the motion picture department of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, broadcast over NBC.

She told about the thin flexible film in lengths up to fifty feet that George Eastman supplied for Mr. Edison's tests in motion photography.

"Late in the summer (of 1889) we went to Paris to see the Exposition where Mr. Edison had a wonderful exhibit of his phonograph and his light," the inventor's widow said. "He met with great success and was feted throughout his stay abroad in a most remarkable way. But he was anxious to get back, so we returned to West Orange."

She went on to describe how pleased her husband was that day fifty years ago when he saw pictures in motion through his Kinetoscope No. 1. His experiments were successful; the motion picture was born.

"Mr. Edison felt that since he could make moving pictures show in small size in the Kinetoscope, he could show big pictures by projecting them onto a screen," the inventor's widow continued. "So he commenced to work on a projector also. Up to that time all his work had been on a viewing lens or a peep-hole type of instrument and the images seen were no larger than those actually on the celluloid."

She went on to describe the studio built in the yard outside the laboratory in West Orange and called the Black Maria because it was covered with black roofing paper.

"The first play that I recall was 'Milk White Flag,'" she said. "In 1903 they made 'The Great Train Robbery,' the first narrative film. This had no subtitles whatever—but you could really very readily understand the story even without the subtitles. About that same period, he was continuing his work in synchronizing the showing of motion on films with accompanying sound.

"He was engaged in commercially producing films from the very first and his company continued to make films until 1921 or about that time. He showed talking motion pictures for several years but the recordings and synchronization were all mechanically done.

"Mr. Edison enjoyed motion pictures," she said. "Around the Oranges and Montclair we were often the most regular attendants at the theatres. It was one of the forms of relaxation that he truly enjoyed. There were many times when we would go to the movie theatres every night in the week."

Chicago's National Movie Week

Chicago's Mayor Edward J. Kelly proclaimed October 6th to 13th as National Movie Week, while Chicago theatre managers took advantage of the celebration.

They were supported by Chicago newspapers: the Tribune last Sunday, devoting the first page of its amusement section to pictures and a story by Mae Tinee, movie critic, on the development of motion pictures; as well as an editorial regarding the Jubilee; while the Daily News and the Herald-American devoted full pages of pictures and stories to the anniversary.

Film exchanges were overwhelmed with orders for old time pictures which have been incorporated into short subjects. Almost all theatres in the Balaban & Katz circuit, which was especially active in observances of the Jubilee, and most of the independents booked films of this sort.

"Old Time Movie Parties" were held in many theatres over last weekend, with old silent pictures, with slides, a piano player, or song plugger, forming part of the show.

Other managers arranged "movie museums," displaying old and new types of motion picture equipment.

The appearance at a number of B & K theatres of Paramount players J. Carroll Naish, Patricia Morrison, Olympe Bradna and Susan Hayward was also exploited as part of the celebration.

The Warner and Seeaness circuits in Chicago did not enter any celebration of the Jubilee, although various managers in the two chains did arrange displays and make tieups in conjunction with the event.

Baltimore's Observance

In Baltimore, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, affiliated with Allied States Association, took full page advertisements in daily papers announcing the 50th anniversary. Listing their 62 member theatres in the city, the advertisement carried pictures of the old and the new in motion picture theatres, using as its example of the latter the Radio City Music Hall in New York; in motion picture sound cameras, and, as well, a scene from "The Kiss" and of Alice Faye and Tyrone Power, headed "Romance is still popular on the screen."

The advertisement said, in part, "In 1939, just 50 years after Edison invented the Kinetoscope and 25 years after the possibilities of the screen were realized by a small group of courageous pioneers . . . the motion picture has reached artistic maturity.

"Every motion picture machine, every motion picture enterprise, every motion picture personality, screen star, or magnate of the screen or theatre can be traced to some connection growing directly out of Thomas A. Edison's 'Little Black Box.'"

Power Company Cooperates

The Pennsylvania Power and Light Company joined in with the theatres in celebration of anniversary week. In an advertisement which appeared in the amusement section in the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Record the utility company had an ad which read:

"Hello, folks—

"This is anniversary week at the movies

"We offer our congratulations to the moving picture industry on the occasion of its 50th anniversary. Your industry and ours were born in the minds of the same genius—Thomas A. Edison.

"The motion picture industry deserves high commendation for the splendid job it has done . . . bringing outstanding high quality entertainment to the American Public at a price that all can afford.

"The Electrical Industry concurrently commemorating the 60th anniversary of the incandescent lamp is happy to have contributed in some measure to this success through the marvels of modern electric service so important to that industry."

Columbia

BLONDIE TAKES A VACATION: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—On a par with the other Blondie pictures and seems to please the rank and file.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS AND HOW THEY GREW: Edith Fellows, Dorothy Peterson—Played with "The Man from Sundown." Rather weak bill. Neither one was any good.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GOOD GIRLS GO TO PARIS: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas, Walter Connolly—Somehow they didn't fall for this one. Very entertaining and some good laughs. Should have done better at the box office. Not much said about it either way. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 24-25.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MAN FROM SUNDOWN, THE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—A western that is different. Excellent. Plenty of music to relieve the action. All in all, a good show. Do not fail to use this if you have an action crowd. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM SUNDOWN, THE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—Played with "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew." Rather weak bill. Neither one was any good.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Richard Barthelmess, Thomas Mitchell—Disappointing. No action, an all-talker. Played September 22-23.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

First National

ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES: "Dead End Kids," Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas—Good picture; good business. Pleased all. Running time, 66 minutes. Played September 24-25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY: Edward G. Robinson, Paul Lukas, Francis Lederer—Very well done. Gets business. Played September 29-30.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Well, she did it again. Brought out all of the sob sisters but not a man picture.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebrons, Neb. General patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Brent, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—Very good picture and also good business. This is a swell picture from any angle so play it quick. Running time, 92 minutes. Played September 27-28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

KID FROM KOKOMO, THE: Wayne Morris, Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, May Robson—Good small town audience appeal. Would recommend same as an action picture. Running time, 89 minutes. Played September 21.—A. L Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

MAN WHO DARED, THE: Charley Grapewin, Jane Bryan—Not so hot. No business.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebrons, Neb. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T GET AWAY WITH MURDER: Humphrey Bogart, Billy Halop, Gale Page—This is one that really "hit the spot" for me. It drew more than many "A" pictures. Bogart, Gale Page and Billy Halop all did nice jobs of acting. Play it. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 23-25.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Bobs Watson—Pleased our audiences more than any other picture has done in the past three months. Another ace from MGM. Listen to the raves come out on this one. Robinson is par excellence. Hussey gets better all the time and little Bobs Watson took 'em for a ride again. Running time, 79 minutes. Played September 30-October 3.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

FIRST HUNDRED YEARS, THE: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—No selling out. Played extra attraction along with this, which helped it out.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal, Walter Connolly—Was plenty good. Everyone liked it.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebrons, Neb. General patronage.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD: Claudette Colbert, James Stewart—Was well liked by all.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

MIRACLES FOR SALE: Robert Young, Florence Rice, Henry Hull—A murder mystery that has plenty of comedy to ease the tension. Very good for the audiences that like the thrillers. For a short run or double bill it is all right. Otherwise skip it. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON!: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Everyone liked this and did a nice business on it. MGM has the pictures.—A. H Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON!: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Sheffield—A natural for top gross and they won't go out disappointed. Tarzan, Jr., will be the talk of the town. Nice photography and excellently produced throughout. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 27-28.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON!: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Sheffield—About half as good as Metro thinks it is. The photography is fine, the animals are great, almost as good as a trip to the Zoo, swimming shots the best I have seen, the story just the usual Tarzan with the real star little John Sheffield, who plays the part of Tarzan's son to perfection. He even looks and talks like Tarzan. Had been shown all around so the box office was nothing to write home about. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 29-October 1.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THESE GLAMOUR GIRLS: Lew Ayres, Lana Turner, Anita Louise, Tom Brown, Richard Carlson, Jane Bryan—Very good show along the lines the young people like but not enough star names to put it over. Lana Turner is good but has not had enough experience for the lead. Supporting cast good. Pleased those who saw it, which was too few. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 15-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Paulette Goddard, Rosalind Russell, Mary Boland, Joan Fontaine, Phyllis Povah, Virginia Weidler, Lucile Watson—Here is one that will roll them in the aisles. Absolutely the tops. The star (?), the entire cast is perfection. Miss Russell and Miss Goddard are wonderful. Cannot rave enough. The men will not approve of it but when it comes to letting the hair down on the action of the women, nothing is left to be imagined. Excellent. Running time, 138 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Monogram

BOYS' REFORMATORY: Frankie Darro, Grant Withers—Monogram has put in some effort on this one and the reaction from our patrons was a reward for it. They liked this feature here. Running time, 61 minutes. Played September 30-October 3.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Paramount

GRACIE ALLEN MURDER CASE: Gracie Allen, Warren William, Kent Taylor, Ellen Drew—If they go for Gracie in your town, they'll take to this one like a duck to water. Her comedy is good and I believe she is in every scene. It's a knockout for laughs. Running time, 74 minutes. Played September 27-28.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden—These western series are Gene Autry's biggest opposition. Well received here.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

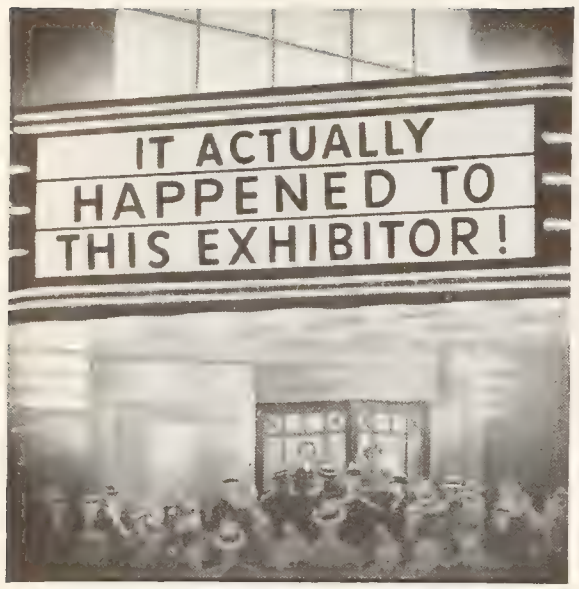
$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye—Lots of people who never previously got a kick out of Joe Brown or Martha Raye seemed to like them together. Lots of laughs in the funny places. Played September 23-26.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Republic

HOME ON THE PRAIRIE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—And do the farmers like this stuff.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebrons, Neb. General patronage.

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes—Here is the series that never fails us. We have found the best spot for them is on Bank Nights. Running time, 75 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

PRIDE OF THE NAVY: James Dunn, Rochelle Hudson, Gordon Oliver—Good. Lot of action. Dunn as usual always good.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.



WALL STREET COWBOY: Roy Rogers, George Hayes, Raymond Hatton—Fair picture; fair business. Running time, 66 minutes. Played September 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

CAREER: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley, John Archer —A very good picture, particularly adapted to Iowa theatre. Good story, not enough name value in cast

TRUE STORIES FROM ALTEC FILES

Exhibitors Praise Altec Technique to Improve Sound

LEBANON, N. H.—"I not only have to sell my shows to my patrons, but also sell them on my theatre. Since I installed your new high quality response sound we all feel that we have the finest sound in this section." Vincent J. Mollica, manager, Lebanon Opera House.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—"Judging from your new modifications in the American Theatre, we have great expectations for our other theatres, and request the earliest possible application to the rest of our circuit." Abe Solomon, Independent Theatres, Inc.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—"If the improvement had cost three times what you charged, the improvement would still have been more than worth it." J. J. Franklin, Strand Theatre.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—"The improvements made by Altec have resulted not only in an increase of power which is more than ample, but also in a remarkable clarity of reproduction." C. J. Chandler, Roxy Amusement Co.

to bring them in. John Archer turns in a nice performance. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 1-2.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

FIFTH AVENUE GIRL: Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt—Of course, Ginger is my favorite, but this is another positive hit Not the draw as "Bachelor Mother" but very good audience reaction. Running time, 85 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

FISHERMAN'S WHARF: Bobby Breen, Leo Carrillo, Henry Armetta—The best Breen we have had in a long time. Good entertainment. Played September 29-30.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

IN NAME ONLY: Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis—An excellent picture but no draw.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SMASHING THE RACKETS: Chester Morris, Frances Mercer, Rita Johnson, Bruce Cabot—Fast moving little programmer everyone enjoyed. Played September 27-28.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BOY FRIEND: Jane Withers, Richard Bond, Arleen Whelan—So-so. Very poor story. Think her and Shirley are on their way out.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN RENO: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks, Ricardo Cortez—Just another picture to small business. I think the folks have lost interest in Chan since Warner Oland died. Running time, 71 minutes. Played September 26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL: Randolph Scott, Nancy Kelly, Cesar Romero, Binnie Barnes—Good western that'll get you money, if your town will stand for westerns. They call it the little "Dodge City". Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN HOLLYWOOD: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—A nice program picture which fitted in nice for our weekend customers with a western. Business average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN HOLLYWOOD: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—These Jones Familys get better every picture. An excellent comedy that pleases almost any patronage. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 27-28.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

NEWS IS MADE AT NIGHT: Preston Foster, Lynn Bari—Newspaper story and one of the best of its kind. This picture is packed with mystery, romance and comedy. Don't pass this up. Put it on your "must play" list. Running time, 73 minutes. Played September 20-21.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF THE CISCO KID, THE: Warner Baxter, Lynn Bari, Henry Hull, Cesar Romero—A very good western but has no more draw than any good western. Yet Fox puts it in a high allocation. —C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WINNER TAKE ALL: Tony Martin, Gloria Stuart, Slim Summerville, Henry Armetta—Fair picture; fair business. No kicks; no compliments. Running time, 62 minutes. Played September 26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan—A splendid production of outstanding qualities. One of Henry Fonda's greatest roles. This is the story of Abe Lincoln as a lawyer. A picture well worth the praise it is getting. Running time, 101 minutes. Played September 22-23.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

United Artists

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—Not so hot. Just got by and that is all.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebrons, Neb. General patronage.

Universal

CODE OF THE STREETS: "Little Tough Guys," Harry Carey, Frankie Thomas—This is the kind that Universal is noted for and is the very kind I need, I want. I never worry when I play a Universal picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 26.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

INSIDE INFORMATION: June Lang, Dick Foran, Harry Carey—A higher than average entertainment "B." Got a good reaction here from our thrill loving audiences. Played September 23-26.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

I STOLE A MILLION: George Raft, Claire Trevor, Dick Foran, Henry Armetta, Victor Jory—Not a top group allocation. Belongs on Saturday for action crowds. Just a good program picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

I STOLE A MILLION: George Raft, Claire Trevor, Dick Foran, Henry Armetta, Victor Jory—This grossed the lowest Friday and Saturday we ever had. Most certainly not the story or the Raft we played in "Each Dawn I Die," Warners. Running time, 80 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

STORM, THE: Charles Bickford, Preston Foster, Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Nan Grey, Andy Devine—A very fine picture. Business only normal due to the fact Imperial Oil Company gave a free show. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WHEN TOMORROW COMES: Charles Boyer, Irene Dunne—Just a good "B" picture. Not strong enough for extended runs. You'll lose money with it no matter how you buy it or how you run it. Running time, 91 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WHEN TOMORROW COMES: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—A few women ventured out to see it. The ending very disappointing to many.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory, Guinn Williams—One of the greatest pictures of its kind. No words can describe the beauty, color, thrills and joys that are found in "Dodge City." Guinn Williams and Alan Hale are excellent in the supporting cast. Bruce Cabot and Victor Jory are tops. Running time, 104 minutes. Played September 24-25.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Dick Powell, Ann Sheridan, Gale Page, Ronald Reagan—This one drew fairly good for me but lacked something. Ann Sheridan does herself no good in this one. It's worth playing, though. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 16-18.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Dick Powell. Ann Sheridan, Gale Page, Ronald Reagan—Nice little picture. Enjoyed by all.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Dick Powell, Gale Page, Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Zasu Pitts—Very good feature that pleased. Dick Powell is only about half the box office star he was a few years ago. Zasu Pitts gives an excellent performance. Supporting cast is all good. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 22-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WOMEN IN THE WIND: Kay Francis, William Gargan, Victor Jory—Was surprised at this as Kay don't mean a thing to me here but at that it was a good picture. No business.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebrons, Neb. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING: No. 5—Best yet. Very enjoyable.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontaria, Canada. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING: No. 10—Some of my patrons told us when leaving it was the best sing they ever saw.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MOOCHING THROUGH GEORGIA: Buster Keaton —Columbia has not been giving us enough of this comedian this past season as he is tops of all when it comes to pantomime comedy. Good any day of the week. Tops in comedy from the company with the best shorts in the business. Running time, 16 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCRAPPY'S RODEO: Scrappy Cartoons—Just a cartoon and it's not funny. Running time, six minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

STORK TAKES A HOLIDAY, THE: Color Rhapsodies—A very good cartoon. Nice coloring.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SUE MY LAWYER: Harry Langdon—Lots of laughs as usual for Columbia. They certainly excel in slapstick comedies which are well received in small towns.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ART GALLERY: Cartoons—Very good. Nice comments on this cartoon. That is something unusual when they praise a cartoon. Running time, nine minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

ASH CAN FLEET: MGM Miniatures—An ideal short. It is the most timely topic possible and so well produced that it adds greatly to any program. It has a swell plug for "Thunder Afloat." Play it on your best nights. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

ASH CAN FLEET: MGM Miniatures—A really swell short showing how submarines are destroyed by depth bombs released by the sub chasers. Very timely and very interesting. Play it before you play "Thunder Afloat," as it is a buildup for that picture.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

AUTO ANTICS: Our Gang—Pleased one hundred per cent, as all Gang shorts do. Think the Gang could get out and recite the multiplication table and get laughs. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BEAR THAT COULDN'T SLEEP, THE: Cartoons—Very good. A cartoon that the young and old will find very amusing. Running time, nine minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

BOOKWORM, THE: Cartoons—Fair. Have had better, such as "Goldilocks and the Three Bears" and "The Bear That Couldn't Sleep." Ising had better stay to the other types. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CLOWN PRINCESS: Our Gang—Excellent. Our Gang seems to meet with approval in general run of patronage. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

CLOWN PRINCESS: Our Gang—Very good. The best we have had in some time. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FROM THE ENDS OF THE EARTH: A New Romance in Celluloid—This advertising reel furnished free of charge by Metro should if possible be run before you start playing new product as it gives your future attractions plenty of publicity. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HEROES AT LEISURE: Pete Smith Specialties—Good. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PASSING PARADE: No. 1—Book this one. Has two parts that fit present day conditions to a T. One especially deals with a big car of '29 vintage and follows it to the scrap pile and aboard a boat bound for munitions plants overseas. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

PICTURESQUE UDAIPUR: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Not better than the balance but still tops in the field. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

COLOMBIA: Color Cruises—Average travel talk.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HELLO, HOW AM I?: Popeye the Sailor—Just a fair Popeye. Running time, six minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

IT'S THE NATURAL THING TO DO: Popeye the Sailor—Average Popeye cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MUSICAL MOUNTAINEERS: Betty Boop Cartoons—Hillbilly stuff nicely done. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: No. 6—Just a filler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WATCH YOUR STEP: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Entertaining Sportlight.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

FIVE TIMES FIVE: Special—A dandy Quint subject that drew some additional business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, THE: No. 1—An excellent aviation subject. So far we have been unable to make this draw any additional business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 12—History of the movies. Very instructive, good. These subjects are definite to any theatre.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SAGEBRUSH SERENADE: Ray Whitley Comedies—A good two-reel western comedy; though nothing extraordinary, it entertained. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

SOCIETY DOG SHOW: Walt Disney Cartoons—They are good but too high priced. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

TEMPEST OVER TUNIS: Magic Carpet Series—Just a filler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TWO HEADED GIANT: Terry-Toons—Just a fair colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 65—Travel talk on the British West Indies that is excellent. Do not fail to run it. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SHOW FOR SALE: Mentone Musical Comedies—Excellent musical with plenty of top acts to send it off. This series has been good all season. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 65—These Fiction reels of Universal are an excellent single reel filler.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

BELIEVE IT OR ELSE: Merrie Melodies—Only fair. This never seemed to get going. Disappointed the cartoon fans. Running time, nine minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

BROADWAY BUCKAROO: Red Skelton—One of the best Brevities we have ever played. We played this midweek but feel that a better booking would be Friday and Saturday, as this short has a western locale. Excellent acts all the way through. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DAVE APOLLON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DEAN OF THE PASTEBOARDS: Vitaphone Varieties—Here is a good short. Different and clever. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DETOURING AMERICA: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HARE-UM SCARE-UM: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HAUNTED HOUSE, THE: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" series—Very good. We have built up quite a demand for this series and this one is as good as any we have run. Running time, 11 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

KRISTOPHER KOLUMBUS, JR.: Looney Tunes—Good cartoon in black and white.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LARRY CLINTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Excellent musical. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MUSIC WITH A SMILE: Happy Felton and His Orchestra—Real enjoyable band number. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

POLAR PALS: Looney Tunes—Very good. Clever. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S PICNIC: Looney Tunes—Average black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S TIRE TROUBLE: Looney Tunes—Average black and white carton.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SCALP TROUBLE: Looney Tunes—Warners had better get a new character as Porky is not so hot. The subject matter is good but they need a new star. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DICK TRACY'S G-MEN: Ralph Byrd—On Chapter Five and doing right well for itself. OK if the action keeps up.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

LONE RANGER RIDES AGAIN: Robert Livingston, Chief Thunder Cloud—They still like this and we are on 12th episode. If a serial has any draw, this has.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Delaware Seeks "Blue Law" Opinions

Delaware's nine-member commission to study revision of the state's 144-year-old Sunday blue laws last week began its study with a movement to tap public opinion on ways to have the ancient statutes conform with modern life.

Scores of letters to individuals and organizations in all parts of the state seeeking suggestions on blue law revision, have been mailed out by the commission, the Rev. Ralph L. Minker, chairman, has announced at Wilmington. With the letter was a recapitulation of the 1,959 Sabbath blue law violations found on one day, September 3, by city and state police.

The deadline for replies was set for this Sunday.

"We are anxious to learn how you and your organization," the letters say, "would go about remedying the situation that exists." The commission promises that the names of those making replies will not be made public if so desired.

Under the resolution setting up the special commission, a report is to be made to the General Assembly of 1941. The appointment of the commission was based upon the statements and warnings of Atty.-Gen. James R. Morford that the blue laws were being violated every Sunday and that unless the State Legislature took action the police agencies should presume that the Legislature had no desire of modifying or repealing the old laws and that the strict enforcement should follow.

Question No. 3 in the Bluebook School

The Bluebook School, conducted in the HERALD for many years by F. H. Richardson, has been resumed, based on the new Second Revision of the Sixth Edition of Mr. Richardson's Bluebook of Projection. Under the new presentation of the material, projectionists are asked to submit answers, as formerly, but often the answer that will be published will be that of Mr. Richardson himself, or of other specialists in projection and sound. This procedure has been adopted with the thought that it will serve the real purpose of the "school": to encourage and assist in study and at the same time facilitate preparation of effective answers.

The first question, which appeared in the issued of September 2nd, and the second, in last week's issue, are as follows:

QUESTION NO. 1: What is feedback? Reverse feedback? Interelectrode capacitance? Oscillation?

QUESTION NO. 2: (a) What is exact width of 35 mm. film sound track? (b) What characteristics of the film concern projectionists most? (c) Describe, in detail, correct method of making film splices.

QUESTION NO. 3—Name two classes of circuits found in modern amplifiers? What types of electrical power are required by sound systems? What apparatus in an amplifier functions as an electrical valve and why is it not called a valve, in this country at least?

Answers will begin to appear as soon as several questions have been submitted.

Magicians Protest Showing Of Trade Secrets in Film

The Society of American Magicians has protested to Murray Silverstone, chief executive of United Artists, the "exposure" of trade secrets of "another branch of show business—the magicians," in Walter Wanger's "Eternally Yours."

The organization's wire, which has been referred by Mr. Silverstone to Mr. Wanger, points out that Hardeen, one of its members, is performing one of the tricks exposed in the film in the current "Hellzapoppin."

U.S. Ready for 1939 Census of Film Business

Preparations for the 1939 census of amusements as part of the Government's census of general business, have been completed and the machinery is being set up for the collection of the data, to begin on January 2nd next, it was disclosed this week by officials of the United States Census Bureau at Washington.

Armed with copies of a schedule which has been prepared for the amusement and service industries, canvassers of the bureau next January will visit approximately 50,000 places of amusement, including motion pictures, to collect information which, when analyzed, will provide a comparison of employment, box office receipts and other data compiled in the previous censuses of theatres, covering 1929, 1933 and 1935.

The schedule prepared for the theatre industry provides for registration of the name of the establishment, name of owner and his race, in the case of individuals (white, Negro, other); location of the theatre and home, office or business address of the owner; the type of organization (whether individual proprietorship, partnership, corporation or other); date of establishment of the business and date of acquisition or establishment under present ownership; total number of theatres owned by the proprietor or organization, and seating capacity.

In addition, the schedule will show total admission collections for the year and, separately, the total amount of amusement taxes included in the admissions, which were collected directly from customers and paid directly to any local, state or Federal taxing agency.

In dealing with unemployment, the Census Bureau will inquire as to the number of proprietors and firm members devoting the major portion of their time to the business, whether or not paid a regular salary; members of family of proprietors or firm members (wives, husbands, children, etc.) who are regularly working in the business, full-time or part-time, but who are paid no stipulated wage or salary; paid proprietors and firm members, whether active in the business or not, who are paid a regular salary, and amount of latter for 1939; total payroll for the year; amount paid full-time and amount paid part-time employees, separately; number of paid employees on payroll for period nearest the 15th of each month through the year; and, separately, number of males and employees, full-time or part-time, on payroll for one period in October.

It was stressed by bureau officials that the 1939 census will be a complete canvass of the theatre industry, and it was pointed out that all business men in the lines covered are required by law to furnish the information.

It is estimated that four to five months will be required for the collection of information in the field, and that the basic facts can be made available sometime during 1940. Details of the theatre survey, however, are not expected to be published before 1941.

The same Act of Congress that requires the report also makes it unlawful for the Census Bureau to disclose any facts obtained, including names or identity, from the reports. Only sworn census employees at Washington will see the statements. Data collected will be used solely for preparing statistical information concerning the nation's population, resources and business activities and progress under this Administration, and according to provisions for the census, the reports cannot be used for purposes of taxation, regulation or investigation.

Ths business census was taken first in 1930.

Clark Getts Announces A Hollywood Invasion

Clark H. Getts, New York agent and representative of numerous "names," currently on the coast in behalf of Osa Johnson and her Columbia production, has established a western office at the Roosevelt in Hollywood, to deal in picture personages and projects. For some years he has operated from the Waldorf in New York presenting General Hugh Johnson, Osa Johnson, Dale Carnegie, J. P. McEvoy, Walter Hampden, Conrad Nagel, Rupert Hughes and others. He was manager for the Osa Johnson expedition to Africa which made background material for "Stanley and Livingstone." He was formerly on the staff of the Artists Service for National Broadcasting Company.

Mr. Getts' clients received big fees: for instance, Eleanor Roosevelt, at $1,250 per booking; and Osa Johnson, at $1,000 per booking, and percentage.

E. C. Beatty, president of the W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc., announced that the new Garden theatre in Flint, Mich., was opened on October 5th.

Franklyn Warner's series of features, for RKO release, will be in Cosmocolor.

ATLAS IN NEW RKO PLAN, CHANGE IN SALES STAFF

Levy Resigns; A. W. Smith Eastern Sales Manager, Mochrie in South, McEvoy in Midwest

The Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation this week effected sweeping changes in the executive personnel of its film sales division, eliminating the post of general sales manager following the resignation of Jules Levy, appointing A. W. Smith as eastern sales manager and Robert E. Mochrie in the south, and transferring Edward L. McEvoy from the east to midwest, consolidating field divisions and otherwise realigning branch and other sales managers.

Meanwhile, the Atlas Corporation, leader in reorganizing RKO, disclosed through the film company's home office in New York that it is making plans for a new proposal in underwriting new stock, revising its original intentions to take in European war factors.

When Judge William Bondy in federal court in New York on Wednesday termed the proceedings "interminable" and insisted on immediate progress, the while adjourning the hearing to November 1st, Richard Jones of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, Atlas counsel intimated the new stock writing plan may be ready by that time.

With RKO 12 Years

Jules Levy had served RKO in various positions for 12 years. His first position in the organization was general manager of the RKO Theatres' film booking department. In this capacity he was in charge of buying and booking for the circuit. Seven years ago he was made general sales manager of RKO Radio Pictures and directed the selling organization in the United States and Canada. Mr. Levy was born in Rochester, N. Y., in 1896. He has been in the motion picture industry for more than 25 years and became one of the best known and liked executives in the business. His first connection with motion pictures was as a film salesman for Universal. Soon he became one of the sales executives where he was first associated with Mr. Depinet. Later Mr. Levy joined First National Pictures where he remained three years. Still later he was a special representative for United Artists.

A. W. Smith as new RKO eastern sales manager will have charge of the eastern half of the United States, with supervision over the New York, Albany, Boston, Buffalo, New Haven, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington, Detroit, Indianapolis, Calgary, Montreal, St. John, Toronto, Vancouver and Winnipeg branches. Mr. Smith succeeds E. L. McEvoy who will soon take charge of a division including the Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis and Cincinnati branches with his headquarters at Cleveland. Cresson E. Smith continues as western and southern sales manager.

Mr. Smith has served many years in the industry. In 1914 he was a salesman for Pathe Exchange, Inc., and covered the lower East Side of New York. He has previously been associated with Mr. Depinet at First National Pictures, where he was sales manager and later at Warner Bros., where his position was eastern general sales manager. Most recently Mr. Smith was general sales manager for United Artists.

One Southern Division

With the appointment of Robert E. Mochrie as southern district manager RKO consolidates the south into one division and Mr. Mochrie will be in charge of offices formerly supervised by Hubert Lyons and Sol Sachs. His territory will be the Atlanta, Charlotte, New Orleans, Memphis, Dallas and Oklahoma branches. Atlanta will be the headquarters. Mr. Mochrie was first associated with Mr. Depinet when he was Philadelphia manager for RKO Pathe. Later he was branch manager for Warners at the same city and assistant to "Andy" Smith when the latter was eastern general sales manager for Warner Bros. Mr. Mochrie's most recent position was southern district manager for United Artists.

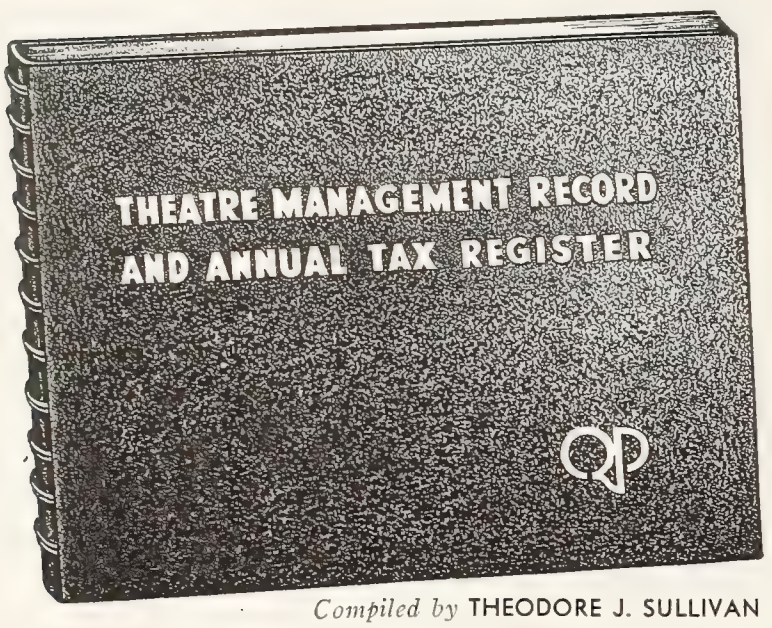
Hubert Lyons will take charge of the Atlanta branch and Sol Sachs will head the Dallas office. J. B. Brecheen, recently branch manager in Atlanta returns to his former position as head of the Charlotte office. N. J. Colquhoun, recently branch manager at Charlotte, is attached to the Atlanta Sales staff. C. W. "Ching" Allen, who has been Dallas manager, will be given another appointment when Mr. Sachs takes over that office. J. H. MacIntyre, Nat Levy and Leo M. Devaney continue in their respective district managers' positions under A. W. Smith, in addition to Mr. McEvoy. In addition to Mr. Mochrie, Walter Branson, L. E. Goldhammer and Harry Cohen continue as district managers under Cresson Smith. Harry J. Michalson remains in his position as manager of short subject sales.

Mr. Depinet said these changes complete the realignment of the company's sales organization.

New Underwriting Plan

At the same time Atlas Corporation was preparing a new RKO underwriting plan. The Atlas Corporation, headed by Floyd Odlum, has a new proposal to underwrite the offering of common stock to unsecured creditors under the plan of reorganization of RKO which has been approved by the Court. This action was revealed in a letter by Mr. Odlum in answer to an inquiry from the Irving Trust Company. Mr. Odlum wrote:

"You have made inquiry as to the present disposition of Atlas Corporation toward underwriting an offering of common stock to unsecured creditors under the plan of reorganization of RKO.



"As you know, our August underwriting proposal expired because its terms had not been approved within the time stated in the offering and was not renewed only because war had intervened and brought into play new factors. I have since been studying the situation in the light of the new conditions to determine upon fair terms of a new underwriting proposal. The plan of reorganization calls for the raising of $1,500,000 for reorganization expenses and working capital needs of the parent company only as it was believed that RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and the various theatre subsidiaries have sufficient capital for their own requirements. I see no reason to change this view."

Leo Rosten Lectures

Leo Rosten, director of the Motion Picture Research Project, Hollywood, speaks on Thursday evening at the New School for Social Research in New York City. This lecture is part of a fifteen weeks course on Propaganda and the Measurement of Public Opinion, under the general direction of Harold D. Lasswell. Mr. Rosten wrote, under the name Leonard Q. Ross, "The Education of H*y*m*a*n* K*a*p*l*a*n."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE OF MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

IT'S NOSTALGIA

Just got a letter from an old member who has been out of showbusiness for a spell and is homesick to get back. Doing all right from what he writes but can't get used to the slow pace of the job. Claims things don't move as fast as they do around the theatre. Misses the quick tempo, the changing background, the need for split-second thinking to tiein with whatever happens to be red hot at the moment.

There's something in that, a part of what folks term the fascination of the showbusiness. Keeps a man's beano working in high, always angling around for boxoffice honey. And there is honey to be had for chain-lightning minds that function best when moving fastest—Charlie Winchell's Minnesota Amusement ad crew, for instance, as reported here by Ev Seibel.

Notified on a Tuesday morn that the Paramount Poland war pictures would arrive within a few hours, the boys stepped on it fast enough to land the news in the afternoon editions, followed by a "break" in the morning sheet. Topping all that was a screening for one of the dailies that led to a full back-page layout the next day of shots taken from the newsreel, with generous theatre credits spread all over it.

That's typical of how the boys turn on the heat when the call is for more steam. That also goes for Al Hamilton's cerebral calisthenics last week at the Empress in South Norwalk, Conn. Seems there was an election, with the Mayor up for another term. Figuring His Honor a good bet, Hamilton fortified himself in advance by shooting pictures of the city head and family at home. As soon as voting results were determined, with the Mayor reelected, Al spliced his shots and announcement into the regular newsreel. It stopped the show.

The local daily, in front-paging the exploitation, said the manager had "again proved his right to the distinction of being one of Norwalk's best showmen".

Among the national events we'll know of from now on is American Newsboys Week, called to the attention of this desk by Floyd Nutting. The manager of the Paramount in Grand Forks, N. Dak., knew enough of the occasion to date in "Newsboys Home" for that period. His fast-thinking got him a page-one picture and story on a newspaper tiein wherein the daily's carriers were guests of the theatre. The advance ran for three days and did more than a little to sell the attraction.

Theatremen absorbed in the quick-change panorama of their operations will sympathize readily with the discontented brother who yearns for the smoke of the firing line. For your showman is a restless bird of a breed that thrives only on action and the faster it comes the better. That the same action comes fastest where he is may be an important reason why men with savvy enough to land high in other lines prefer the heartaches and headaches of showbusiness to the more placid waters of merchandising.

ON GETTING AHEAD

To be listed with the week's happier items is the recent promotion of Round Tabler H. A. Doman from manager of the Harris-DuBois in DuBois, Pa., to the post of district supervisor. Doman, as readers are aware, is a valuable and not infrequent contributor to these pages. Congratulations are distinctly in order.

Since an increasing number of active members are being chosen for bigger jobs, it occurs that a study of promotions reported here in general would reveal a higher percentage of Round Tablers over non-members. In fact, this department might be tempted to wager a bottle of "coke" against a cookie to support the opinion.

That issue of M-G-M's campaign service devoted to the comprehensive tieins made in the field on "Wizard of Oz," indicates two things. The first, is the mine of promotional possibilities in the hands of those who recognize exploitation pay-ore. The second, is the continuing job of work being done by Billy Ferguson and his exploiteer forces in cooperating so efficiently on M-G-M datings.

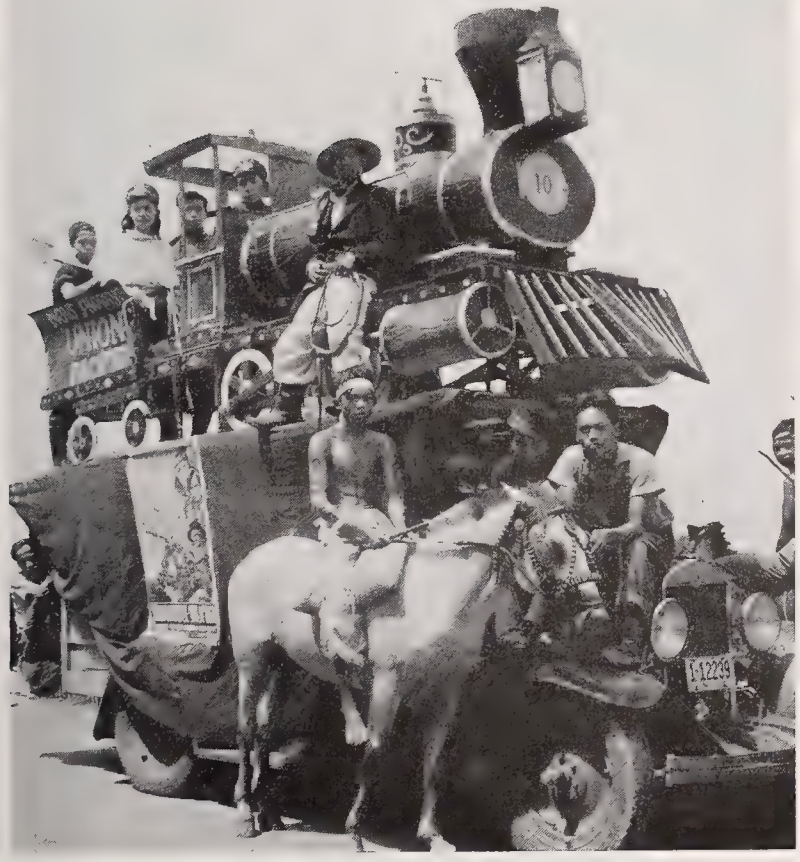
Round Table In Pictures

The risibilities of the patrons of the Rivoli Theatre in Hastings, Neb., were tickled recently by Orville Rennie's lobby setpiece on "Bachelor Mother". Suspended from cutouts of the stars was a line of diapers, each of which carried picture title.

Above, Great States City Manager Ed Crabtree presents wire to one of 10 lucky Danville, Ill., girls in connection with exploitation on "The Women" at the Fischer. Large book was planted in lobby to obtain signatures of local girls to be sent to "The Women" cast. Three principal stars selected names and wired invite to show. . . . Crediting James Garrity and Carl Rotman with idea and execution, Dave Martin reports foyer display on "Frontier Marshal" featuring miniature Arizona town which drew plenty of comments at the Paramount in Hollywood.

Reproduced below is the lobby setpiece used by Manager Artie Cohn at the Warner Roosevelt in Philadelphia, one of "Skip" Weshner's zone houses. Display located over lobby fishpond, indirectly lighted, focused the desired attention on the theatreman's message on his forthcoming attractions. To be noted is Art's "Welcome Home" plaque.



Large rubberneck sugar barrels with 1-foot extensions added and flat top containing four peepholes was the street ballyo used by Wally Caldwell to sell "The Women" at Loew's Valentine, Toledo. Painted brightly, barrels were striped with "For Men Only"; discs one-third down read "You'll howl at . . . ", etc., etc.

Mounted atop truck was the replica of "Union Pacific" engine and cab which toured the streets of Cavite in the Philippine Islands as advance on that picture's opening at the Perla Theatre. Mrs. Felisa Rojas, owner and manager of the house, credits her advertising staff with the idea and execution. For further attention, natives dressed accordingly rode in car and alongside as it wended its way about town.

For the reissue of "All Quiet on the Western Front" at the Albany Theatre in Albany, Manager Ed Selette planted sandbags, machine guns, shells and other war paraphernalia out front. In addition, bannered sound truck was used ahead and during run.

Arranged by Manager Paul Townsend and assistant, D. L. Davenport, was the old home week for "I'm from Missouri" at the Warner in Oklahoma City. Entire staff, dressed as Burns relatives, greeted all patrons with "Hi, neighbor" and other farmerish expressions.

Reproduced above is part of the 50th Anniversary of motion pictures display planted by Loew's publicist, Milt Harris in the Terminal Tower Concourse. Sponsored by the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, the exhibit included representation from the various producers.

SOUTH AMERICAN BALLY. Voted one of the most spectacular exploitations put on recently in Buenos Aires was the locomotive promoted by Guillermo Fox, Paramount's director of publicity and advertising in Argentina for the "Union Pacific" date. Float which toured all parts of the city for several weeks ahead was continuously surrounded by curious crowds.

Complete Radio Coverage Accorded DiPesa's Campaigns

Newspaper coverage for "On Borrowed Time" at Loew's State in Boston as arranged by Publicist Joe DiPesa included advance screening for critics which landed extra stories and art breaks, classified ad contest, special on "Be on Time to see Borrowed Time" story in all papers and cooperative ads with theatre and playdate plugs. Spot announcements were landed on WEEI, WORL and a special quiz program on WORL.

For "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever," Postal Telegraph used flyers for office to office distribution, heart shaped passes were also distributed as were wallpaper sheets with gag copy. A special song guessing contest was held over WHDH, movie quiz on WNEX and a Hollywood contest over WORL. Through tieup with taxi fleet, cab bumpers were bannered, and for street bally, Mickey Rooney double, dressed in admiral's outfit, covered downtown area.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Shaffer Crashes Fair With "Oz" Street Bally

Since the annual Staunton, Va., Fair opened day and date with Frank Shaffer's engagement of "Wizard of Oz" at the Dixie Theatre, the theatreman sent ten boys out on bannered bikes to cover the Fair grounds selling the attraction. Through courtesy of book publishers, Shaffer received sufficient material for displays in two leading book stores; local music shops also cooperated by devoting displays to hit tunes.

Organist at leading hotel featured songs from the picture week ahead, and local orchestra gave the numbers mention at regular dances at country club. Heralds were distributed house-to-house and stuffed in Sunday edition of the Washington Post, gratis copies of Life containing pictureplugs were placed in beauty parlors week ahead and numerous window displays were landed.

LaFalce Inaugurates Sheridan Fan Club

Reported by Frank LaFalce, Warners' Washington zone ad head was the unique movie star fan club which came into existence last week when 75 local girls, all with red hair, formed the "Ann Sheridan Red Headed Fan Club." The organization meeting was highlighted by a personal appearance, in the Capital for stage appearances at Warner Earle by the star herself.

The club was sponsored by the theatre and Radio Station WJSV, Washington outlet of the Columbia chain. Newspaper stories and spot radio announcements acquainted the girls with the plans for forming the club. Officers were elected and further organization plans made, to be put into effect at an early meeting in the home of the president.

LOCAL, STATE POLICE GUARD "PEACE" PRINT

There was front page to-do in the Cheyenne, Wyo., press regarding "The Fight for Peace," anti-war film released by Monogram, dated at the Paramount Theatre. According to the local press, it seems there was a movement on foot to destroy the film, which brought elaborate safeguards from the local and state police. The latter met the print at the state line and rushed it to the Cheyenne jail where it was closely guarded. Further boxoffice interest was heightened by the report that the picture had been smuggled out of Europe, which Manager Paul Smith saw no reason to deny.

(N. B. When queried as to the source of all the advance excitement, Lou Lifton, Monogram publicity chief, was smilingly non-commital.)

Cowen Broadsides "Geste" Campaign at Rural Patrons

Since the boxoffice returns indicate goodly reception from the surrounding farm country on action pictures, Manager Wally Cowen, aimed his campaign on "Beau Geste" at the Princess, in Modesto, Cal., at the out-of-town trade through a strong billboard, window, radio and herald campaign in addition to newspaper buildup. With this in mind, spot announcements were used liberally on the radio especially on a morning farm program for four days ahead, and also a popular "Man-On-the-Streets" broadcast was promoted for the benefit of the date, questions being asked regarding the picture.

A sustained 24-sheet showing was planted on highways leading into town, window cards and heralds distributed widely in communities within 20 miles, heralds also distributed in all nearby tourist camps. The theatre's monthly program, a printing of over 17,000, was mailed and distributed in a 40-mile radius.

Shooting Script Planted in Lobby

At the theatre, a shooting script of the picture, obtained from Paramount, was displayed two weeks ahead, Cowen reporting this one of the best attractors he has used recently. Front, built by the art shop, emphasized compo-board background, painted to resemble the desert and oasis on which were mounted cutouts of the stars. Large cutout carried title across arch. Atop marquee was mounted head of Gary Cooper, taken from 24-sheet and floodlighted at night with title immediately below.

Further attention was called to the date in the other local units of the Redwood Theatres by trailers and announcements from the stage. Slides were also used at the other three houses a week ahead. For this, Cowen acknowledges the cooperation of Managers Jules Laurent, M. D. McConnell and William Rae at the Strand, State and Lyric theatres, respectively.

Main reason for the out-of-the-ordinary campaign according to the Round Tabler was that the unsettled weather that delayed harvesting the week previous to the opening led him to believe that the farm folk would have more time to get in to see the picture. The extra attendance from the drawing area, he reports, convinces him that the angle adopted was profitable.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Contest Aids on "Music"

With one of the outstanding scenes in "They Shall Have Music" concerning itself with a lad and his dog, Manager Frank Murphy at Loew's State, in Syracuse, contacted the Post Standard on a contest slant to help sell the date. Cash and theatre ticket prizes were offered to readers submitting the best dog stories. In addition to winners' names being published in the paper, some of the stories were featured. For his lobby display, Murphy promoted an array of pups which he reports proved a traffic-stopper.

Paramount Tiein For 'Star Maker' Used by Hensler

The Oldsmobile tieins made available by Paramount on "The Star Maker" were used effectively by Manager Lew Hensler, and his assistant, Bob Pilcher, at Schine's Ben Ali, in Lexington, Ky., for the date. A 1907 Oldsmobile secured from the factory through the local agency proved to be the top crowd-stopper.

Car was placarded and driven through downtown section three days ahead with public address system used in addition to large cards on sides and rear. Driver was dressed in a duster similar to the Crosby getup in the picture and girl accompanying him was also dressed in clothes of the same period. Special tieup records and hits from the picture were played during the day with spot announcements of the title, cast and theatre. With the Central Trades Council staging a huge parade locally with prizes for decorated vehicles, Hensler entered the car to represent the theatre, the bally awarded first prize. Street bally also included a bannered truck with pit pianist playing hit tunes as car drove through downtown sections, stopping at intervals to entertain crowds.

Radio Tieup Secured

Coverage was obtained in the main business streets with a number of colorful window displays in music stores, florists, fur shop, etc., all of which also carried counter displays. Radio coverage featured tieup through use of Crosby records and spot announcements to the effect that records heard were from the picture. Records promoted from local dealer. Front, specially constructed by the art shop, featured ornate giant setpiece on side of boxoffice, concealed record playing the picture's hit tunes.

MPPDA Distributes Book Week Posters

Four color 22 by 30 posters exploiting Children's Book Week, November 12 to 18, are being distributed by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association to libraries and by book publishers to their dealers. Because many of its top features are based on popular books, RKO Radio pictures are displayed exclusively. These include "Abe Lincoln of Illinois," "Little Orvie," "Ivanhoe," "Allegheny Frontier," "Deerslayer," "Swiss Family Robinson," "Anne of Windy Poplars," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Tom Brown's School Days."

Issues Football Schedules

Vest pocket in size and printed on bright yellow stock were the local football schedules printed up by Manager Ed McBride at Loew's State in Providence, R. I., and distributed in that area. Front carried theatre plug, inside spread the schedule and back cover was entirely devoted to the 1939-40 movie schedule of forthcoming attractions.

PICNICS AND PARTIES SET FOR HALLOWE'EN

Costume and Games Contests On Stage to Be Featured; Midnite Spook Show Favored

The traditional last October day celebration looms up just a few weeks ahead with preparations for a big time in those situations where Hallowe'en is something to celebrate. As usual, there will be the costume parties and games, midnight spook shows and special kid performances, with Paul Binstock the first to report what he has set for the doings at the Warner Lyric, in Hartford, Conn.

Binstock is switching his date to the Saturday matinee before the 28th, when he is putting on a costume contest to be followed by what he terms an "Old Fashioned Picnic" with all prizes and suchlike promoted from cooperating merchants. Each child attending will receive a bag of cookies and a book. In addition, winners of games will take down boxes of candy, footballs and skates. Prize donors are mentioned in lobby advertising for the event.

The costume contest on stage will be judged by audience applause for those dressed in most appropriate holiday outfits. There will be three prizes for boys, as many for girls. Binstock will follow this with his "Picnic" to embrace the traditional contests for which children selected from the audience will participate. For boys, there are to be apple ducking and pie eating; for girls, milk bottle drinking and balloon blowing. As in all audience-participating parties staged by Binstock, he will act as the master of ceremonies to keep the party rolling.

Kid Contests Listed

The most popular of the stage gags, including those listed by the Warner-man, are as follows:

Balloons: About 10 children, all ages, lined up with hands behind back. Balloon placed in each contestant's mouth and one bursting balloon first in blowing it up wins.

Apple Ducking: Large tub, filled with water. Several large stemless apples placed in water. About five children, hands tied behind backs, on knees, behind tub, facing audience. Apples must be removed from water with teeth, without aid of hands.

Pie Eating: Ten boys in line facing audience behind long table on which is placed juicy berry pies, about half-size, one to each contestant. Pies are consumed without aid of hands.

Milk Drinking: Filled nursing milk bottles with regulation nipple for each contestant, prize to one drinking milk quickest. It is advised that care be taken so all contestants start at the same time.

Cracker Eating: Each contestant is given small unopened box of crackers. First one to open box, consume all crackers, and whistle "Turkey In the Straw" is winner.

Shoe Contest: Two classes, boys and girls. Contestants, lined up, remove shoes which are placed in barrel and thoroughly mixed, then dumped in pile on stage. All contestants run to pile at one time. Winner is the first one putting on one shoe or both, properly laced.

The midnight spook show is another favorite device. Among the masters of this form of entertainment is Les Pollock, Rochester Loew-man, who each year has something different to entice the customers. Among Pollock's stand-bys have been dancing spook acts, goblin faces cutout of cardboard, and painted, bodies of thicknesses of Cheesecloth covering boys who support the faces and sway to spooky music. Another slant was a string of cutout cats slowly drawn across stage on a pulley in green light. Above was dangling skeleton at end of long pole swinging out over audience. Magician, in devil costume, was another attractor, as were ghosts rising from trick coffins.

School Cooperation Stressed

Tiein with city heads to preserve the peace on Hallowe'en is also to be kept in mind. Theatremen utilizing this cooperation have had pledges distributed to schools, principals having pupils signing and pledging themselves not to damage property. Ted Emerson's "Honor Party" follows along these lines. Children who cooperate to keep things in order are guests at theatre or attend special Hallowe'en price show. The safe-and-sane slant here is not neglected, many direct tieups with the city police being made in this direction.

Decorations for front and lobby are usually colorful but need not be expensive since many of the holiday accessories may be obtained in the dime stores. Last year, Pollock had usherettes in costume out front serving free home made apple cider to passersby as a buildup for the show.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Aims at Kids on "Old Glory"

Concentrating on his kid patronage for the Merrie Melodie cartoon, "Old Glory." Manager Hadden Matthew at the 69th Street Theatre, in Philadelphia, distributed small imprinted cards selling the attraction and attached to which were miniature American flag pins. Backs of cards carried the Pledge of Allegiance. In addition, letters were sent to the heads of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Boy and Girl Scout organizations, and others calling attention to the nature of the film.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Creates Animated Lobby

Gene Stutenroth at the Sun Theatre, in Brooklyn and well-known in these pages for his unusual lobby displays, for his date on "Union Pacific" constructed a full-scale reproduction of an old style U. P. locomotive which was stationed in his lobby pointing its nose out through the main entrance doors like an engine coming out of a roundhouse. Theatreman also went in for sound effects with steam, a whistle, bell for the doorman to control with long cord and a headlight which flashed on and off with sharp beam of a spotlight to attract passersby.

THE SIXTH—AND LAST

As the Awards now swing into the final Quarter of the year, here are set down the names and locations of the 39 entrants who took down the 37 Fortnighters awarded in the Sixth, and last, Preliminary period of the Third Quarter. The current winners in the majority represent theatremen who have been active in the Competitions during previous Fortnights. The number compares favorably with the high totals maintained during the past three months.

"What Is a Bachelor Mother?" Arouses Citywide Curiosity

Keynoting his entire campaign around the query "What is a Bachelor Mother?" for his date on that attraction at the Palace, Canton, Ohio, Manager R. W. Russell, found a lot of interest in a newspaper contest based on the query, some 500 readers taking part. Guest tickets were offered for cleverest answers. Buildup was aided by special window cards occupied with the query and large question mark plus contest copy. Radio was also employed a week ahead.

Outstanding was the unique teaser co-op ad tiein as illustrated in the ad page to right. Five merchants took part, each publicized on two following days as illustrated. On first day, theatre copy addressed to advertiser posed a question regarding the baby in question, signed by Bachelor Mother. Following day, the advertiser, on the same page, replied in kind. This continued for 10 consecutive days, with underline in regular theatre ad calling attention to the page on which the series was published.

Week ahead, string of lettered diapers was hung through the foyer and on opening day, the array was suspended on clothes line by clothes pins around the marquee. Promoted baby buggies were also placed out front and free admissions offered to the first 25 mothers (bachelor or otherwise) in line at the opening. Topper of the gag was that those accepting offer had to bring the "proof."

Let's Hear From You!

Short Gets Car Card Space

Tying in the RKO Pathe Sportscope "Gun Play" with Field and Stream brought about valuable car card space devoted to the current short. Cards will be displayed on several New England railroad lines for a month. Copy on these requests passengers to inquire at theatres when "Gun Play" will have a run. There is further copy devoted to the Sportscope, its content and data on where to obtain a copy of the complete game laws for the United States and Canada for 1939-40.

The 'What's What' About Display Ads On the Next Page

(1-4). Four of the five sets of teaser type co-op ads, forwarded by Manager R. W. Russell, to sell "Bachelor Mother" at the Palace, Canton, Ohio, and described in detail elsewhere in this page. Campaign ran for 10 days ahead, each series running two days. In every instance, theatre ad was addressed to particular store, with store answering day following. Ads ran on same page in each issue, the minimum space required and used generally being 40 lines on 2 columns. Since the entire campaign was conceived to sharpen curiosity regarding the title, the co-op tiein was shaped to the same purpose.

(5). Another series of teasers, all hand-drawn, to sell the stark drama of "Blackmail" at the Midwest, Oklahoma City, Spence Pierce, manager, and reported here by Pat Patchen, Standard Theatres ad head, with a bow to head artist, Basil. Starting Monday ahead of the Friday opening, ads running from one to two column kicked up a lot of additional interest. Displays reproduced here are 70 on two and 65 on one.

(7). Adapted from a layout in Motion Picture Herald, reports Russ McKibbin, was this 30 lines on 2 columns, used variously to further his institutional drive on behalf of the Royal, in Guelph, Canada. Follow-up copy to tiein the ad cut ran: "He says Fall time is Movie Time and he enjoys the comfortable seats at the Royal so much better." Entire campaign plugged coming September attractions.

(8) To give his newsreels authority in depicting actual war happenings was the reason for the 105 lines on 2 columns, by E. E. Bair, for the Valentine, Defiance, Ohio. The pointed emphasis on propaganda followed the thought as did the President's quote.

(9) To get away from the routine Taylor-Lamarr clinches in selling "Lady of the Tropics," the Oscar Doob-Ernie Emerling home office Loew ad forces conceived this new approach to sell the atmosphere of the picture in a light, readable manner. That it awakened a desire to see the attraction while bringing a smile to the reader is indicated in the better business done by the Loew dates using this angle. Display shown here is one used in Newark and Jersey City. Size: 160 lines on 2 columns.

MORE FORTNIGHTERS

Fingerprinting Outfit in Lobby Set Up by Irwin for "Each Dawn"

Entire finger printing apparatus with attendants were furnished gratis by the local police department to George Irwin at the Lyceum, in Duluth, as part of his advance on "Each Dawn I Die." While the records were being made up, girls on hand plugged the picture, cast, etc. Entire outfit was surrounded by displays and scene stills. Complete newspaper coverage was garnered on the stunt.

Also secured by Irwin was a plug on the daily "Man on the Street" program sponsored by local station, book tieups were effected, special displays constructed for lobby and leading restaurants cooperated by use of menu and imprinted napkins.

Numerous Feature Stories Landed By Rosenthal for "Underpup"

The local dailies of Bridgeport, Conn., were generous with their human interest stories on little Gloria Jean, as part of the advance publicity garnered by Round Tabler Morris Rosenthal for his opening of "The Underpup" at the Majestic Theatre. Times-Star further cooperated through its classified ad page through the offer of guest tickets to the picture to the first 20 placing an ad in the paper, contest running for several days ahead. Street parade of kids was held, led off by children carrying street-wide banner with cast, title and playdates. For his bally, Rosenthal used two kids dressed in evening clothes leading a small purp whose sides were bannered with title.

Storewide Tieup Helps Tully Exploit "Wizard of Oz" Date

Leading department store in Biddeford, Maine, cooperated with Round Tabler Ralph Tully at the Central Theatre, in putting over his "Wizard of Oz" engagement by devoting three full windows to toys, books and other novelties tied directly to the picture. Empty store windows were also promoted for advertising purposes. Special 40 by 60 blowups telling the story of the production with stills, book jackets and cutout figures were strategically spotted, cooperating stores tied in with counter cards selling the date and chain druggist came through with fountain signs in addition to featuring an "Oz" sundae and imprinting their luncheon menus.

Local Car Agency Cooperates With Steffy on "Star Maker"

Well-rounded campaign was accorded "The Star Maker" at the State, in Minneapolis through the efforts of Manager Frank Steffy, aided by Ev Seibel and George Sharp. Through cooperation of local Olds agency, blowups of the Saturday Evening Post's two-page tieup ad were placed in dealer's windows surrounded by stills, one sheets and other accessories. Loud speakers were also set up in front of showrooms over which records from the picture interspersed with plugs were broadcast.

Arrangements were made for four bannered cars to tour Fair Grounds opening day; copies of picture-imprinted sheet music on "School Days" were distributed through dealers and for street bally, male quartette was planted atop bannered Olds truck singing hit tunes from picture as it toured the city. Additional feature included the boys singing old-time request numbers.

Radio Sponsor Dramatizes "Confessions of Nazi Spy"

Crashing the program of a previously impenetrable sponsor so far as picture publicity was concerned, Dorothy Flukes, handling the exploitation for Warner's in Sydney, Australia, prevailed upon the management to broadcast excerpts from "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," with teasers a week ahead of the date and newspaper ads. The dramatized, four-episode extract proved so successful that the sponsor went further and got behind the series in every spot where the picture played throughout Australasia, in each instance picking the radio time four consecutive days ahead of opening.

When It's Hot, He Wants It Cool And Vice Versa; That's Soriero

One recent day in Los Angeles, folks must certainly have agreed that the weather was a bit "unusual" for despite the fact that the thermometer was hovering around 100, the front of the United Artists Theatre was banked high with snow piles. Check revealed it to be the nefarious work of Manager Tom Soriero, who in an attempt to sell "Frontier Marshal" and his cooling plant transported the snow to the land of sunshine. For the further amazement of passersby, lad dressed in racoon coat pulled sled on which girl in ski outfit was seated. Soriero reports the stunt created more than anticipated comment, in addition to bringing them into the theatre to see the show.

Fall Fashion Show Put On By Wander in Three-Way Tiein

Through the efforts of Clint Wander at Loew's and United Artists Broad Theatre, in Columbus, Ohio, a fall fashion style show was held on stage which was a three-way tiein with the Ohio State Journal and the Columbus Citizen. A parade of models from cooperating store displayed "what's new" for fall and winter with commentator interspersing sales talk with forthcoming picture plugs. Merchants tying in plugged the show in their ads and store wide, cooperating newspaper contributing feature stories with art work, fashion editors devoting columns to the show ahead and night of event.

45-Day Current and Advance Publicity Landed by Grimes on Whiteman Personal Reported as a complete sell-out was the two-day personal appearance engagement of Paul Whiteman at the Warner Theatre, in Erie, Penna., according to Manager Ken Grimes, who got behind an extensive publicity campaign for the maestro. Practically every day for a month ahead of his arrival, the local dailies carried either stories and/or art work planted by the theatreman. On day of arrival two-column front page stories were spotted, together with pictures of Whiteman taken at the station where he was greeted by local prominents.

Warner Pictures Plugged In National Dairy Tieup

Under an arrangement just completed by Warner Brothers, the National Dairy Company and Kraft Cheese will cooperate in exploiting four big forthcoming releases with a total of 30,000 retail dealers participating in the campaigns.

Pictures to be plugged will be "On Your Toes"; "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex"; "The Roaring Twenties" and "A Child is Born." Posters and streamers will be used by the retailers of both outfits to aid in the campaign and National Dairy will place paper collars on its milk bottles.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Merchant Tiein Aids "Fifth Avenue"

Manager George Bole of the Golden Gate Theatre, in San Francisco, tied in with local furniture company for "Fifth Avenue Girl" on window displays whereby shoppers were told to "Give your room that Fifth Avenue look." Stills and other accessories were used profusely. Another swank note in the campaign was two 24-sheet art displays placed in the outer lobby for two weeks prior to opening. Leading department store devoted a full window to three of the costumes worn in the production by Ginger Rogers.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Taylor Promotes Full Page On "Indianapolis Speedway"

Guest tickets and an eye-catching photo of the Ooomph Girl as she appeared in "Indianapolis Speedway" enabled Charles B. Taylor, Buffalo Theatres, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., to promote a fullpage beauty ad in the Times. The ad, incidentally, broke during Beauty Week in Buffalo, a stunt promoted by the local hairdressers and beauty shops, and the picture was given prominent mention on the page ad.

Reported as the first time in local history, Taylor further promoted a full page in the roto section for the short, "The Movies March On." Layout included theatre credit at top of page.

MALES GET "BREAK" ON "WOMEN" TIEIN

To sell the picture to men, Carter Barron worked out a couple of snappers for "The Women" at Loew's Palace, Washington, with Ray Bell, the first being an all-male jury selected by applications to the local News on tiein which ran three days ahead. Jury viewed picture on opening night and individual opinions were published. Verdict was unanimous that attraction was "not for women only".

Second appeal to the sterner sex was a midnight Leap Year show for the premiere carried by the Times-Herald. Women were supposed to treat their menfolk to tickets, with no males allowed in line at the box-office. The idea clicked to capacity, although town is not partial to midnight screenings.

IN COURTS

RKO Loses Appeal of Rent Case Decision

The appellate division of the New York supreme court this week affirmed a lower court order directing the RKO circuit to open all books and records of the circuit for the past 10 years to H. & S. Sonn, Inc., landlord of the RKO theatre in White Plains, N. Y.

Sonn is suing RKO for $200,000 claimed due in back rent on the house, charging fraud in the padding of expense records of the theatre in order to show smaller profits than were made by the house. Under the terms of the original rental contract, the landlord was entitled in rent to 50 per cent of the theatre's profits.

Sunday Films Illegal, Georgia Court Rules

The Georgia court of appeals this week ruled that operation of motion picture theatres on Sundays is a violation of the state's blue laws even though the theatres are operated for specific charities. The decision held that operation of theatres is detached enterprise and therefore separate from the charitable enterprise whose acts would be exempted from Sunday laws.

Southern Theatres, Inc., operators of the Avondale theatre, of Avondale Estates, had appealed a decision of November 4, 1938, finding the circuit and individuals guilty of violating the Sabbath laws by operating the theatre on Sunday.

Final Briefs Forwarded In ASCAP Nebraska Case

Final briefs and findings in the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers' attack on the constitutionality of Nebraska's law to ban the society from the state were forwarded to the federal court at Lincoln this week by Schwartz & Frohlich, ASCAP counsel.

A decision in the case, which was tried before a three-judge federal statutory court recently, is expected in two of three weeks. It will be the first federal court ruling on the constitutionality of an anti-ASCAP law.

Dismiss Phelan Appeal

The Ontario court of appeals has dismissed the appeal by H. W. Phelan, Toronto, from the judgment of the lower court in dismissing his damage suit against Famous Players Canadian Corporation charging fraud and misrepresentation in the exchange of shares for those of Paramount-Publix, New York, more than nine years ago. Mr. Phelan placed his loss at $4,500 in his statement of claim.

File Film Title Suit

A suit seeking $25,000 damages was filed in New York supreme court this week against Universal Pictures Company by Stage and Screen Productions, Inc. At the same time the plaintiff filed notice that it will apply on October 18th for an order directing Nathan Blumberg, Universal president, to appear for examination before trial. The suit involves use of the title, "Inside Information."

Suit Is Dismissed

A suit for brokerage fees amounting to $4,350 claimed owed to M. & L. Hess, Inc., real estate broker, by Newsreel Theatres, Inc., was dismissed this week in New York supreme court. The plaintiff had brought suit contending that it had secured a site for a theatre for the defendant at 34th Street, New York.

MGM Claims 'Oz' Beat Others in 25 Subsequents

Leaving the key city runs for subsequent run cities and towns in the field, "The Wizard of Oz," according to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in New York, is running ahead, in box office returns, of some of the company's top-grossers of recent months, among them: "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," Andy Hardy pictures, "Boys' Town," "Too Hot to Handle," "Sweethearts," "Idiot's Delight." Twenty-five "typical" "Oz" exhibitions selected by MGM's home office compare with grosses of other big films as follows:

Reno, Nev.—"Wizard" ran even with "Boys Town," beat "Chips" by 27%, "Idiot's Delight" by 47%, and topped "Too Hot to Handle," "Out West with the Hardys" and "Sweethearts."

Winfield, Kan.—even with "Boys Town" and "Sweethearts," topped "Too Hot" by 28%, "Out West" by 33%, "Idiot's Delight" by 53%, "Hardys Ride High" by 20%.

Laredo, Tex.—ran ahead of "Boys Town" by 16%, "Hardys Ride" by 30%, "Chips" by 8%.

Signs of an early easing or even elimination of Quebec's ban on children's attendance at theatres are seen in Montreal with the first relaxation of the law in over a decade. Provincial authorities this week abrogated the 11-year old ruling for one week in order that children of Montreal might see "The Wizard of Oz" showing at Loew's here. They were admitted with adults.

OBITUARIES

Fay Templeton, Musical Comedy Star, Dies at 74

Fay Templeton, favorite of the musical comedy stage at the turn of the century, died in San Francisco October 3rd at the home of a cousin. She was 74. Born in Little Rock, Ark., Miss Templeton made her stage debut at three and had leading roles while still in her 'teens. In 1905, she reached what many held was the crowning point of her career—the role of "Mary" in George M. Cohan's "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway."

The following year Miss Templeton announced her retirement, but continued to reappear on the Broadway stage in musical comedies, Gilbert and Sullivan operettas and vaudeville and in 1933 at the age of 68 she appeared in the title role in the Jerome Kern musical comedy "Roberta."

Hays Pays Tribute to Laemmle at Services

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, delivered an eulogy Friday night at the memorial services for the late Carl Laemmle held at the West End Synagogue, New York, and attended by many industry leaders. He said: "Carl Laemmle inspired affection and had men's admiration and respect. In his nobility of character, in the kindness of his heart, in his great capacity for friendship, he exemplified the true universal brotherhood of man."

In Chicago Sunday, tribute was paid the film pioneer over a coast-to-coast National Broadcasting Company memorial broadcast. Rabbi Louis Mann, Captain Julius Klein, formerly assistant to Mr. Laemmle; Jack Kirsch, president of Allied Theatres of Illinois, representing Governor Henry Horner, and Judge Joseph Sabbath spoke briefly. Mr. Kirsch, read the Governor's message, which paid tribute to Mr. Laemmle's memory and spoke of him as a man who "rose from obscurity and poverty to riches and power, in his chosen field."

Walter G. Hartford

Walter G. Hartford, 82, exhibitor, died in New Haven, Conn., October 5th. He had operated the Casino in Providence years ago and later opened the Imperial in Pawtucket, R. I.

Walter Hayner

Walter Hayner, 47, general sales manager for Regal Films, in Canada, distributor for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Monogram pictures, died in Toronto October 7th. Mr. Hayner, who went to the Dominion 15 years ago, held executive posts with several companies in Europe at one time. He had also served as manager of the Washington office for the old Goldwyn company. His body was taken to New York for interment.

Boris Schukin

Boris Vassilievitch Schukin, 45, known for his portrayals of the role of Lenin in plays and motion pictures, died in Moscow, October 7th. He portrayed Lenin in the films, "Lenin in October" and "Lenin 1918."

George Gaul

George Gaul, 54, actor on the legitimate stage, died in Philadelphia October 6th.

Stephen Braun

Stephen Braun, 76, president of the Ottumwa Theatres, Inc., died in St. Paul, Minn., October 5th.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

The greatest advance radio build-up ever accorded a motion picture for DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK

THREE-WEEK NATIONWIDE CAMPAIGN CLIMAXES WITH THE KATE SMITH PROGRAM FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3

Read the thrilling details:

- Night after night, day after day, the full three-week campaign, unprecedented in radio, is already under way, not only on all Kate Smith's programs, but also on other famous CBS programs.

- The spectacular climax—a dramatization of "Drums Along the Mohawk"—will occupy 25 minutes of Kate Smith's one-hour show on the evening of November 3, in addition to plugs throughout the rest of the program.

- 76 stations of the CBS network will carry the message to millions.

- Kate Smith's program has the highest rating on the air today, insuring a record audience for this broadcast.

- The November 3 show will be broadcast twice — once at 8-9 p. m., E.T , for the Eastern states; again at 9-10 p. m., P.T., for the Western states.

- The date of this broadcast is just one week prior to release date, timed to hit with maximum boxoffice effect for exhibitors playing "Drums Along the Mohawk" on Armistice Day.

Vol. 137, No. 3 — October 21, 1939

NO ANSWER

IN view of this and that, now revealed of propagandists, and of the onenesses of the twain totalitarians, Nazi and Communist, interesting excursion may be had into the files of this publication for December and January in which appeared, for some weeks, an invitation, in part:

¶ MOTION PICTURE HERALD therefore considers it appropriate to ask "Films for Democracy" clearly, officially and publicly to declare its position with respect to:
1—The political theories commonly known as Communism.
2—The political theories commonly known as Fascism.
3—The political theories characteristic of both Communism and Fascism, and commonly described as Totalitarianism, under which the state reserves to itself complete rights over the life, liberty and pursuits of the individual, denying to the individual those rights held under the traditional American system as a natural and inalienable heritage.

—MARTIN QUIGLEY.

There was no answer.

Eventually "Films for Democracy" merged with "Associated Film Audiences", an organization with which there was much in common, into the present "Associated Film Audiences for Democracy". Still a pressure group. Still evasive, confused, reticent in confusion. Still no answer.

LOTUS PETALS

THERE is a land that is fairer than day, where sloe gin fizzes bloom on the trees and highballs roll on the ground. It is a realm of fantasy, fiction and farce. In this magic oasis, high-walled against the world-as-it-is, facts are odd materials to be carded, spun and woven into bright fabrications at the will of the craftsmen, with a skill that leaves no suggestion of their uninspired, authentic origins. History is a quaintness. Geography is a triviality. Physiology is fun. And, most marvelously of all, there is almost no Arithmetic.

This marvelous region is known as the Hollywood writers' colony, devoted to the commerce of dreams, with great skill and competency.

And that is why the Screen Writers Guild is discovered to be uttering just now a statement of special, but self-seeking, optimism, dismissing as trivial the wartime problems of the industry in reference to "reports from members with unofficial contacts in Washington that government estimates tend to disprove alarmist rumors about the effect of war. . . . These reports pointed out that even if all the motion picture theatres in the belligerent countries were shut down completely the revenue would drop less than 10 per cent. The question of money embargoes . . . is not new. Such embargoes in most of the countries involved have existed for several years and the film companies have found means to circumvent this obstacle."

This astute utterance of weighty and altitudinous opinion from "unofficial contacts" solemnly presented in print reminds one of a certain graphic adage of a sage of the N'dorobo hunters, which translates from the Bantu as: "The higher the monkey climbs the palm, the more plainly may one perceive his posterior".

"HOLLYWOOD TAKES IT"

UNDER the title of "120,000 American Ambassadors", Mr. Walter Wanger has contributed to Foreign Affairs, an important American quarterly, a discussion of the American motion picture in its social, political and economic relations. The title derives from an estimate of prints in world circulation.

The products of Hollywood are proclaimed by Mr. Wanger as the art of a free people and a reminder to millions overseas "that there still exists a way of life in which the individual counts".

The article contains, along with much vital first hand recording of reactions, problems and practices, the first exposition in public print of that peculiar timidity which underlies some absurd phenomena: " . . . This shadow of increasing censorship has bred a fear complex . . . the belief among producers that everybody must be pleased at any cost. . . . Hollywood shows little discrimination between legitimate journalists who are there to procure and distribute news and the hangers-on who scarcely trouble to conceal their essential character as none-too-polite blackmailers. . . . Commercially sponsored radio commentators brazenly offer malicious gossip. . . . Sections of the industry's own trade press would make the Augean stable feel respectable. Hollywood takes it."

Mr. Wanger propounds an interesting question on how brave the newspaper press would be, if subject to the same pressures and legal status as the screen.

X MARKS THE SPOT

A CALCULATION recently made by Dr. Cecil B. Read of the University of Wichita finds the "center of science" for the United States is in southeastern Ohio. His finding is based on the distribution of memberships in scientific societies, plotted on the map in the same manner by which the Census Bureau finds the center of population, which is still marching westward out in middle Indiana.

Since it was in a coal region, a pile of bituminous blocks marked the center of population until winter before last when some indigent wheelbarrowed the monument away and burned it to keep warm.

Without much mapping, one can establish a number of centers in our world of the motion picture. Until the war embargoed foreign market situation intervened, the film trouble center was in Washington. Now it is anywhere you can find an executive who can add. They can all add, few know how to subtract.

The income center used to be, because of the weight of overseas earnings, somewhere near the Nantucket lightship. They are looking for it now and, when they find it, it probably will be somewhere around Pittsburgh.

Should you be interested in the location of the journalistic center of showmen's attention, send for a copy of the Audit Bureau of Circulations report on MOTION PICTURE HERALD. The editor is sitting on it.

This Week in the News

Hollywood Faces Wartime Problems

THE BIG NEWS of this week is no news at all, because movieland goes into silences about everything but upturns and effulgences. It is trimming time now and the center of action is Hollywood. The war is in Europe but the motion picture crisis, and issues, are in the spender's domain west of the Sierras.

Also in New York the problem news continued to come through from Europe and motion picture relations were becoming problems of State. Early in the week Will H. Hays went to Washington. Then Wednesday, again, there was a meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in 44th Street.

Across the land the exhibitors, who have bought, who are buying, who are thinking of buying, pictures, were wondering. They wanted to know from Hollywood, what and when and why, and for how much.

War fever in the theatres, bursting forth in the early days of hostilities in lobby radios, stage bulletins, and the presentation of war shorts, spotting of war reissues, and the like, had this week subsided markedly. The exhibitor was getting vastly more concerned with entertainment than topical reference to a war on which the publicity job has been conspicuously unexciting.

Furtive eyes, concerned with precedent and leadership, were upon the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. Nicholas M. Schenck, who never goes to Hollywood just for fun, arrived there October 12, and publicity endeavours were to say, and have said, nothing of it. Foreign grosses and dollars were topics of his meetings. However, studio indications were for more activity and more pictures, rather than less. Insiders expected a redistributed budget, realignments of projects.

Hollywood made much too much, and intricately, of the departure from M-G-M of Bob Benchley, humorist of shorts. It semi-officially leaked that someone had overlooked the expiration of Mr. Benchley's contract and that alert Selznick International had snapped him up. The Selznick concern, however, has been less than definite about when, other than "sometime next year," it will be making its projected six Benchley shorts. The apparent entry of Selznick International, being as it is so full of "Gone with the Wind," into incongruous short production, is in itself something in the nature of remarkable. It is, casually, to be remembered that David Selznick is son-in-law of Louis B. Mayer, and if David really snatched Bob Benchley it would be a crescendo of diminuendoes.

In varying and assorted degrees there were kindred goings-on in most of the other plants in Hollywood. It appears certain that Lady Hollywood will be asked to do at least as much work without so much of orchids, champagne and caviar, that she'll have to make last year's pearls and chinchilla do another season.

The movies can not live without her, but just now the problem is how to live with her, being the willful costly wench she is. The indicated treatment of a sound spanking, behind closed doors, is in the nature of what goes on.

Curious maneuvers, so complex as to be typical, attend the movement in Hollywood by the Motion Picture Producers Association—west coast wing of the "organized industry," alias the Hays association—to withdraw its subsidy to the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. In lieu, and to continue the useful labours of that technological body, it is proposed to have the studios assume support by individual contributions. That would achieve a marvelous saving by changing the bookkeeping.

And, speaking of the Hays office, the cocktail (and Coca-Cola) hour, from Vine street to Santa Monica, was a-twitter with a report, considerably unconfirmed, that Joseph I. Breen, Production Code administrator, had taken a 25 per cent cut in salary. That was in sequel to considerable mention of the report that Will H. Hays, himself, as the only New York employee under contract, and a cast-iron contract, had voluntarily taken a cut the fortnight before, along with the rest of his staff.

Down Gower street at RKO it appeared that obdurate, blond, George Schaefer was having a time of it at RKO in his series of individual meetings with employees above $4,500 a year, who were to be reasoned into a cut. His oral appeal to the Directors Guild got a run-around, but Mr. Schaefer made enough progress to permit him to tell a Studio Club luncheon at Victor Hugo's in Beverly that "very few who have been approached have displayed an unwillingness to cooperate." Meanwhile the Hollywood Reporter, local daily, opened a daily "blitzkrieg" on Mr. Schaefer as a cutter-downer of salaries.

At the Warner Brothers studios in Burbank, unheralded but reasonably to be expected, arrangements were made to give "B" group picture workers early vacations, instead of making at once the remaining four scheduled pictures of their promised twelve. The reason is to let the four, due from April on, wait for what may prove to be topically important developments. It is a proviso for a changing world.

Some of Hollywood's problems are being shipped east. John M. Stahl, said to be leaving Universal Picture Corporation due to a refusal to take a new contract providing a reduction from his $4,000 a week plus percentage deal, was headed for a session of possible adjustment with Nate Blumberg in New York this coming week.

The Screen Actors' Guild, having made peace with the AAAA, fired three press agents from its recently augmented staff. The best bet at the Brown Derby is still a T-bone.

Radio Second

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION of Broadcasters, representing the radio stations of the country, and particularly the networks, and working under its new plans to induce public good-will towards radio—plans which took first form last month with the adoption by Association members of the new radio code of fair practices—this week was circularizing the country with figures purporting to show how huge a gain radio had made as a public entertainment and advertising medium.

The figures estimate that 84 per cent of this country's families listen to the radio; that 28,000,000 American families own or listen to 40,800,000 radio sets; that, since 1922, the public has invested four and one-half billion dollars in receiving sets; that there are more "radio homes" than "telephone homes"; that there are more radios in use than automobiles; that 6,000,000 automobile sets are in use; that there has been a direct relation between growth in radio sales and votes in Presidential elections; and that radio's gross advertising revenues have grown so phenomenally since 1934 that in 1938 they exceeded those of magazines, making radio the second largest national advertising medium. (The story is on page 54.)

If you are wondering what has been happening to newspapers during this rise of radio, consider that 76 papers have been suspended or merged since June, 1927. Also that in the first six months of 1939 there were 32 dailies suspended.

Fox's Tri-Ergon Tries Again

WILLIAM FOX, now 60, while taxicabbing through midtown New York this week, turned to a friend and remarked, "I've got them—again."

He was referring to a decision won on Monday by his American Tri-Ergon Corporation in a District of Columbia federal court, giving Tri-Ergon certain patent priorities over Albert A. Radtke in a long fight over conflicting claims to a photo electric cell, a tube which, as everyone knows, is the heart of the sound picture.

Mr. Fox's taxi pulled to the curb on West 50th Street, to the "Pappy's" and "Mammy's" hamburger and flapjack coffee-counter restaurants which he had set up only a few months ago to catch the nickels and dimes of limited-pocket World's Fair visitors.

Mr. Fox, who will be remembered from the motion picture's early Theda Bara days for the heavy gold watch chain he wore across a heavy paunch below a big black mustachio, had acquired rights to the several Tri-Ergon patents from Messrs. Engl, Vogt and Masolle, of Germany, somewhere at about the time he sold Fox Film. He duly served notice on the industry at large. That very week Mr. Fox filed heavy damage and infringement suits against AT&T's Erpi, RCA's Photophone and theatre-producer licensees of both.

Broadway at that time heard frequently that Mr. Fox was envisioning a tremendous Fox sound empire growing out of the $66,000 which he paid the Germans of Tri-Ergon for their rights. And in the bitterly contested court battles which followed, it looked at times as if Mr. Fox's dream might come true, for lower federal courts upheld him. But, on March 4, 1935, the United States supreme court blasted with dramatic swiftness the Fox visions when it declared, in unanimous opinion, that the Tri-Ergon sound patents were not only based on "ancient mechanical devices" but "lacked invention." Involved were Tri-Ergon's "flywheel" and "double-printing" process.

Neither the "big electrics" nor the "Big Eight" have heard from Mr. Fox since.

The patent priority determined this week by the federal court for Tri-Ergon is for a photo-electric cell, but, because Radtke will appeal, according to Leonard Day, Radtke's representative, "no patent will be issued to Tri-Ergon at this time."

What Is a Paper?

UPHOLDING the "freedom of the press," Judge Leon R. Yankwich has just ruled in Federal district court in California that Pomona City's handbill ordinance is in part unconstitutional in forbidding distribution of the Citrus Valley News. The ordinance recognized rights of distribution only of papers with enough circulation to qualify for second class mail privilege.

Despite circulation figures the judge ruled that the paper had its rights as a part of the press.

"A publication is none the less a newspaper," he said, "because it may not have a large paid-up circulation, or any paid up circulation." That last phrase lets in several trade "papers" one can call to mind.

Whichever?

FROM BACK of the sandbag barricades at 4 Golden Square in London, Aubrey Flanagan dispatches the tidings that a Reginald Fogwell has announced himself as a producer and that he says he is to make a film of "Mein Kampf."

"This morning", dispatches Mr. Flanagan, "the London dailies report that Mr. Hitler has decided to revise it."

Communications being what they are, the HERALD goes to press without discovering just which it is that Mr. Hitler plans to revise, production or book.

Storm in Hollywood

FRED STORM, formerly of the International News Service staff in Washington, and recently under special Roosevelt approval made a member of the Goldwyn Hollywood publicity staff, has just come through a stormy spell. It seems he gave a story to Louella Parsons and forgot to tell his staff about it. After a fortnight's simmering he was "out." Then the next day he was "in" again. The press clan of Hollywood whispers that Fred better remember also that Sam's name goes first, even if there's Roosevelt in the item.

Luce Figures

ORNAMENTALLY, and eternally statistical, Fortune, the vanityfair of business magazines, has gone a-polling businessmen to name "the industry which has done the most or gone beyond the standards of performance that the general public expects of it, in order to win and deserve public approval."

The motion picture industry comes off far down the line with a vote of six tenths of one percent.

Automobiles were far the winner, with a vote of 40.3 percent, while radio was second with 5.2 percent, nearly ten times as good as the screen.

In answer to: "What particular industry in recent years has in your opinion made the greatest technological progress?" the finding gave radio-and-television fourth place with 13.7.

Only seven tenths of one per cent of parents would have their sons take up television, the survey found.

Jawbone

H. V. KALTENBORN, celebrated radio commentator and reporter, who has a bit in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," says he worked eight hours for Columbia, appearing in 90 seconds of the 120 minute picture. The rest of the time, he remarks, was spent arguing with studio executives about his pay. They probably did not ask him to argue, so that part of the time he was on his own. Maybe he needs an agent.

Glorious Example

AN EXTRA SHOVE seems to be being applied to "The Real Glory," both east and west. Last Friday some 250,000 readers of the Los Angeles Times found in it about eight pages of advertisements from fourteen business houses in display "tie-up" with the picture. The job was by Fred Storm and his aide, John P. Miles. Localized activities of the sort by studio forces are to be considered exemplary tours de force, rather than exploitation, primarily.

PROGRESS AND DEVELOPMENT in the engineering technique of the motion picture were given semi-annual public attention as the Fall Convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers opened in the Pennsylvania Hotel, New York, this week, below and right. On the dais at the opening day luncheon are Walter Brooks, Charles L. Glett and Frank K. Speidel of Eastern Service Studios; D. E. Hyndman, Eastman Kodak; Congressman Bruce Barton, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia; E. A. Williford, SMPE president; W. G. Van Schmus of the Music Hall; Edward P. Curtis, Eastman Kodak; S. K. Wolf, and Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith. At right are Dr. Loyd A. Jones, chief physicist of the Kodak Research Laboratories, who was awarded the Society's Progress Medal, and Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president of Technicolor, given the Journal Award. The story is on page 33.

BIG PROBLEMS STILL HERE: MPTOA; GRAVE DANGERS LIE AHEAD: ALLIED

Kuykendall Says Trade Practice Code Was "Loaded with Empty Clauses"; Directors Will Meet Monday

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America now concludes, after all the months of trade practice code formulation with distributors, that the document, ruled illegal by the Department of Justice two months ago, "was loaded with empty clauses and phony solutions," that several of the "hot issues" raised "during the excitement are turning out to be insignificant and unimportant," and that some of the vitally important exhibitor problems, ignored by the code, are still unsolved.

Directors To Meet Monday

This declaration was made Saturday in a statement from MPTOA headquarters, New York, going out over the signature of Edward L. Kuykendall, president, as the officers and directors were preparing to leave for their annual meeting to elect for the new year and determine new policy and procedure, in a two-day session, starting Monday, at the Greenbrier hotel at the resort of White Sulphur Springs in West Virginia.

Four "vital" problems which still are unsolved, were listed as follows:

(1) The selection of pictures in wholesale buying (block booking).

(2) Overbuying to deprive a competitor of pictures (monopoly).

(3) Unreasonable clearance between theatres (zoning).

(4) Cut-throat competition between theatres (in the form of double billing, giveaways, premiums).

Cancellation Factor

The statement from MPTOA headquarters declared that the first problem may be on its way to solution by reasonable cancellation rights, generally offered by distributors. "It can be solved by individual company action, but it won't be solved until all of the companies take such definite action," said the statement, in praising MGM and Twentieth Century-Fox for publicly making declarations of their intentions of effecting trade practices independent, in noting Universal's intentions for certain trade practice proposals, and in questioning Paramount, RKO and Columbia for delaying action. "United Artists," the Kuykendall statement added, "apparently has no intention of offering anything." Warner Brothers, the first to announce an individual trade practise program, was given recognition in a previous MPTOA statement. (Twentieth Century-Fox, while not yet having made any public announcement of its intentions, is understood to have so notified Mr. Kuykendall last weekend.)

Score Charge "On Way Out"

The MPTOA board meeting's agenda will be highlighted by a discussion of exhibitor problems of the day, as they apply to trade practices, particularly. Of significance, or otherwise, in this connection, is the anticipated attendance of William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, who led the distributors' committee in working out the ill-fated trade practice program.

The statement says that the separate score charge as such "seems to be on the way out with all companies," but added that "this does not necessarily" mean that the distributors have reduced their over-all rental charges by the price of the score charge.

The 10-15-20 per cent cancellation and the right to cancel pictures actually offensive to a community "will permanently solve the block booking problem for the small exhibitor; the large exhibitor has no serious problem on block booking," it is said.

Promises of other concessions by distributors are "at best, in very general terms," the statement continued, "and depend entirely upon the judgment, intelligence and good faith of the distributors' field representations to be effective. Unfortunately, they are all closely related to the prices, terms and conditions asked by distributors for their pictures, which still involves fighting and horse trading in its cruder forms."

On the general subject of trade practice corrective measures and the "vital problems" remaining unsolved, the statement concluded with the pessimistic note that "maybe the industry is so deeply involved in litigation and lawsuits that nothing can be done on trade practices until the courts decide the issue which will take years before any final decisions are reached, involves enormous legal expenses that will force drastic 'economy' programs, and, judging from past experience, will ultimately result in a lot of inept, drastic regulations by court decrees that will solve none of the economic problems with which we are confronted, or in new restrictive legislation on our business."

A. F. OF L. OPPOSES NEELY BILL

That part of labor which is represented by the American Federation of Labor is strongly opposed to the Neely anti-block and blind selling bill in Congress, all 500 A. F. of L. delegates in convention at Cincinnati, last Thursday, at adjournment, voting unanimously to adopt the report of its executive council denouncing the proposed measure, on the grounds that its passage "will mean that production schedules will be cut in half and thus directly affect the employment of some 282,000 persons employed in production, distribution and exhibition, in the 276 different crafts in the industry."

It was brought out at the convention that all unions whose members are employed in the industry appealed to the Senate to defeat the bill.

Loew's May Establish Houses in Buenos Aires

Neighborhood theatres may be established in Buenos Aires by Loew's, Inc., according to David Lewis, Argentine manager of the company, who arrived in New York last week. While no decision has as yet been reached, the plan is understood to be under discussion.

The company has no theatres in Buenos Aires, and uses the Ideal Theatre as its first run outlet.

Myers' Office Proposes Exhibitors Individually Start Setting Aside Funds for Installation of Television

Allied States Association this week expressed some opinions and made some pointed remarks on the state of the business, in a bulletin emanating from its headquarters, in Washington, unsigned but generally recognized as the work of Abram F. Myers, its general counsel and board chairman.

"Float or Sink Together"

The basic intention was to point out some "grave dangers" that confront the entire industry, in all branches, for the reason that with respect to "many of these dangers, especially those growing out of the war and the increasing competition of substitute amusements, all are in the same boat, and for once it should be recognized that all must float—or sink—together." Allied's statement was more conciliatory, optimistic and of a mutually constructive nature than is usual.

It sees improved relations between exhibitor and distributor since the heat of argument over the trade practice program ended.

Reduction of top-bracket salaries in production and distribution to bring them more into line with other American industries would reduce whatever losses will be felt from the war, and, furthermore, would make the industry less of a target for taxation, said Allied's statement at the outset, adding that if economies and rigid budget control mentioned in the trade since the outbreak of war are going to be practiced, and foreign losses met by these measures, "then there should be no reason why exhibitors should pay higher rentals, and exhibitors should not allow film salesmen to argue them into paying higher prices."

Striking a conciliatory attitude, Allied stated that it would endeavor to report to its members any reliable and significant information coming to its attention from producers and distributors.

Blames Monopolies

"If the motion picture industry were not so completely monopolized," said Allied, "so much of the existing suspicion could be eliminated, and all could then cooperate in meeting a common disaster. Independent exhibitors, through their national organization, would be invited to name a committee to work with a committee representing the producers to ascertain and report the facts in reference to current and prospective losses, to advise the exhibitors as to how production values are being maintained, and to make recommendations for necessary curtailments of cost, extended playing time for pictures, need for additional film revenue (if any) and other matters of vital interest to all parties."

Allied injected an optimistic note at this point, predicting that the spurt to come in manufacturing and agricultural lines—if the war continues and if America is not drawn into it—should bring prosperity to theatre box offices, and "within a year gains in the United States should offset foreign losses."

"Motion pictures are basic entertainment and should be among the first to benefit; the outlook for exhibitors, especially those in the industrial centers, for the next year, is rosy."

However, Allied warned exhibitors to "watch their step, will guard against undue expansion of their activities and will store away some of the fruits of the windfall for a rainy day."

Relative to "tiding over the war emergency,"

SITUATION IMPROVED, SAYS ALLIED

Allied advised the industry to consider the situation as Allied sees it today:

"Motion pictures no longer are a novelty. People no longer go to the movies, they go to see a particular picture. If the picture they want to see is not available to them, they do something else.

"Due to the shortsightedness of studio executives in allowing motion picture stars to go on the air, radio has been built into an able competitor that is luring patrons from the theatres by the millions.

"Admission prices are much higher than in the early days and unless steps are taken to keep down film rentals and other items of overhead they will further increase and the industry will enter upon an era of self-strangulation.

"To retain the interest and good will of the public, producers and exhibitors alike will have to concentrate on showmanship; new names, new faces, new stories and new methods of exploitation must be devised and employed; compulsory block booking must go—no industry which faces the formidable competition which now confronts the movies can hope to prosper or even survive by telling its customers that they must buy what they don't want in order to get what they do want. Moreover, Allied still clings to the quaint belief that strong pictures will make more money for all concerned than weak ones. Exhibitors must continue their fight for the Neely Bill."

Urges Television Fund

Allied believes that "television is on its way and will bring new and difficult problems for theatre owners. If it is sprung on the industry suddenly, independent exhibitors may be caught flat-footed. The affiliated theatres (if there are any then), by reason of their ties with the electric companies, will have first call on equipment, unless the independents take measures to protect themselves.

"Every exhibitor who expects to remain in business should now be giving heed to the problems which will come with television. National Allied will endeavor to give its members timely warning. It will also strive for equal treatment as between different classes of theatres as regards equipment and service. But exhibitors should begin at once to put aside a certain percentage of their earnings every month into a sort of sinking fund to defray the cost incident to the installation of television.

Credits Warners

Allied gave Warner Brothers and its general sales manager, Gradwell Sears, "full credit" for "stealing the show" by first presenting to exhibitors an independent trade practice program of their own. "While not giving exhibitors all the relief to which they are entitled, it nevertheless should be welcomed by exhibitors."

Allied recognized that MGM followed the lead of Warners "and it appears likely that other members of the Big Eight will fall in line," all of which appears to the organization to leave matters in "a satisfactory condition for the time being."

"If the distributors carry out their voluntary undertakings in good faith, they will make a great contribution to the restoration of confidence and pave the way for the kind of cooperation and understanding that should prevail. For a time last summer (during the height of the code formulation), the situation looked desperate, with everybody talking out of turn, and not caring very much what they said. In recent months, with more action and less talk, the situation has greatly improved."

Allied warned of the "leak" in exhibition income from 16mm showings, citing Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan as localities of particularly increased activity. "The menace is a grave one," it said. "Either these films are being shown in violation of copyright restrictions or certain distributors have been greatly negligent in the wording of contracts," Allied said.

On the matter of the Government's anti-trust prosecution of the majors, Allied warned that regardless of organized industry opinion as to the outcome, the activity of the Government's prosecutors showed "there is no indication of any lack of confidence" on the part of the Department of Justice, which is "pressing the case with all possible vigor," adding that peristence in dilatory tactics by the majors in connection with the case "will sooner or later prove a boomerang."

Allied national directors will meet in Washington in January to review the work done.

Clearance, Conciliation, Neely, Duals, Product, Contracts Before Exhibitors

Ontario Owners Get a Clearance Board Report

The Independent Theatre Association of Ontario meeting at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto last week received a report from the special Anti-Protection League Committee recently formed to bring about a national clearance board for Canada. The committee reported it has been in conference with N. L. Nathanson, president, and J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president of Famous Players Canadian, who have said they are willing to sit in with the independents to discuss clearances and priorities with a view to amending them.

Mr. Nathanson said this week in New York that he favors local conciliation boards in Canada to solve exhibitor problems and does not believe that a national conciliation setup is feasible. "There are two sides to the protection problem," he said, adding that "It must be realized that the large theatres bear the burden of rentals which make possible the continuing production of pictures of the type that brings people into theatres."

Arkansas ITO On Record Against Neely Bill

The Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas at its semi-annual meeting in Little Rock, this week went on record as unanimously opposed to the Neely anti-block booking bill, after listening to an address on the bill by Ward Martin, Little Rock attorney. A copy of the resolution will be mailed to each congressman of Arkansas. About 125 members attended.

Mr. Martin said that the bill would add a financial burden to producers and pile up more difficulties for exhibitors. He also said that he did not believe in public censorship of motion pictures.

Roy Rogers, Republic western star, was a guest.

Would End Causes Of Dual Billing

After a discussion Friday in Philadelphia members of Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania came to the conclusion, without formal vote, that every effort should be made to eliminate the causes that bring about double features. The meeting followed on the heels of the report that Stanley-Warner may adopt dual bills.

Washington MPTO Meets This Month

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington will hold their annual convention in Seattle on Friday, October 27th, at the New Washington Hotel.

A one-day meeting is planned, led by L. O. Lukan, president. Arrangements are being made by James M. Hone, executive secretary of the organization.

Kelly Calls Allied Syracuse Meeting

New York independent exhibitors convened in Syracuse Tuesday at a meeting called by E. Thornton Kelly, executive secretary of New York Allied. The avowed purpose of the meeting was to "sift facts" in the controversy between Max Cohen, head of New York Allied, and Mr. Kelly.

Sidney Samuelson, Colonel Cole, Frank Lydon and Arthur Howard, national Allied leaders, were in attendance. Mr. Cohen advised members of the New York unit that it was not a meeting of the New York State Allied.

Colonel Cole said that affiliation of the organization with national Allied "depended on conditions as they develop."

Myers To Attend Exhibitor Banquet

Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States Association, will be honor guest at the 19th annual banquet of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, to be held next Tuesday at the Roosevelt Hotel in Pittsburgh.

Charles S. Philbrook is general chairman of the convention which will be held Monday and Tuesday at the hotel.

MAJORS SCORE: A SUIT IS DISMISSED; NO NEW YORK TRIAL BEFORE MARCH

Orange County Theatres Action Is Dropped; Defendant Cooperative Theatres of Michigan Asks Delay

The majors this week had cause for some jubilation when, amidst the barrage of anti-trust suit attacks, an independent owner withdrew its action before trial, and even paid the legal costs. It was the first withdrawal since both independent exhibitors and the Government took up their respective campaigns in the courts against practices of the distributors and large circuits. The case was that of Orange County Theatres, New York, versus five distributors, and the reason given for the withdrawal was a dispute among the independent's executives.

A second breathing spell in the majors' defense of the 40-odd actions pending in the federal courts came with the disclosure by the Government that trial of the New York "key" trust attack by the Department of Justice is not likely to come to trial before March.

There were other more or less mild skirmishes and legal moves in other trust cases in the field.

New York Orange County Anti-Trust Case Dropped

The Independent Orange County (N. Y.) Theatres' $250,000 anti-trust suit complaint against five majors and the Paramount Theatres in Newburgh, N. Y., operated by George Walsh, was dismissed with costs last Friday in United States district court, in New York City.

The case had been called for trial. Isaac Miller, president and general counsel for the plaintiff organization, informed the court that his side would drop the case because Harry Friedman, former president of Orange County Theatres, was now litigating against it, and was "hostile to its case."

Mr. Miller declared that his company was, in another case pending in the state supreme court, charging Friedman with embezzlement.

Federal Judge John W. Clancy ordered the Orange County Theatres to pay costs, the amount to be determined by accounting or an agreement.

The case was begun in July 1937. The charges were that Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal, and RKO conspired with Mr. Walsh, Eugene Levy, and Netco Theatres Corporation, to deprive the Academy, Newburgh, of second and third run product.

Do Not Expect the New York Trial Until March

Paul Williams, assistant to Thurman Wesley Arnold, United States assistant district attorney in charge of anti-trust suits, said in New York Saturday that he doubted whether the pending case against the majors in New York would reach trial before March of next year.

Inasmuch as the government has applied to Federal Judge John Knox for a preference on the trial calendar, Mr. Williams' remarks were interpreted as an indication the Government may not want its motion granted, or does not expect it to be granted.

As the calendar stood this week, the case is scheduled for late February or March. When asking for his motion two months ago, Mr. Williams had asked for November 1st, as a trial date.

The case is being delayed principally by the examination and answering of complex interrogatories served by the Government on the defendants last month.

The companies have been given until November 1st, to answer these. They were reported last week to be considering the serving of interrogatories on the Government. United Artists already has served one.

Michigan Defendant Asks Suit Delay

Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, defendant in an anti-trust action against it by Midwest Theatres Company, moved last week in Detroit federal court that the suit be stayed until determination of the ownership of the Schreiber Circuit, of which Midwest Theatres is a part.

Jacob Schreiber, former owner, has challenged the present control of the circuit's five houses by his nephew, Raymond Schreiber.

Folly Amends Complaint In Brooklyn Trust Case

Folly Amusement Holding Corporation, former operator of the Folly Theatre, Brooklyn, and which is suing the eight majors, Monogram, and Republic for $250,000 treble damages in an anti-trust action in New York, this week filed an amended complaint against the United Artists Corporation, and a bill of particulars. The corporation's suit charges a conspiracy which forced it to close the theatre.

Government Ready to Proceed in Chicago

Seymour Simon and Robert Wright, Government attorneys, were due back in Chicago this week, from Washington, where they had completed the briefs in the Government's contempt case against Balaban and Katz and the eight majors, for violation of a 1932 consent decree.

They were expected to submit the briefs to Federal Judge Woodward in Chicago Federal Court, immediately. The Government's case is believed to have been completed this week, in preparatory details.

The defendants will have 30 days to answer, from the time the briefs are filed in court.

Set Hearing November 13th In Los Angeles Trust Suit

The Government criminal contempt case hearing against Fox West Coast Theatres and several majors for violation of a 1930 consent decree, in Los Angeles, was continued from this Monday to November 13th, by Federal Judge Campbell Beaumont. The defendants are expected to file requests for bills of particulars.

Court Orders Trust Complaint Amended

Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, in Pittsburgh, last week, ordered the Erie State Theatre Corporation to file a more specific complaint in its suit against the majors.

Griffith Circuit Granted Extension in Filing Brief

The Griffith Amusement Company, in Oklahoma City Federal Court, was to file its reply brief this Friday to the Department of Justice charges in the suit by it against Griffith and the majors for anti-trust law violations, but was granted a 10-day extension.

Columbia, United Artists, and Universal have already filed reply briefs.

The briefs support defense motions that the Government be compelled to file a bill of particulars and clarify its charges.

ANTI-TRUST DUTIES INCREASED: ARNOLD

Assistant Attorney General Thurman W. Arnold, who besides conducting other anti-trust suits is leader of the government's prosecution of the motion picture industry, spoke last Tuesday in Washington to the American Retail Federation. Mr. Arnold described the increased duties imposed on the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice by the European war in trying to prevent a long range dislocation of American economy and to control the immediate problem of profiteering.

Mr. Arnold treated at some length both problems and stressed the need for additional personnel to handle complaints to study needed changes in the law and to encourage and coordinate the development of consumer organizations.

Any expectation that the European war would change the division's policy was dismissed when Mr. Arnold at the beginning of his speech challenged the idea that "it was time to ignore the anti-trust laws." On the contrary, Mr. Arnold said, "the anti-trust division interprets the war as a new challenge which intensifies the need for its activity. War has added to the task before us rather than subtracted from it, because it has increased the opportunities for aggressive combinations to use war conditions as an excuse for the destruction of that industrial democracy on which political democracy depends."

FRANCE ORDERS CASH ON DELIVERY; NAZIS SET WEEKLY MINIMUM BOOKING

Right Is Given French Exhibitors to Cancel Contract If Distributor Cannot Provide Picture Ordered

Enlightenment on some of the conditions, rules and regulations affecting the motion picture industry in France comes from Paris through La Cinematographie Francaise, one of the leading film journals in that country, and discloses the basic stringencies under which the business is compelled to operate because of the war with Germany. Outstanding is a condition set down providing for cash on delivery of films and advertising accessories and the right given to exhibitors to cancel a contract if the distributor cannot provide a picture.

Exhibitors Meet Distributors

Definite plans for carrying on business during the war have been formulated by the French motion picture industry itself, so far as possible contract obligations will be fulfilled. When this is not possible the contract will be temporarily suspended and the exhibitor authorized to obtain film wherever he can.

The association of exhibitors (La Chambre Syndicale du Film) met with the distributors' group (La Chambre Syndicale Francaise des Distributeurs de Films) to take action made necessary by the war. The joint meeting unanimously decided to regulate the delivery of films and of motion picture advertising which had not previously been subject to law.

It was also decided that contracts executed before the war should be upheld as far as possible. But when the exhibitor and the distributor both agree, the execution of any contract will be suspended. In this case the exhibitor may be able to secure another film from the same distributor, or if this is impossible, from any distributor. A joint commission of theatre owners and distributors will be set up to settle the questions arising from suspended contracts and other cases of absolute necessity.

Four-Point Program

The organized French industry established a four-point program:

1st: No film or advertising material will be delivered except for cash;

2nd: Insofar as it is possible contracts will be kept;

3rd: If a distributor cannot furnish the film contracted for, or a substitute, the contract is suspended and the exhibitor will be authorized to obtain a film elsewhere, and,

4th: No exhibitor may obtain a substitute film without the authorization of the distributing company that had the original contract. The new regulations were announced by M. Paul Ambiehl, vice-president of the Syndical Film Chamber.

Meanwhile Paris theatres function with a curtailed schedule. Many employees and executives have been mobilized. Most of the important theatres remained opened but business was not good. One of the contributing causes was the early evening closing order. This regulation, issued by the Paris Police Department at the request of the Military Authority, makes the theatres shut down at the height of evening business. The hope is expressed in Paris that the regulation will be relaxed when life is reorganized on a wartime basis.

The offices of the distributing companies remained open for the most part. The personnel, however, immediately was reduced at the outbreak of war. No one knows how long business will be continued. The progress made in motion pictures during the last few years in France will be at least temporarily lost, according to the most hopeful opinions in Paris.

Production at the Paris studios was interrupted by the outbreak of hostilities. A typical case is that of the Pathe Joinville studio. It is located at a strategic position and 360 soldiers have been billeted there to man the nearby anti-aircraft guns. Some pictures, probably mostly propaganda, will be produced under government control. The industry already has been organized for this and it is expected that some of the French stars will be recalled from their regiments to make motion pictures.

WAR PICTURES ARE STRONG IN CANADA

"You're in the Army Now", three-year-old film made with the co-operation of the British War Office, and "Our Fighting Navy" which had the support of the English Admiralty are reported to be strong box-office attractions in Canada. No new British films have been received in Canada since the war began but old pictures that have a wartime slant are very popular; "Secret Agent" is considered timely.

Two Hollywood made pictures, "The Eagle and the Hawk" and "Wings of the Navy", are doing good business in Canada. Film exchanges have been searching their vaults for films that will satisfy the public's present taste for war pictures.

Ban Street Carnivals

The city council of Seattle recently passed an ordinance banning street carnivals at the request of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington and the Seattle Federation of Motion Picture Theatre Employees.

Jake Miller Retires

Jake Miller, a figure in the New Orleans entertainment world for the last 30 years, retired this week after selling the Lafayette theatre to Merrie Shows, Inc., of which Charles V. Levy is president.

Richard Reichter, manager in Yugoslavia, and Jack Kamras, in charge of sales in Finland, won Warner Brothers' European exploitation contest. Mr. Reichter led with his campaign on "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." Promotion on "Juarez" won second award for Mr. Kamras.

Alexander Olshanetsky, Jewish composer, has been engaged to write an original score for Elite Pictures' forthcoming musical production of "The Vilner Cantor," starring Moishe Oysher.

German Exhibitors and Renters "Have Particular Duty to Bring People and Films Together," Says Ministry

Wartime instructions to the German motion picture industry, which has been virtually a Nazi Government institution, controlled and operated by the Propaganda Ministry, appear in Lichtbildbuhne, Berlin trade journal, which warns that "increased readiness for duties, and enhanced fulfillment of obligations, are demanded of all today, in order that German films may entirely meet all requirements during the war"—presumably propaganda requirements.

A "Particular Duty"

"Exhibitors and film renters," the publication adds, "have the particular duty of bringing the German people and films together in the course of the week's show more so than ever during these present great events," continues the government inspired film mouthpiece, adding that to obtain economical use of existing and forthcoming films the industry is expected to adhere to the following suggestions.

1 Exhibitors and renters will endeavor in every way to achieve maximum utilization of German films. For this purpose it is necessary that German film managers go about their business with rented films more diligently and economically than hitherto. Short runs are no longer desired. Weekly change of film must be the rule even for revivals of old pictures.

2 Film salesmen who have not yet been called to the colors or to civilian assistance service will maintain their normal travel schedules as nearly as possible. However, they will not be able for the present to travel on other than the main railroad lines. It is therefore expected they will proceed instantly on arrival to take up their necessary business and bring it to a prompt conclusion.

3 Rental organizations will contact by mail theatres that cannot be visited promptly because of difficulties in travel, such as call of salesmen to the colors, or shortage of railroad accommodations or of motor cars. Such letters are to be read and answered immediately. Correspondence is to be limited to essentials.

4 It is particularly expected that in cases not only of temporary but of permanent economic difficulties, exhibitors and salesmen will enter into quick and friendly agreement between themselves, consulting superiors if necessary.

GALA SEND-OFF GIVEN 'MR. SMITH' AT CAPITAL; 'DISPUTED PASSAGE', DETROIT

Constitution Hall Audience Includes Membership of Congress as N. P. Club Sponsors Columbia-Capra Film Showing

Official Washington, 4,000 strong, met Tuesday evening in Constitution Hall to consider the merits of Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." The verdict of Senators, Representatives, Supreme Court justices, Cabinet members and other high government members was 100 per cent favorable. "Jefferson Smith," the young crusading senator from an unnamed state, was received with ceremony in keeping with the motion picture. The National Press Club sponsored the event. (The film was reviewed in the issue of October 7th, page 35.)

Impressive Setting

Constitution Hall was illuminated by artillery searchlights as the thousands of guests filed into the historic hall.

The special guests who accepted invitations to come and applaud "Senator Smith" included three members of the Cabinet led by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State. The other Cabinet men were Postmaster General James A. Farley and Attorney General Frank Murphy. The Supreme Court was represented by Associate Justice Stanley Reed and Associate Justice William O. Douglas. Other government officials were Charles Edison, Acting Secretary of the Navy; Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War; Everett K. Burlew, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and United States Solicitor General Robert Johnson.

Other Government Officers

Other Government men present included District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen; R. D. W. Conner, Archivist of the United States; Colonel Edward A. Halsey, Secretary of the Senate; Alvin W. Hall, Director of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving; Assistant Secretary of Commerce, John Monroe Johnson; Daniel C. Roper, former secretary of Commerce; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC; Dr. S. L. Rowe, director of the Pan-American Union and General Hugh Johnson.

Frank Capra and Mrs. Capra were the guests of honor. Columbia Pictures was represented by Harry Cohn, president; Jack Cohn, vice-president; A. Schneider, treasurer; A. Montague, general sales manager, as well as Nate B. Spingold, Maurice A. Bergman, Leo Jaffe, Frank McGrann, Hortense Schorr, Leonard Gaynor, Hank Kaufman and Bernard Zeeman.

"Frank Capra Day"

The world's premiere of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" was the climax of what had been a "Frank Capra Day" in Washington. More than 400 members of the National Press Club and their guests attended a luncheon in his honor. Senator Chandler, until recently Governor of Kentucky, and James Preston, for 35 years head of the Senate press gallery and technical advisor on the film, were special guests. Director Capra spoke and then answered questions from members of the Press Club. Arthur Hatchen, president of the club, presided at the luncheon. W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall, was another speaker.

Delegation Visits Chamber

A delegation of more than sixty persons representing New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore newspapers and national syndicates, trade papers and national magazines and a group of Columbia executives arrived in Washington in time to make a short visit to the Senate Chamber and to attend a special dinner at the Press Club, which preceded the premiere. Before the picture was shown at Constitution Hall the audience was entertained by a Field Artillery Band and the Press Club Glee Club in debut. Mr. Hatchen, president of the club, made a brief address.

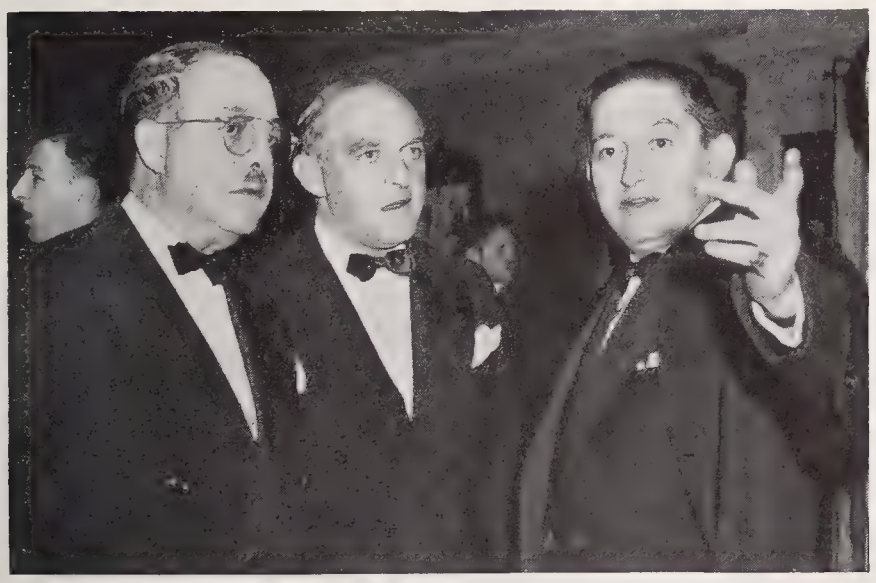
Following the special premiere in Washington, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" began its first theatre run at the Radio City Music Hall on Thursday.

The Music Hall's stage show was built on the melodies of the American composer, Jerome Kern, in harmony with the American spirit of the picture.

Motor City Goes Festive for Opening; Car Manufacturers Join the Parade with New Cars to Convey the Stars

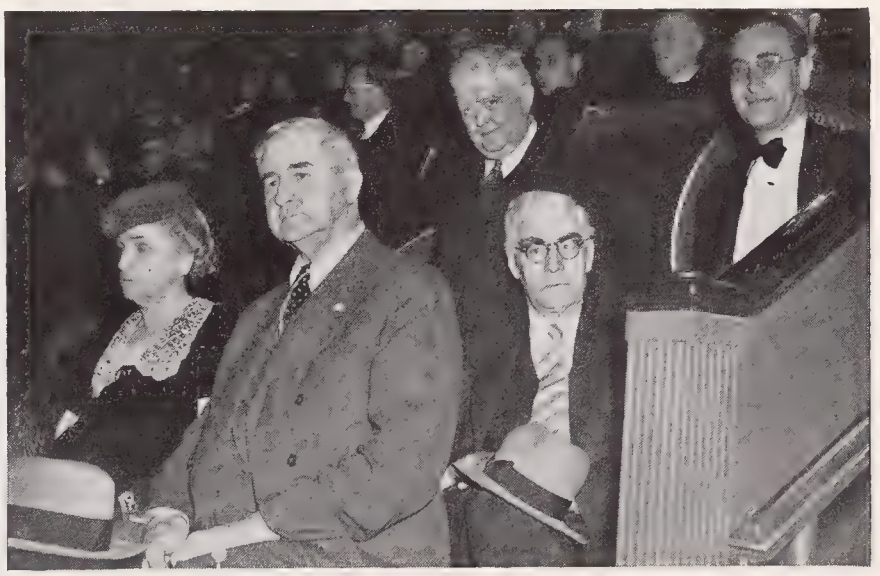
Studded with a group of Hollywood stars, amid outstanding showmen and mid-western circuit operators and a gala review of the latest model automobiles, Paramount launched the world premiere of "Disputed Passage" in Detroit Thursday night at the Michigan Theatre. The city witnessed one of the greatest crowds ever participating in a co-operative civic event in its history. The picture is reviewed on page 36.

Governor Is Chairman



With Governor Luren D. Dickinson acting as honorary chairman of the world premiere committee, more than one hundred local business, civic and social leaders co-operated. Mayor Richard W. Reading, members of the chamber of commerce and other civic organizations as well as thousands of residents greeted Dorothy Lamour and John Howard, stars of "Disputed Passage" and Olympe Bradna, J. Carroll Naish, Susan Hayward, Robert Preston and Joseph Allen, Jr., all of whom appeared in person at the Michigan premiere.

The actual premiere festivities started early Thursday morning when a special meeting of the National Film Critics Poll of America was held. Following this meeting the stars were guests at a special luncheon arranged by the local Variety Club. During the afternoon the crystal Room of the Book-Cadillac Hotel was the scene of an informal reception of the stars and later a buffet supper was held for the Hollywood celebrities, visiting newspaper representatives and guests.



New Cars Paraded

As a prelude to the "Disputed Passage" premiere the local automobile industry staged a sneak view of the 1940 model cars in a huge street parade of "Stars and Cars of 1940." The parade started from the Book-Cadillac at 7:30 P. M. and covered the principal streets of the city en route to the Michigan theatre. Each car brought some prominent Hollywood star to the theatre. As the car arrived the star mounted a raised platform and amid a battery of lights was introduced to the thousands lining the sidewalks in front of the theatre. Harry Heilman, former big-league baseball star and now radio commentator for station WXYZ, was master-of-ceremonies at the theatre.

To aid in holding back the crowds of fans at the Michigan theatre, police and street maintenance department officials had installed steel stanchions set in concrete for the full 320 feet of the theatre block. The stanchions were placed 20 feet out from the curb and a steel cable stretched between them to provide a protected lane for the automobiles.

Among the leading automobile manufacturers who participated in the street parade were Ford, Oldsmobile, Buick, Packard, Hudson, Chevrolet, Plymouth and Pontiac. In addition to the Ford Kiltie Band, three American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps and the oldest Chevrolet and Oldsmobile, Detroit's latest fire apparatus were among the additional highlights of the parade. Another highlight of the premiere came when a Paramount newsreel crew, aided by a police motorcycle escort rushed negatives of the crowds entering the theatre to a laboratory across town. The film was developed, printed and rushed back to the theatre in time for the patrons to see newsreel shots of themselves.

Rail, Bus Trips Arranged

Both railroad and bus lines operating within a radius of 150 miles of Detroit arranged special "World Premiere Trips" to enable visitors to see the Hollywood stars making personal appearances. Full co-operation in handling the crowds along the line of the parade and at the theatre was given by mounted police squads through the action of Commissioner Heinrik Pickert.

Among the theatre executives and newspapermen who arrived in Detroit on October 17th were: Bill Hollander, B. & K. Theatres, Chicago; Harry Browning, M. & P. Theatres, Boston; William F. Crouch, Quigley Publications; Donald Douglas, Chicago Daily News; A. S. Kany, Dayton Herald; Chuck Gay, Dayton Times; Bill White, Pittsburgh Press; Herb Graffis, Chicago Times; Buck Herzog, Milwaukee Sentinel; Gene Rich, Box Office, Herb Berg of Paramount and Lew Nathan.

The following were also scheduled to arrive in time for the opening: Mr. and Mrs. John Balaban and Walter Immerman, Chicago; Allen Usher, Paramount Chicago Division manager; Charles Winchell, Minnesota Amusement Co., Minneapolis; Joe Feldman, of Warners in Pittsburgh; Ralph Lawlor, Paramount theatre, Toledo; Charles Kurtzman, of Loews in Pittsburgh, and John Herman, Paramount newsreel cameraman from Cleveland, also additional newspapermen.

Representatives from the following radio stations covered the premiere: G. F. Ashbacker, Station WKBZ, Muskegon; John E. Fetzer, Station WKZO, Kalamazoo, and Sandy Meek of Stations WOOD and WASH in Grand Rapids.

Advertising Budget Fixed

A $75,000 national newspaper and magazine advertising campaign on "Disputed Passage" and "Rulers of the Sea" was announced by Robert M. Gillham, Paramount's director of publicity and advertising. The opening ad in this campaign is a four-color ad appearing on October 22nd in the American Weekly. The "Rulers of the Sea" campaign will break November 18th.

Frank Capra, producer and director of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," autographs a souvenir brochure for newspaper correspondents at the luncheon given him by the National Press Club in Constitution Hall, Washington, D. C., on the day of the picture's premiere in the capital.

Brandt Going to Hollywood To Check Up for Exhibitors

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association and operator of an independent circuit, also author of the "box-office poison" blast at stars a year ago, said Tuesday that he is going to Hollywood, for the first time, November 1st, "at the request of theatre owners" to check at first hand "the ability of picture companies to produce high quality pictures despite the loss of foreign markets," and the general product outlook for the new season.

Otterson Demonstrates New Wire Service

John Otterson's new Wire Broadcasting Corporation was to give its first public demonstration of the application of wire broadcasting to radio receiving sets Thursday afternoon at the Hotel Essex, New York. The corporation will furnish musical programs without advertising announcements to subscribers over telephone wires through his own radio receiver.

Ask Better Treatment In Argentine Treaty

Lawyers representing motion picture companies met with State Department officials in Washington on Wednesday, to seek consideration for films, in the trade treaty being negotiated between this country and Argentina.

The lawyers were Harold S. Bareford, Warners; Harry Levine, RKO; Frank Irbe, 20th Century-Fox, and Joseph Rosenthal, Loew's.

N. Y. Council Limits Ticket Broker Profits

The New York City Council on Tuesday passed a bill limiting the profits of theatre ticket brokers to 75 cents. Councilman Howard Spellman introduced the bill, and the League of New York Theatres backed it. It is understood the measure applies to all theatre tickets, film houses included.

The producer is allowed, under the bill, to fix the advanced price not in excess of 75 cents over the boxoffice figure. A broker who charges more is guilty of law violation. However, if the producer has not fixed the advance, the broker may resell at any price.

Columbia Broadcasting Bans War Themes

A ban on dramatic material dealing with the war, and a warning that it would censor all sponsored news broadcasts, were contained in a special bulletin sent Tuesday by the Columbia Broadcasting System to all advertisers and advertising agencies.

The bulletin emphasized that the CBS would continue to cover the war extensively, but referred to the National Association of Broadcasters code of fair practices, a provision of which bans controversial issues on sponsored programs.

Directors of Loew's, Inc., on Wednesday declared a quarterly dividend of $1.62½ a share on the preferred stock payable November 15th to holders of record October 27th.

Harry Warner will appear in "America's Making," a film to be made by the Russell Sage Foundation.

FIRST RETURNING U. S. CAMERAMAN TELLS OF BOMBINGS ON EAST FRONT

Plane and Courier Provided by Polish Government; His Auto Was Bombed in Race to the Roumanian Border

What good were pictures of the fighting and the gore, if it became too late to get them out of the war-zone? Harrison Forman, the first American motion picture cameraman in Warsaw while it was being bombed, answered for himself by leaving the desperate Polish capital for home. Though his pictures were "scoops," Mr. Forman regretted that he couldn't stay for more, but "there are two rules in news photography: the first, get pictures; the second, get them home."

Mr. Forman's pictures were used by Paramount News, by the Associated Press, by innumerable newspapers and magazines. He was free-lancing at the time for Paramount News.

Author, Lecturer, Explorer

Author, lecturer, and explorer, a member of the Explorers' Club, Mr. Forman is likely to be on the spot when world shivering events take place. Hence his pictures of the Cathay Hotel bombing in Shanghai, of the fighting between the Russians and Japanese on the Siberian border, of the battling between the Japanese and Chinese near Kaifeng in China, and of the Chinese Communist Army in Central China.

At that the departure from Warsaw September 9th was really an escape; the city was almost surrounded. With him were Frank Muto, cameraman for the International News Service, and James Brown, INS reporter. The three were bombed and machine-gunned in their car on their way to the Rumanian border.

"I had spent 10 years in the Orient and was tired of it," Mr. Forman related. "So I headed for Russia. I had a deal with Paramount News. It was a washout. I had to be nice to the Russians, because they were nice to me; so I wasted a lot of film. I planned to go to Mongolia, to horn in on the Jap-Mongol fighting. Then I had one of my hunches, and played it. The day I arrived in Warsaw, headlines said Ribbentrop had arrived in Moscow.

"I got a telegram from Paramount: 'Can you cover Ribbentrop's arrival in Moscow, also signing of the pact?'

"Then the war broke out, and I was there, in the middle of it, the only American newsreel cameraman in Warsaw until September 9th.

Government Courier and Plane

His films were dispatched by courier every night, in a government plane, after he had "convinced them how important to their cause pictures were, especially in America."

"We never knew where the planes were going; the courier himself didn't know. The truth was that they flew wherever they could. I'd cable New York every time; and New York, in turn, would cable everybody from Stockholm to Rome. The couriers would check in at the various Polish embassies.

"I find now that several did not get through. I know of one plane that definitely was shot down. The courier died."

On the flight to Rumania, he said, "hardest of all was the getting of gasoline," and added, "I bluffed my way into military gasoline depots by showing them my permission document from the Ministry of War to take pictures as propaganda."

Sees Lvov Bombed

Outside Lvov (Lemberg), capital of the Polish Ukraine, they were stopped. The city was being bombed; one stretch, six hours continuously.

"I will always remember one forlorn soldier, with a rifle guarding a bridge in front of the city—against airplanes," he said.

"We finally drove into the city. All the time the bombing was still going on. Crossing a siding I saw at the left a string of gasoline cars. I said to Frankie Muto, 'Let's get out of here.' "We hadn't gone more than a block when we heard a whistle from those tank cars. When you hear a whistle like that, it's too late to move. You either live or you don't. An aviator had made a direct hit on those tanks. Our car shook, and rattled our teeth. We saw a column of flame and smoke 500 feet high.

"We didn't stay to see any thing else."

The Americans headed for the Russian border but learned Russia was mobilizing and so headed south for the Rumanian frontier, "through the appendix of Poland."

"At Bucharest I asked the Rumanian Government for permission to take pictures of the refugees from Poland. But the Rumanians were so jittery that they said no more pictures." So to America.

Technical Director

Mr. Forman has been directly in the motion picture industry, too. He was technical director for Frank Capra in the filming of "Lost Horizon" in 1937.

"Before the Hollywood premiere was over I went home, packed a few bags, caught a midnight plane for San Francisco, and sailed for the Orient. I landed in Shanghai, flew to the Gobi Desert, made movies in Mongolia, then in Tibet."

It was on this trip that he made the first

DES MOINES PATRONS DESIRE WAR SCENES

At least 80 per cent of Des Moines film patrons want war scenes in their newsreels, according to a recent vote taken by Tri-States Theatre Corporation in their Des Moines theatres on two successive nights.

The company decided to give the public an opportunity to decide if war subjects should be included in the newsreels after hearing some patrons declare they did not want war subjects to conflict with their pleasure. The vote is being taken in all of the Tri-States theatres.

pictures of the army organization of the Chinese Communists, pictures which were used in "Life" magazine.

"I was in their headquarters when the Japanese-Chinese war broke out in Peiping," he said. "The day I arrived in Shanghai was the day the fighting started there.

"I was in the Hotel Cathay when the Chinese accidentally dropped two very large bombs in their own territory. I scored a world scoop by getting my films into New York a week ahead of the others. March of Time had asked me to cover."

Head-Hunters

Mr. Forman spent the winter of 1937 in America. The next March he went out again, headed for Tibet but the war made that impossible, so he went to Formosa.

But this was the military airplane headquarters for Japanese operations in South China, and he was far from welcomed.

"I was in quite a spot," he said, but convinced the Japs that I wanted pictures of head-hunters, that I was an explorer, so they sent me into the head hunters' land.

Back in Shanghai he learned that the Japanese advance had been stopped near Kaifeng, by broken dikes.

Wrote Book on Tibet

"I persuaded the Japanese to give me an airplane and pilot," he said. "We flew out over the flooded areas. I suggested to the pilot that he dive close to the dikes; and he did! Anyway, that gained me some even better pictures. Paramount used them; and Life gave them a double truck spread."

When war broke on the Siberian front, he went there, and again was the only newsreel cameraman on the spot. Paramount again used his pictures.

Last winter, he finished writing a book, "Through Forbidden Tibet."

Mr. Forman is married, has a daughter, Brenda, and lives in Port Washington, Long Island.

Many New Theatres For Minneapolis

Minneapolis may have from 15 to 20 new theatres if the city council grants a permit for one theatre, according to W. A. Steffes, president of Allied Theatres of the Northwest. A permit has been granted to the Thompson Theatre Company for a house at East Seventh Street in St. Paul. If the theatre is built opposition exhibitors plan to erect competing theatres. Meanwhile plans are being drawn by Leinbenberg and Kaplan, Minneapolis architects, for the projected Thompson theatre. A $100,000 enterprise is planned, including an 800 seat theatre, stores and office space.

New York Theatre For French Films

The Central theatre at Broadway and 57th Street has been remodeled and will be reopened Friday for the showing of French motion pictures. The first picture will be "Port of Shadows" (Le Quai Des Brumes), a presentation of the Film Alliance of the United States, Inc. "Port of Shadows" has won six international awards, including first place at the Venice International Film Exposition. Jean Gabin is the star.

SEE TELEVISION AS RADIO SUPPLEMENT

Although television is becoming a big commercial development and possesses tremendous possibilities, it will never replace radio, but will be a supplementary service, E. J. Dykstra, division manager of Farnsworth Television and Radio Corporation, manufacturers, Fort Wayne, Ind., said this week while addressing distributors in Cincinnati.

Sees Some Gain in Latin-America

American film companies may expect some increase in Latin American business as a result of the war, but they must not expect to recoup in that continent even a considerable portion of the losses suffered by the decline in European revenue, Walter Gould, United Artists' Latin American sales manager, said on his return to New York this Monday, after a 10 weeks' stay in Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay.

Mr. Gould emphasized that Latin American opportunities were already being cultivated fully by the American companies.

"To say that important sources of revenue are waiting to be tapped in Central and South America," he said, "is equivalent to saying that the foreign departments of the entire film industry have not been doing their jobs all these years."

A hopeful note was struck by Mr. Gould, when he noted that business in Brazil and Argentina was better since the war, and that European product was being shown less.

Mr. Gould said that United Artists would be operating three theatres in Sao Paulo, Brazil, before the year's end: the Opera-United Artists, the Roxy-United Artists, and the Astoria. The first two are still to open; the latter is already in operation.

Film Critics Set Convention Date

The Newspaper Film Critics of America, new national organization of motion picture editors and critics of the daily press formed last July, has set March 2-4 as dates for the first national convention. So far Memphis leads as the site for the convention, but the planning committee is delaying a decision pending a wider check of opinion.

Merle Potter, motion picture editor of the Minneapolis Times-Tribune and MOTION PICTURE HERALD correspondent in Minneapolis, will serve as general chairman of the committee to poll the membership on the best pictures and performances of the year.

Members of the planning committee are: Harry Martin, the Memphis Commercial Appeal, chairman pro tem; Buck Herzog, Milwaukee Sentinel, secretary pro tem; Keith Wilson, Omaha World-Herald, and Mr. Potter met in Chicago last week and worked out a skeleton Articles of Association which will be submitted at the March meeting.

1937 Taxes Not Paid by Many

A Treasury Department report issued in Washington on Tuesday, pertaining to income tax and other payments by the motion picture industry, noted that in 1937 only slightly more than one-half of the exhibitor corporations paid income taxes.

In addition, approximately three-fourths of the motion picture producing corporations showed no income tax liabilities in their operations for that year, the report said.

Only 61 of the 246 producer corporations showed net income, it was shown in an analysis of corporation returns for 1937. Those companies reported an aggregate gross income of $123,603,000 and a net income of $13,864,000 on which they paid $1,325,000 in normal taxes, $207,000 in undistributed profits surtaxes and $7,000 in excess profits taxes.

Of the remaining corporations, 52 were inactive during the year and remaining 133 showed an aggregate gross income of $115,844,000 which, after allowable deductions, left a deficit, for tax purposes, of $10,727,000.

Among the exhibition corporations, 2,177 of the 4,097 reporting showed an aggregate gross income of $472,536,000 and net income of $53,120,000 on which they paid normal taxes of $6,188,000, undistributed profits taxes of $1,057,000 and excess profits taxes of $289,000.

Of the non-taxpaying corporations, 213 were reported inactive and the remaining 1,707 reported an aggregate gross income of $106,335,000, but a deficit of $6,386,000.

In the broadcasting field, 280 out of 548 corporations reported taxable income, having an aggregate gross of $115,534,000 and a net of $19,099,000. They paid $2,651,000 in normal taxes, $379,000 in undistributed profits taxes and $126,000 in excess profits taxes.

Eighty-one companies were inactive and the remaining 187 reported an aggregate gross income of $9,177,000 and a deficit of $1,160,000.

Asks U.S. for Courts "Truce"

The United States Government "should declare a truce in its war against the industry" for the duration of the current European War, Emil K. Ellis, film attorney, suggested at a luncheon of the Motion Picture Associates, in New York's Hotel Astor, on Tuesday.

Mr. Ellis declared the loss of foreign film revenues by American companies was more serious than had been thought, and the industry should have a "breathing spell from harassment."

Warner Brothers and other film company producers of socalled "patriotic" pictures were praised by Mr. Ellis, who is chairman of the Federal Bar Association's Bill of Rights Committee.

Harold Rodner, of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac Lake, N. Y., urged the 130 members to make greater use of the hospital's facilities.

Samuel Rinzler, of the Randforce circuit, of Brooklyn, commended the organization's charities.

Jack Ellis, president, and Morris Sanders, chairman of the committee for the organization's 20th annual ball and dinner on November 25th, also spoke. Also on the dinner committee are Moe Kurtz, co-chairman, Joe Lee, Harry Buxbaum, and Seymour Florin.

REMITTANCE LIMITATION IN BRITAIN SEEN PRELUDE TO QUOTA REVISIONS

Intentions of Government Beyond "Freezing" Revenue in Doubt; Trade Sees Restriction of Film Imports as Possibility

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Confusion in British trade circles over the probable fate of the Quota Act and the Government's intentions regarding the wartime industry has, during the past few days, intensified rather than decreased. Last week's unofficial, but public, announcement of the Treasury's intention to enact remittance restrictions under which 80 per cent of the normal revenue exported by foreign distributors from England would be frozen here, was considered a far from complete and definitive outline of the Government's intended course with regard to the industry.

Further Plans in Doubt

Other than this statement, brief and accompanied only by indications that concessions might be made on contracts undertaken before the war, little concrete has come from Whitehall indicating what is intended concerning existing legislation. A more than vague hint that a suspension of exhibitors' quota is planned, has set the cat among the industry pigeons.

Indication that the remittance restrictions might be a prelude to Quota Act revision was given together with a forecast of those restrictions before their announcement by the Board of Trade's spokesman, Lord Templemore, in the House of Lords on a motion proposed by Lord Strabolgi.

Lord Templemore stated that the Government felt, and that representatives of the industry agreed, that certain provisions of the act might "not be appropriate to wartime conditions," that in view of air raid warnings and restrictions on openings exhibitors might not be able to fulfill their quota. Renters quota would remain. His Lordship expressed a view already expressed in these columns, that the considerable Board of Trade staff might be employed on more urgent matters.

Most ominous, however, of his statements was ". . . in normal times it is estimated that the revenue earned in this country by American films represents an annual outflow of some five or six million pounds sterling. At a time when our foreign exchange resources are of such vital importance, it seems inevitable that means should be found to curtail this expenditure in a drastic manner. The issues raised by this problem are delicate and complicated, and they are being actively considered by the Government at the present time. The action required under this head may well radically alter the position of the film market and thus upset the basis on which the existing acts rest."

Blow to Producers

The statement came as somewhat of a backhander to the producer group here, who the day before had launched a campaign which seemed to have beneath its somewhat complex and contradictory tangle a basis in the belief that the entire Films Act was going to be suspended. Lord Templemore, however, repeated what had been promised by Mr. Stanley four days before and was repeated by his Parliamentary Secretary two days later, that the Government had no intention of amending, altering or suspending the act without consultation with the industry itself and that meanwhile the act was still in force.

Naturally foreign interests here would not take too well to the idea of a Quota being imposed upon them and not on the exhibitors. It is felt that it is illogical to impose production provisions upon the distributor while removing from him the guarantee of an exhibitor market. Conversely it is believed in some circles that the removal of the renters' quota and the maintenance of the exhibitors' quota would stimulate British production.

Import Restriction Feared

Meanwhile the dangers of a limitation of film imports, which Mr. Stanley has had in mind and which he tentatively propounded to the producers, are emphatically before the minds of all sections of the industry on this side. Now that the tentative plan for remittance limitation has been announced, foreign producer-distributors and exhibitors are much alarmed. It is admitted that Hollywood pictures are the commercial basis of the British industry, and there are no two views that the theory that British producers would be able to make up the footage deficit in British films is fantastic.

The Treasury, it is clear, had for some time determined that a restriction of film imports and a limitation of remittances abroad should be introduced. The intentions were financial rather than commercial, and aimed at restricting the flow of monies abroad and the preservation of British currency from depreciation. Films would be but one of many commodities so affected. Precisely what portion of film imports Mr. Stanley would restrict is not clear. An unconfirmed figure, for it was used as an example in informal conversation with the producers, puts it as a reduction from 500 to 125. Inasmuch as the annual turnover to the U. S. industry for films imported here is approximately $30,000,000, such a figure would reduce the turnover to $7,500,000.

Apart from the fact that this figure would mean, if renters' quota was retained, that British film producers would need to make no more than 25/28 X by £15,000 (the minimum quota cost), it is felt by American interests that with so paltry a market left to them they would be justified in asking to be relieved from their quota commitments. From the producers' point of view the situation would be no better, it is felt, for none but "quickies" would be wanted, nor, for that matter, could they stand up against the supers the U. S. producer-distributors would import to Britain in order to extract the utmost from the market.

Americans Attacked

A certain bitterness against the American producer-distributors was notable in the trade discussion anent the restrictions. The Board of Trade was accused of giving access to foreign producers before British producers, and telling them of their intentions. The KRS came in for some backhanders, lamentation being expressed that if British producers had the resources of that august body, they might have been able to buy space in the press. American producers were criticized for abandoning their production plans here, it being alleged that they had immediate inside knowledge of what the Government intended to do. Distributors were accused of transferring their quota productions made for one period to a later period on the assumption that they would not be penalized.

A limitation of imports, either by legislative means or as a result of commercial circumstances, is not absent from the minds of British exhibitors. It has greatly colored their reactions to, and policy in respect of, picture house programs. A first move on the part of Odeon resulted in the institution of a single feature program and two-hour show throughout the entire chain. The move was shortlived and Odeon has already reverted to double features. In CEA circles, however, actually in the General Council itself, the matter has been discussed. Before the Council during discussion was the prospect that the near future might see a depletion in the number of foreign films imported, with consequent need for adjusting picture theatre programs. John Maxwell's circuit had decided against single features, and Mr. Maxwell himself has dismissed it as "wartime profiteering." A general discussion in the CEA must be precluded by agreement among the circuits. Meanwhile, branches are likely to discuss the matter, but consideration may, in the not far distant future, be instituted on a general basis.

Profiteering Charged

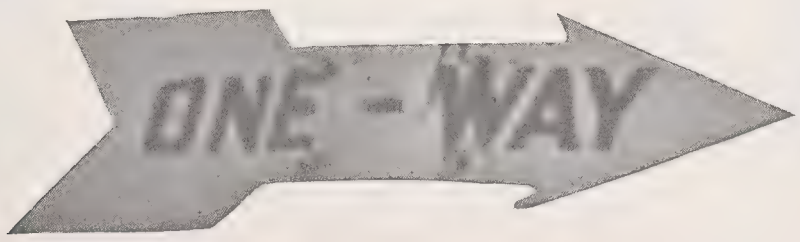
Already such epithets as "profiteering" have been bandied around in national press circles, not only because of talk of single feature programs, but because of the CEA policy on the abolition of bargain matinee prices. Even Parliament itself found the matter being raised by the Labor member for Hull Central, who, under the impression that seats had been raised from 50 to 100 per cent in price, asked if Government powers should not be taken to prevent hardships being inflicted upon the poorer sections of the people. Fortunately Sir John Anderson, aware of the circumstances, was able to pour oil upon the troubled waters of St. Stephens, and point out that it was merely a case of the cinemas in Hull, as elsewhere, being unable to afford the reduction of cheap seats at afternoon shows.

Unenlightened and misguided national press sensation-mongering has tended to exploit the misunderstanding by suggesting that cinemas have put up their prices since the War.

The motion picture industry has long been one singled out here to carry special burdens. Wartime is no exception. Exhibitors have been asked in various military centers to charge specially low rates for soldiers. Unwilling to place themselves in a unique position in this regard, they have expressed their regret in being unable to do so, but are willing to provide as many sixpenny seats for soldiers as possible.

U. S. TRADE PROTESTS BRITISH MONEY BAR

American distributors were conferring on both sides of the Atlantic this week on a series of proposals to be made to the British Government designed to counteract the effect of Great Britain's announced intention to retain 80 per cent of the normal remittances exported by American distributors to their home offices.



It is expected that the proposals will be presented to the British Government in the near future. The plan was developed following the meeting of American distributor representatives last week with officials of the British Board of Trade at which the intention to impose remittance restrictions was announced to the trade.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Lull

With most companies already having completed, or having in work, enough pictures to meet release dates until well into 1940, there was comparatively little new production in the Columbus Day week. Six pictures were started; nine were finished. All the new work is concerned with dramatic subjects. There is more variety in the completed quota, where a musical, an historical and a comedy appear among the melodramatic features.

Universal Starts Pair

Two pictures were started at Universal. "No Power on Earth" will feature Victor McLaglen and Jackie Cooper with Ona Munson and Peggy Moran. Vincent Price, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nan Grey and John Sutton head the "Invisible Man Returns" cast.

Columbia's new entry is "Gun Lord of the Frontier," a western, in which Bill Elliott, Linda Winters, Dub Taylor and Stanley Brown will be seen.

"The Earl of Chicago," originally scheduled for production in England, went before the cameras at MGM. It will feature Robert Montgomery, Reginald Owen, Edward Arnold and Ronald Sinclair.

A "Three Mesquiteers" feature, "Cowboys from Texas," began at Republic. Robert Livingston, Duncan Renaldo and Raymond Hatton are the principals.

May Robson Heads Cast

At Warners "Granny Get Your Gun" was started. It will feature May Robson, Harry Davenport and Hardy Albright.

Three of the nine completed productions are credited to RKO-Radio. The studio finished "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "Legion of the Lawless," a George O'Brien feature. For the company's release, Sol Lesser finished "Escape to Paradise" in which Bob Breen is starred.

Two pictures were checked off the active list at 20th Century-Fox. "Swanee River" is a part biography of Stephen Foster, and "The Adventurer" is a "Cisco Kid" story.

"Blondie Brings Up Baby," a series picture, was finished at Columbia. For Paramount, Harry Sherman completed "Gun Chores," a "Hopalong Cassidy" adventure.

Hal Roach finished the John Steinbeck story, "Of Mice and Men," and Warners wound up "Invisible Stripes."

Short Subjects

Short subject production in Hollywood is now receiving more attention than it has for some years. At practically all studios where shorts are made, the departments are gearing themselves to meet any demands. While no feature shortage is anticipated, there nevertheless is a feeling that the coming winter and spring will bring an unusual demand for shorts.

Among the influences concentrating attention on short production is the great success of the early reels in "Hollywood Cavalcade," which take spectators back to the days of Mack Sennett's Keystone Kops, Bathing Beauties and pie throwers. According to Fred S. Quimby, MGM short subjects executive, this public approval is a demonstration that the public is in the mood for broad slapstick amusement, done in one and two reels and with a speed impracticable in feature production.

While MGM will continue its program of 74 one-reelers and seven two-reelers, there is a possibility that these will be increased by three specials. One of these will be "The Flag Speaks," a patriotic subject which the American Legion requested of the industry and which MGM was selected to produce.

Warner Brothers has transferred all short subject production to the Burbank studios. With Gordon Hollingshead in charge, all the band and music subjects which had been made in New York have been dropped. The patriotic shorts, which have been the program's leaders, will be expanded, and stories for seven of these, which will go into production shortly, have been prepared. At Universal plans are under consideration to increase the short subject program with a new series of musical two-reelers as well as others with stage, radio and picture personalities.

Including six for Leon Errol, six for Edgar Kennedy and four Ray Whitley's, RKO-Radio's short subjects department, which is in charge of Bert Gilroy, does not plan any expansion just now, but Jules White is of the opinion that Columbia's short subject producers readily can readjust their schedules to accommodate any increased demands.

MGM NOW HAS 100 "STUDENTS" IN FIELD

With 14 "students" in the field or the company's exchanges, who have been receiving training from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the past year or so, preparatory to taking up permanent posts as bookers or salesmen, it was estimated this week by William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, that in the last 10 years approximately 100 men had been placed through this method.

Started by Mr. Rodgers when he was eastern district sales manager, the "student" plan has embraced young men from all walks of life.

SMPE, IN WORLD'S FAIR SETTING, DRAWS 300 AT RECORD CONVENTION

Progress Medal Is Presented to Dr. Loyd A. Jones; Journal Award for Best Technical Paper Goes to Kalmus

by GEORGE SCHUTZ
Editor of BETTER THEATRES

With the World's Fair always available as an added attraction on the program in Manhattan and environs, the fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, held at the Hotel Pennsylvania from Monday through Thursday, enjoyed its biggest draw in years. Nearly 300 members and their guests were registered.

First Days at Fair

Except for the inaugural luncheon, and the reading of a few papers Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning, the convention veritably moved out to Flushing Meadow the first two days of the meeting, witnessing demonstrations of television and "three-dimension" motion pictures Monday evening, and seeing the sights Tuesday afternoon. At the semi-annual banquet Wednesday evening, Dr. Loyd A. Jones of the Eastman Kodak Laboratories received this year's SMPE Progress Award, while the SMPE Journal Award for the best technical paper published in the year was presented to Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president of the Technicolor Corporation. (Pictures in Pictorial Section).

The convention was presided over by E. A. Williford of the National Carbon Company, president of the society. Of two-year tenure, his office did not figure in this fall's elections, which returned A. S. Dickinson to the financial vice-presidency, and J. Frank, Jr., to the post of secretary. The poll also named D. E. Hyndman engineering vice-president, and R. O. Strock treasurer, while A. C. Hardy, Herbert Griffin and Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith were elected to the board of governors.

Doctor Goldsmith, past-president of the society, made the presentation of the Progress Medal to Mr. Jones, which was, according to the citation, "in recognition of the outstanding character of his scientific researches in the field of photography, with particular reference to his investigations of sensitometric procedures," and also for related work in photographic methods and standardization.

The award to Doctor Kalmus, who received last year's Progress Award, was made by E. P. Curtis of Eastman.

Special Session on Projection

Of the two dozen papers read before this convention, all but a few reported results of researches, particularly in photography and sound, of a highly technical character; however, a special session was held Tuesday on practical projection affairs. Papers ranged from a discussion of the projectionist's responsibilities to exhibitor and patrons, by J. R. Prater, projectionist of the Congress theatre in Palouse, Wash.; to one in which Doctor Goldsmith described the broadening scope of projection resulting from technical refinements in the motion picture, from color films, and possibly also from television. F. H. Richardson read a paper urging fuller recognition of the critical position of the projection craft in motion picture processes.

Of immediate significance to theatre operators was the scheme developed in a paper by Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect and chairman of the SMPE Committee on Theatre Construction, in which he proposed the use of the screen light for auditorium illumination, confining additional lighting provisions to secondary sources in the standee and similar areas, without involving the main surfaces of the auditorium. The method would include elimination of the screen masking and formation and finishing of the auditorium walls and ceiling so as to control the reflection of the screen light.

PAUL TERRY OBSERVES DOUBLE ANNIVERSARY

Paul H. Terry, producer of Terrytoons, on Monday observed a double anniversary. The day was his 25th anniversary as a cartoonist and the 10th birthday of Terrytoons, cartoon comedies. Before becoming a motion picture cartoonist Mr. Terry was a cartoonist on several newspapers.

The cartoon producer this season will release 26 subjects through Twentieth Century-Fox, 10 of them in color.

"Three Dimension" Display

The demonstration of "three dimension" pictures at the Fair was essentially that which has been conducted throughout the period of the exposition in the Chrysler exhibit building. J. A. Norling of Loucks & Norling explained the process, which employs the double-lens method producing two images spaced in conformance with the distance between the eyes, and viewing through polarizing spectacles which join the two images.

Another demonstration was that of the "Vocoder," called a big brother to the "Voder," or mechanical speech producing mechanism, which latter has been a feature of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company exhibit at the fair. The "Vocoder," which was shown at the Engineering Societies Building under the direction of Homer Dudley of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, is a telephonic device by which a person's voice may be reproduced with vastly different qualities, making a man's voice, for example, sound like a woman's. Practically any effect is possible regardless of the actuating voice. The device was first demonstrated publicly last spring.

Other Papers

Papers at other sessions were "Artificial Reverberation for Motion Picture Studios," by P. C. Goldmark and P. S. Hendricks; "Photographic Duping of Variable-Area Sound," by F. W. Roberts and E. Taenzer; "A Sound-Track Center-Line Measuring Device," by F. W. Roberts and H. R. Cooke, Jr.; "Television Control Equipment for Film Transmission," by R. L. Campbell; "Considerations Relating to Warbled Frequency Films," by E. S. Seeley; "A Transmission System of Narrow Band-Width for Animated Line Images," by A. M. Skellett; "Science and the Motion Picture," by H. Roger; "Some Industrial Applications of Current 16-mm. Sound Motion Picture Equipment," by W. H. Offenhauser, Jr., and F. H. Hargrove; "Lenses for Amateur Motion Picture Equipment," by R. Kingslake; "Tape Splicers for Film Developing Machines," by J. G. Capstaff and J. S. Beggs; "An Investigation of the Ground-Noise of Photographic Sound Prints," by O. Sandvik and W. K. Grimwood; and a description by Douglas L. Baxter of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, of the recent work of that organization in developing a library of films.

Other papers read were "Large Size Hand-Rotating High-Intensity Carbon and Application to Motion Picture Projector," by E. B. Joy, W. W. Lozier and R. Simon; "Optical Control of Wave Shape and Amplitude Characteristics in Variable Density Recording," by G. L. Gilmick; "A New Non-Intermittent Motion Picture Projector," by F. Ehrenhaft and F. G. Back; "Development and Application of the Triple-Head Background Projector," by B. Atkins and "New High-Quality Sound System" by George Friedl, Jr., H. Barnett and E. J. Shortt.

In one of the papers read by representatives of studio technical staffs, L. L. Ryder, of the Paramount sound department, said that development in both sound recording and reproduction would ultimately create greater intimacy between the audience and the dramatic action of the screen. Admitting that he did not know now how this improvement might be achieved, he urged that efforts be directed along these lines so that there could be effective coordination of story construction and sound to achieve a new personality in motion pictures.

Following Monday's luncheon, S. S. Stevens of Harvard University talked on the extent to which distortion within the ear influences our ability to determine actual distortion in the reproduced sound of motion pictures.

LaGuardia and Van Schmus

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of Radio City Music Hall, were principal speakers at the luncheon. In welcoming the engineers, the mayor urged the motion picture industry to quit Hollywood and return to New York, "where it started from." He said this would be feasible, since New York had all essential location material, and "most of the shooting today is indoors anyway."

Mr. Van Schmus, describing the horrors he suffers when the sound quivers or stops altogether, thanked the engineers for making these awful moments in his life extremely rare.

Another luncheon speaker, besides President Williford, was Congressman Bruce Barton, who pointed out the effect that films and radio had had on advertising, making the picture and the caption more important.

Committees in charge of the convention were:

Disputed Passage

(Paramount)

Personal Drama

Quite a few things of exploitation consequence present themselves to showmen who soon will be busy building a market for Paramount's "Disputed Passage." The photoplay is founded on a Lloyd C. Douglas novel. Like his other writings, especially "The Magnificent Obsession" and "Green Light", both earlier brought to the screen, it is a seriously premised story, which although tensely melodramatic is also warmly human. The whole appeal is directed toward the sympathetic emotions. It was directed by Frank Borzage, who from the original "Seventh Heaven" has demonstrated ability to bring out such type material as is included in this Douglas story with potent force and understanding realism.

While several are concerned in the narration, the novel's substance is sincerely brought to screen being by three players—Akim Tamiroff, John Howard and Dorothy Lamour. The three, individually or collectively, appear in almost every scene, and they are given commendable support by William Collier, Sr., Judith Barrett, Victor Varconi, Gordon Jones, Keye Luke, Elisabeth Risdon and Gaylord Pendleton.

In theme the story is a drama of mental conflict and devotion to an ideal. A great doctor "Forster," a scientific atheist, chooses a medical student, "Beaven," as the most promising student to follow in his footsteps. Their mutual hatred is grim and bitter, yet all "Forster's browbeating cannot quench "Beaven's" determined spirit. But then "Beaven" commits what "Forster" considers the greatest sin. He falls in love with a patient, "Audrey Hilton," an American orphan, born in China and reared in Chinese culture. The affection severs mentor-student relations. The locale shifts to war-torn China. "Beaven," searching for "Audrey," is dangerously injured. "Foster" rushes half way across the world to perform an operation that saves the life of a lad whom he hated, yet loved.

While the full force and meaning of Douglas' story was brought to the screen by the sincerely convincing and intelligent manner in which Anthony Veiller and Sheridan Gibney adapted it, the exceptional character performance which Tamiroff gives and the inspired manner in which Howard and Miss Lamour (assaying her first real dramatic role) went about their work endows the production with a strange attractiveness which higher class audiences quickly should appreciate and which should impress the masses pointedly.

Previewed at the Village Theatre, Hollywood. While several things happened whereby the audience was excited, notably Tamiroff's grim characterization, the manner in which Howard fenced with him and the beating which Pendleton dished out to Tamiroff as well as the sequences devoted to action in China, the crowd, for the most part, watched the picture in silence. The applause at the conclusion indicated that it had seen a worthwhile attraction. —Gus McCarthy.

At the Circus

(MGM)

Comedy

When all is added up, and one need not be far advanced in arithmetic to find the sum, "At the Circus," the once-a-year Marx Brothers' appearance, totals three entertainment items which, perforce, are also the production's exploitation assets. The first factor is typical Marx comedy. Number 2 is typical Kenny Baker singing; number 3 is a typical Hollywood romance.

The first unit is so much the larger in the scheme of things that it makes up about 99.44 per cent. of the whole. As a matter of fact, the others seem to have crawled in when someone happened to remember that they originally had been part of Mervyn LeRoy's production plan, including the Irving Brecher screen play which Edward Buzzell was directing.

The story is of minor significance but the music occupies a few spotlight moments. The plot has to do with a circus manager, strong man and midget stealing the owner's bankroll, how it is recovered, how the owner is encouraged to keep on loving his girl and how he is reinstated in his dowager aunt's good graces. On that slim framework are hung as many Marx gags as there are lights and ornaments on a Christmas tree.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal. Anyone experienced with previous pictures featuring these comedians can figure out very easily just what to expect from the rank and file public.—G. M.

Meet Doctor Christian

(RKO Radio)

Character Comedy-Drama

This first of three scheduled productions by William Stephens and Howard Lang based on the radio-popularized character of Dr. Christian, small town general practitioner, is a promiseful beginning. Jean Hersholt, who plays the title role in the film as in the radio programs, is a natural for the character and the film's most valuable asset.

Mr. Hersholt portrays a benevolently improvident small town doctor beloved of all his fellow townsmen but in distress at this stage of his activities because the town's overly efficient big business man, whom the doctor manages to get elected to the mayoralty, opposes his plans for building a needed hospital. Conversion of the mayor to the doctor's point of view follows an operation by which the physician saves the life of the mayor's daughter. Much incident, both humorous and dramatic, intervenes.

Performances of other players are adequate. The screen play by Ian McLellan Hunter, Ring Lardner, Jr., and Harvey Gates, based on Mr. Gates' story, reflects considerable familiarity with small town life and human equations. Bernard Vorhaus' direction properly favors the star. Production is by Mr. Stephens, with Monroe Shaff in association.

Previewed at the RKO-Hill Street theatre, Los Angeles, on a Friday evening to a metropolitan audience which had come in to see "Nurse Edith Cavell" and "The Day the Bookies Wept" and seemed to find "Meet Doctor Christian" satisfactory.—William R. Weaver.

The Roaring Twenties

(Warner Brothers)

Melodramatic History

One of the most lawless eras of American history in which a portion of the nation's inhabitants violated two federal laws and a much larger portion condoned the action—is told in Warners' "The Roaring Twenties," a saga of prohibition and gangsterism. Many gangster pictures have been made, but here is an attempt to weave a combination of the actual history of the times with a story made up, as the foreword says, of actual incidents portrayed by composites of actual characters.

The preview audience found it exciting, and evenly leavened with comedy and melodrama. Bursts of applause greeted the popular songs of the era and at conclusion the picture was given an ovation.

In addition to these exploitation possibilities, there are James Cagney, in one of his better roles, and Priscilla Lane, who is given ample opportunity to bring back memories with the musical numbers. They are supported by Humphrey Bogart, Gladys George, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh, Paul Kelly, Elizabeth Risdon, Ed Keane, Joe Sawyer, Joseph Crehan, George Meeker, John Hamilton, Robert Elliott, Eddie Chandler, Max Wagner and Vera Lewis.

Mark Hellinger, chronicler extraordinary of Broadway, wrote the original story, admitting that actual events and persons were used. Jerry Wald, Richard Macaulay and Robert Rossen turned out the script, an exceptional job. Raoul Walsh, faced with telling a portion of the screen offering in a March of Time effect to contrast the plot's rise to its climax, made the most of his opportunities.

Samuel Bischoff was associate producer under Hal B. Wallis.

The story begins with the return of American soldiers from France, taking the chief figure, "Bartlett," to the head of a bootleg ring and to his death.

Previewed at the Warners Hollywood Theatre, Hollywood, to reactions noted above.—V. K.

The Kansas Terrors

(Republic)

Western in the West Indies

Republic's "Three Mesquiteers"—here Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo—restore social justice to the inhabitants of a Caribbean island in the actionful "The Kansas Terrors."

Livingston, a member of the "Mesquiteers" when it was originated in 1937, is "Stoney Brooke," a Kansas cowboy bringing a shipment of horses to a small island. Accompanying him is "Rusty Joslin" (Hatton). Traveling to the barracks the two Americans are set upon by a band of "outlaws" led by "Renaldo."

"Renaldo" reveals that the Commandante has been using his power to oppress the people by taxing them far beyond their ability to pay, then taking their goods or jailing them.

The governor general is shot to death while "Stoney," masked, is talking with him. The governor's daughter believes the Masked Rider responsible, and causes the capture of "Renaldo." When he is doomed to the firing squad, the girl informs the Americans, and is imprisoned. Her release and "Renaldo's" rescue are effected by "Stony" and "Rusty."

Previewed in a projection room in New York.—WALTER SELDEN.

Produced and distributed by Republic, Associate producer, Harry Grey. Directed by George Sherman. Screen play by Jack Natteford and Betty Burbridge. Original story by Luci Ward. Based on characters created by William Colt MacDonald. Production manager, Al Wilson. Photographed by Ernest Miller. Film Editor, Tony Martinelli. Musical score by William Lava. P. C. A. Rasputin

(Concord Films)

Baur as the "Mad Monk"

Considered by many France's finest character actor, the heavy-set Harry Baur with his rather brooding facial features is a "natural" for the role of the Siberian peasant, Gregori Rasputin, history's "mad monk" and "holy devil." Baur turns in one of his finest performances.

The story of Rasputin is not pleasant and the film is for adults. To quote from the program notes at the 55th Street Playhouse where the film was seen: "He (Rasputin) preached his gospel of lust and love from the steps of Russia's Imperial throne—and practiced what he preached." The film, in French but having English subtitles, follows by seven years the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "Rasputin and the Empress," which starred the three Barrymores, Ethel, John and Lionel.

Baur hasn't an Ethel or John in support as Lionel did, but the cast is able nevertheless. Jean Worms seems especially suited for the role of Czar Nicholas. Marcelle Chantal is the Czarina, Pierre Richard Willm is "Count Igor Kourloff," Carine Nelson plays "Ania Kitina" and Denis d'Ines is Bishop Gregorian.

In Baur's characterization Rasputin is at one moment the personification of good and at the next the epitome of evil. At the end the two sides of the man have been about evenly emphasized, if such a thing is possible.

Reviewed at the 55th Street Playhouse, New York. A good sized audience on opening day gave ample evidence that it liked the Baur performance.—P. C. M., Jr.

Distributed by Concord Films. A Max Glass Production. Directed by Marcel L'Herbier. From the novel "Tragedie Imperiale" by Alfred Neumann. Original music score by Darius Milhaud. La Noche de los Maxas

(The Night of the Mayas)

(Fama Production)

Yucatan Tragedy

Though this deftly done story is a tragedy, in that its principals all die or come to grief, it is a tragedy of the classic Grecian sort, with light, keen Gallic touches. It is a fascinating, human but not horror story, a splendid tale of proud but primitive folk in the torrid jungles of Yucatan state, in thin touch with civilization yet clinging to the manners of their ancestors of 2,000 years ago, the Mayas, builders of a mighty empire that extended from Panama to Mexico. The persons of this story are not cavemen. They have much refinement and are good looking, though of rather Oriental cast. Types have

The production should be easy for American exhibitors to exploit because of the interest north of the Rio Grande in research by the Carnegie Institute in Yucatan, that dramatic delving into one of the most interesting pasts of America. The Institute, in fact, contributed to the making of this picture, a masterpiece of Fama. The story, by Antonio Mediz Bolio, an authority on Mayan lore, is simple but poignant.

When the headman of the hamlet fails to break a long drought, the whisper that "Lol" has sinned with the white man becomes a roar. Then "Zeb" gets tangled up in the general rage.

"Uz" stalks the white man and "Lol" through the jungles. He kills the white man. "Lol" reaches the dreaded sacrificial well at Chichen Itza, down which, thousands of years ago, the old Mayas tossed their prettiest girls to pacify the gods, and plunges to her death.

There is good comedy relief. Haunting melodies, based upon old Maya music, composed by Cornelio Cardenas, run through the picture most effectively. Camera work and sound are excellent.

Reviewed at the select Cine Teatro Alameda, Mexico City, before a capacity audience, including many from the United States and other countries. The reception was enthusiastic. Many applauded at the end of the picture.—JAMES LOCKHART, in Mexico City.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

Natural Wonders of Washington State
(MGM)
Color Traveltalk

This FitzPatrick Traveltalk shows in color the arresting scenery of the State of Washington. Rock formations, that tell a story to the geologist but are beautiful to anyone, are the first natural wonders seen. Then the camera takes us on a tour of the snow capped mountains and swift running streams which give Washington panoramas that rival Switzerland's. Winter sports at Mt. Rainer National Park in summertime and in summer costume, are introduced. The final scene is particularly striking: the rays of the rising sun slowly lighting a snow-clad mountain.—Running time, ten minutes.

Fashion Forecast No. 5
(20th Century-Fox)
Milady's Styles

Mink is still in style if one can afford it, and hats, well, imagine a turquoise blue plume on dark green felt modeled in front of a background of tangerine, tulle and gold spangles. But regardless of how the new season fashions will look on average America they are something to see on "America's most beautiful models." Filmed in excellent color and staged as handsomely as the others in this series by Vyvyan Donner, the subject should appeal to both men and women, that is the ladies should enjoy gazing at the new ensembles and the men probably will enjoy gazing at the girls. Described by Ilka Chase in her inimitable manner. Running time, 10 minutes.

Getting Your Money's Worth, #3
(Lenauer International)
Consumer Research Material

The third and current lecture has for its subject used car buying, and purports to reveal racket practices of some dealers. The sound and sensible tips more than make up for the generally poor technical composition of the subject, and should find a ready hearing and viewing from all auto customers, actual or prospective.—Running time, one reel.

The Story of Elias Howe
(Columbia)
Historical Subject

Elias Howe is known to many as the inventor of the sewing machine but that is about all they know about him. Here is a biographical sketch of the inventor from the time he started work on the invention that was to revolutionalize the garment trade and make less work for mother until he, in 1854, was established as the inventor of the sewing machine by the courts in one of the patent wars of history. Richard Fiske and Lucille Brown portray the Howes. Lindsay MacHarrie is the commentator.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 66
(Universal)
Interesting "Believe It or Nots"

A gallery of strange fads and fancies are lined up in this latest installment from the Stranger Than Fiction collection of oddities. The initial example offers the sad story of a rabid fisherman who, forbidden the pleasure of his hobby because of illness, goes about sensibly satisfying his urge for the rod and reel sport by collecting a wide assortment of fishing equipment. Following this demonstration of a "hobby with a heartache" comes the story of a gentleman who has fashioned for himself a miniature circus, complete from the band wagon to an assorted array of animals. Additional instances of out of the ordinary hobby and personality performances include the woman from Seattle who has cultivated the habit of making scrapbooks on President Roosevelt's newspaper publicity, a filling station operator from Little Rock who has tamed a quail, and an Oklahoma City youth, blessed with an enormous cavity for a mouth, who obligingly mouths pool balls, eggs and his own fist. The contents of the subject should keep the audience alternately amused and interested.—Running time, nine minutes.

The Evergreen Empire
(20th Century-Fox)
Magic Carpet Trek

The verdant title and complimentary comments in Lowell Thomas' commentary are directed to the state of Washington. From the sea coast city of Seattle to the depths of the locality's mammoth forests, the tour of the land is interesting and instructive, particularly of the lumber and salmon industry. Shown also is the novel method the governmental agencies have devised to meet the problem of salmon blocked from making their way up the river for the spawning season by the construction of the Grand Coulee Dam. Pictorial material of mother nature and a bevy of her daughters skiing down the snowy sides of Mt. Rainier offers some exceptional eye appeal. Camerawork is all together superior.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Think Fast
(MGM)
Crime-Doesn't-Pay Number

A sobering screen sermon is sounded in this number of the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series. Particularly directed to the frivolous young things who yearn for silks and satins and are not too scrupulous in the way in which they obtain their hearts' desire, this semi-judicial lesson is mature material well worth some thought by any audience of whatever age, inclination and social status. Two young girls, dissatisfied with their vocations of hash slingers, are easy catches for a female Fagin who initiates the women into a career of shoplifting. Eventually, they are caught and given jail sentences after experiencing some strenuous moments with murder, the underworld and the law. Swiftly paced with a star studded cast comprising Laraine Day, Ann Morriss, Jo Ann Sayers, Marc Lawrence and Sara Haden, the subject is stimulating and entertaining material for screen and social service consumption.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Vincent Lopez and His Orchestra
(Vitaphone)
Melody Master

The twinkling fingers of pianist Vincent Lopez, the singing of Betty Hutton, the whistling of a member of the Lopez troupe and the playing and singing of the orchestra all contribute to the enjoyment of this Melody Master subject. It opens on a typical Lopez note, with the orchestra leader playing "Nola," while the orchestra moans and groans, "Nola" being Lopez's most often played tune. A cowboy song "Ride, Tenderfoot Ride," in which a group of cowboy-attired vocalists are featured and "Old Man Mose," played in the jitterbug tradition and sung by Miss Hutton, round out the subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Day of Rest
(MGM)
Benchley Fun

Robert Benchley tells and illustrates how the "Day of Rest" should not be spent. The audience gets frequent opportunities to laugh at the Benchley antics. The man rises at his accustomed hour and can find no rest all day. The maid with the vacuum-cleaner and the children playing outside make rest impossible. Gardening, cleaning the attic, picnicking and athletics all prove to be the wrong way to rest. Just as Benchley finds a place to rest—alone—in the garden, the whole neighborhood descends on him.—Running time, ten minutes.

Ride, Cowboy, Ride
(Vitaphone)
Featurette

A Featurette, this subject has everything of a feature production except length. It is a western, photographed in color, and details the adventures of an eastern bred girl who is on her way west to join her mother. Her stage coach is held up en route, which helps to confirm her opinion that the West is uncouth, but the crowning disappointment to the girl is the discovery that her mother is "Cactus Kate," a saloon keeper. The town is raided the same night by bandits but they are repulsed by the heroism of cowboys led by Dennis Morgan. The girl changes her mind about the West, especially as it concerns the cowboy leader. Besides Morgan the cast includes Maris Wrixon, Cliff Edwards, George Reeves, Frank Wilcox and Esther Howard. Directed by George Amy.—Running time, 20 minutes.

The Aghileen Pinnacles
(20th Century-Fox)
Fr. Hubbard's Alaskan Adventure

Episode two of the Father Hubbard travels into the icy lands of Alaska brings out as much entertainment and educational value as was displayed in the initial number, "The Birthplace of Icebergs." This time the Glacier Priest is investigating a range of snow capped peaks and his quest is mapped out along a pictorial and exciting route. There are a bit of a fierce Northern gale, a dip into one of the curious hot water holes of the countryside, and some thrilling moments of mountain climbing. Further entertainment material is offered by the dogs accompanying the party and particularly a litter of pups. The photographic quality of the screen expedition is practically perfect. For all who prefer the different in the way of a travelogue, this subject is ready made screen material.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Ash Can Fleet
(MGM)
Maritime Miniature

Concerned with material that is substantially the same as has been given feature length treatment in the current production, "Thunder Afloat," this miniature briefly outlines the beginnings of the oddly named maritime division known as the "Ash Can Fleet." Opening with a sequence that pictures an interview held with General Von Hindenburg and the voicing of the testimonial by the German army official that the one man most responsible for the Fatherland's defeat was David Bushnell, an American from the Revolutionary War days. For it is to this little known individual that credit must go for pioneering in underwater craft. He was the father of the submarine and he invented the use of gunpowder for undersea combat. From his start came the development of a fleet of little wooden boats, the "Ash Can Fleet," which during the last war became effective submarine chasers and blockade busters. The exhibition of the short should increase interest in a more extended treatment of the field, as detailed in the feature production, but in any event it is well able to offer a bit of education and entertainment on its own screening time.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Set 'Em Up
(MGM)
Pete Smith Specialty

After five years, Pete Smith devotes another short subject to bowling. In "Set 'Em Up" the whole family, including Pop, Mom, Willie, Mary, Grandma and "Butch," the boy friend, try their hand at the pastime. Ned Day, American match-play champion, does the coaching and shows them how it is done. After the family have done their best, Andy Varipapa, world's greatest trick bowler, makes the ball do unbelievable tricks.—Running time, ten minutes.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

As if Paramount Pictures and its colleague majors aren't having enough trouble, what with anti-trust suits pending on all sides, labor arguments threatening on at least six sides, high-salaried talent refusing to go along with their producers' retrenchments to make up for falling foreign grosses—all of which, and much more, receives wide public attention in the press—Dorothy Lamour has put her Paramount employer on the spot in no less a place than the wires of the United Press with a big beef because they won't supply her with a sarong that'll stay up—a skidless sarong.

"It would seem to me," she said to the reporters, "that in a company as big as Paramount there should be somebody who could design a skidless sarong."

She explained that her current sarong consists of one square yard of maroon silk, which wraps around her tightly and depends for its anchorage upon one hook and eye. When it is wrapped too tightly she cannot breathe. When it is wrapped loosely it feels dangerous. And when she dives into the water—as she frequently has to—the hook invariably parts company from the eye. When that happens she has to stay under water until she can effect repairs.

"A couple of days ago I nearly drowned," she gurgled.

Miss Lamour's troubles, she believes, stem from a modern technological improvement by Hollywood, insufficiently thought out.

"The original sarong as worn by the native girls in the South Sea Islands," Miss Lamour said, "was made of cotton cloth and held up by a solid, secure knot."

Paramount Pictures, Inc., ditched cotton and substituted silk on the theory that it would cling closer.

The sarong specialists also discarded the knot which was bulky, and replaced it with the hook and the eye. But in sacrificing strength for streamlining they found, as did so many other industrialists before them, that they had lost security. And what's strength without security?

Mr. R. W. Russell, of the Palace theatre in Canton, Ohio, got attention of a sort for his playing of "Bachelor Mother" by inserting an advertisement in the local press inviting townsfolk to write in an answer to the question: "What is a Bachelor Mother?" The replies make for some rather spicy reading, but the postal law, for one, prevents their publication.

There's a theatre in a small Ohio town, reports Milton Stout, which boasts as a steady patron a certain little old lady. Stout had many times noticed her, and had wondered why she went to the movies practically every night. What was even queerer, he noticed that she always paid her way in for the first night of an engagement, and after that was allowed to walk in free.

"You see," explained the cashier, "the old lady lives alone and her rooms are right over a bowling alley. She can't ever get to sleep until midnight on account of the noise; so every night she comes and sleeps in the theatre until we close. We charge her for the first night of a picture. The rest of the run she's a guest."

A newspaper man in Hollywood submitted a set of questions to Ralph Richardson, film player in London and judging from some of the answers, as set down in a piece of publicity by London's Alexander Korda Productions, it is hard to determine on which side of the Atlantic the laughter is supposed to come.

Some of the choice ones:

> Q. How, briefly, would you describe yourself, presuming you were attempting to win a film contract by mail? A. I can make myself useful about the place.
> Q. What interested you particularly about your role in "Four Feathers"? A. It was a job.
> Q. What does an English film star such as yourself do in his daily life? A. Mostly try to get sleep.

A steady stream of film hopefuls, totaling more than 500 before the day was over, stormed Suite 850 in the Baker Hotel, Dallas, the other Sunday, when E. B. Coleman, MGM public relations director for the district, held preliminary interviews prior to the coming to Dallas of Billy Grady, Metro's head talent scout.

Although the age limits were set as 15 to 30 years, the urge to win fame and fortune via movies brought out all types, and the ages ran from 11 to 75 years. Some were accompanied by mamma, others came on their own. Blondes, brunettes, redheads, tall girls, short ones, fat and lean, boys of high school age, others out of college, they all came knocking at the gates. One young man said "the desire to act has been gnawing within for several years" and he had to do something about it. A young woman said her husband had insisted she come because he thought she should either do something about her dramatic urge or get it out of her system. One sweet 15-year-old thing, when told to bring a photograph, asked Mr. Coleman if he wanted her face.

Hitler—Beast of Berlin

(Producers Pictures Corp.)

Topical Melodrama

The topical nature of this production, rather than the screen importance of the persons featured, looms as the selling approach for "Hitler—Beast of Berlin." It is described by the producer, Ben Judell, as "an eloquent and timely pictorial drama of courageous German humanity struggling with true patriotic zeal under the iron heel of Nazi despotism." Mr. Judell further says that it will be a sincere, unbiased and accurate reply to the question on everybody's lips at this critical period in world affairs. Not a newsreel, not propaganda nor hate inspired, it will propose the question: "Are all the German people solidly behind Hitler?"

The basis of the story is Shepard Traube's novel, "Goose Step." This was adapted by a corps of screen playwrights and is being directed by Sherman Scott.

The principal name players will be Roland Drew, Steffi Duna, Greta Granstedt and Alan Ladd. There are 30 speaking parts in the large cast and among the more familiar personalities are Lucien Prival, Vernon Dent, George Rosener, Bodil Rosing, Hans Joby, Dick Wessel, Paul Panzer and Frederik Vogeding.

Briefly, the story has to do with the startling adventures of an heroic little group banded in opposition to Nazism. The hero, though he has a chance to escape with his wife, elects to remain in Germany as the present war starts and try again to save the fatherland from disaster.

Release date: Oct. 22, 1939.

(Paramount)

Comedy

Along about the time when most of this temperate zone is snowed in, when the Palm Beach season is in full swing and southern California again boasts of its wonderful climate, many persons probably will be laughing at Paramount's picture, "The Farmer's Daughter."

It will have Martha Raye, Charles Ruggles and William Frawley in it for fun; Richard Denning a Golden Circle habitué, that there may be a semblance of love interest, Gertrude Michael for divers reasons but mostly to be the menace, and to back up this coterie—William Duncan, Ann Shoemaker, Benny Baker, Wanda McKay and Wilfred Roberts.

The whole thing will have to do with what happens when a threadbare but comically resolute Broadway producer tries to stage a local talent show, helped by a temperamental headline actress, in a barn during the summer lull on the White Way. He overlooks what meandering Jersey cows and moonlight over the hayfields will do to the farmer's daughter, who, among other things, is romantically inclined, and the stage star, who, despite all her pomp and pride, still wears dresses. The boy who wants to become an actor is overcome by love.

William C. Thomas is the associate producer. The pictures he has bossed have been directed largely toward workaday folk.

Release date: To be announced.

Little Accident

(Universal)

Comedy

Hugh Herbert, whose whimsical comedy antics have made him the favorite of many, and Baby Sandy, Universal's infant star of "East Side of Heaven" and "Bringing Up Baby," will be the headline names in "Little Accident." The principal supporting personalities will be Florence Rice, who has appeared in many MGM productions, and Richard Carlson, recently in "Duke of West Point" and "Winter Carnival." Carrying the story's romance, they also participate in the comedy and are involved in its burlesque melodrama. Joy Hodges, Peggy Moran, Anne Gwynne, Ernest Truex, Charles D. Brown, Kathleen Howard and Fritz Feld represent other name values.

Transcribing the Floyd Dell-Thomas Mitchell stage play, screen playwrights Paul Yawitz and Eve Greene took advantage of dramatic license.

Universal selected Charles Lamont, who discovered Shirley Temple's talent when he directed the Educational "Baby Burlesks" and guided Baby Sandy in "Unexpected Father," to produce and direct.

Herbert, editor of a "better baby" column, forces his daughter and her fiance to pose as the parents of abandoned Sandy.

Release date: Oct. 20, 1939.

A Call on the President

(MGM)

Comedy

The story on which this production is based, Damon Runyon's "A Call on the President," which appeared more than a year ago in the Saturday Evening Post, is regarded as one of the best short stories ever published in the weekly. Its two chief characters, "Joe" and "Ethel Turp," have become the heroes of Runyon's Sunday Hearst feature, "The Brighter Side."

In theme the piece is a blend of comedy and down-to-earth human interest. "Jim," the Brooklyn neighborhood mailman, loses his job for destroying a letter. Heartless postal regulations do not take into consideration that the letter would have been a cruel blow to the elderly woman for whom it was intended. To get the old man's job back, "Ethel" and "Joe" go to Washington to call on the President and tell him the true story of "Jim," "Johnny Cusper" and his mother. The President assures the pair that "Jim" will be exonerated.

William Gargan and Ann Sothern ("Maisie") will play the roles of "Joe" and "Ethel." Walter Brennan is "Jim," Lewis Stone the President; Marsha Hunt is "Kitty," who becomes "Mrs. Crusper," and Tom Neal is her boy who turns out bad. Other important parts have been assigned newcomer Don Costello, James Bush, Muriel Hutchison, Jack Norton and Aldrich Bowker.

An Edgar Selwyn production, "A Call on the President" is being directed by Robert Sinclair, who was brought to Hollywood after he had staged "The Women" and "Babes in Arms" on Broadway. Previously he had directed MGM's "Woman against Woman" and "Bridal Suite."

Release date: To be determined.

The Honeymoon's Over

(20th Century-Fox)

Domestic Comedy

"The Honeymoon's Over" will co-star Stuart Erwin and Marjorie Weaver. Previously they appeared together in "Second Honeymoon." Erwin subsequently has appeared in "It Could Happen to You" and "Hollywood Cavalcade." Miss Weaver has been featured in several productions, including "Young Mr. Lincoln," and both were in the "Three Blind Mice" cast. Jack Carson, Patric Knowles, Russell Hicks, Hobart Cavanaugh, June Gale and E. E. Clive occupy the principal support niches.

The basis of the story is William Anthony McGuire's stage play, "Six Cylinder Love," which also has been filmed. The up-to-date adaption is credited to Hamilton MacFadden, Clay Adams and Leonard Hoffman. A Sol M. Wurtzel production, it is being directed by Eugene Forde, who has made many light entertaining pictures for 20th Century-Fox the last several years.

In idea the story details what happens to a young married couple when it becomes "society" conscious. In a general way it follows the "It Could Happen to You" plot. The ambitions of the pair lead them into squabbles and troubles that threaten disaster, but the wife comes to his rescue.

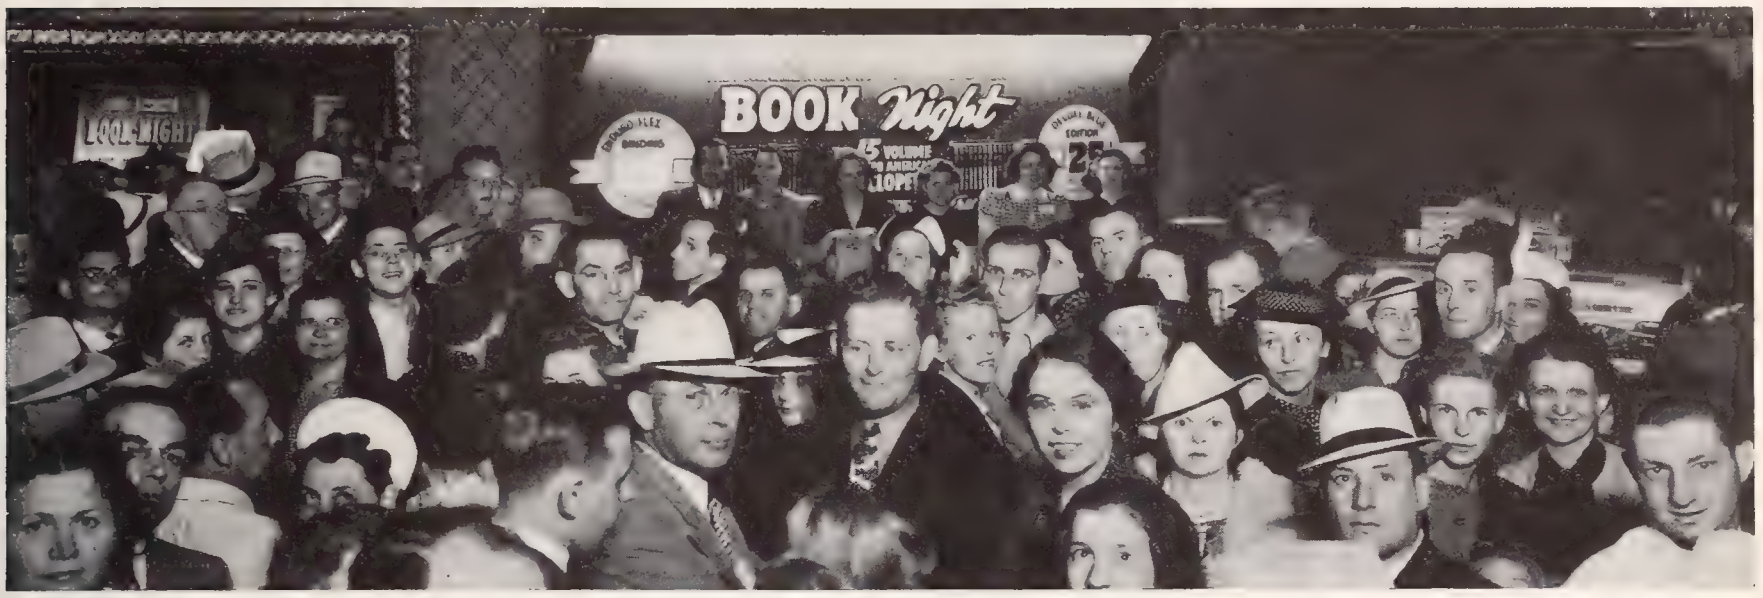
Release date: To be determined.

First Kiss

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy Romance

Here are some of the things with which exhibitors may excite patrons when "First Kiss" comes to town. The show will co-star 20th Century-Fox's two "hottest" name players—Tyronne Power, whose career has been marked by appearances in a long succession of Box Office Champion pictures, and Hollywood's number one Cinderella girl, Linda Darnell, the sensation of "Hotel for Women." Then there are Wendy Barrie, Binnie Barnes, Joan Davis, Warren William and Mary Boland.



The story is a smartly written, deluxe produced, merry marital mixup. It is 1939-plus in tone and romantic punch. All that happens in it will be what happens after a wife (Miss Darnell) catches her husband (Power) dead to rights fooling around with his secretary, and she, secretly, gets a secretary's job to find out just what it is the secretaries have that the wives haven't got.

The story will have Power in a gay, debonair, happy-go-lucky role for the most part, though he becomes flabbergasted a time or two. "First Kiss" is being made by Raymond Griffith, associate producer, and Gregory Ratoff, director, the team which turned out "Hotel for Women." Since then Ratoff has directed Selznick's "Intermezzo."

Release date: To be determined.

Monogram's "Mutiny in the Big House" was shown Wednesday to the 800 delegates attending the 69th Annual Congress of the American Prison Association at the Hotel New Yorker in New York. The delegates represented 40 states, Canada and Mexico.

No More Russian Pictures Says Radin—"Unless Good"

Follows Years of Loss on Soviet "Weak Sisters"

Matty Radin's Cameo theatre, in New York City, has a new policy.

Always "the home of Russian pictures in America"—"the Soviet film show-window"—it is now playing other esoteric product. "Miriam Efros," a Jewish picture, opened Thursday, breaking the house' long run of all Russian features.

"No more Russian pictures," Mr. Radin said, this week. "That is, no more unless they're very good."

No More "Weak Sister" Shows

The war wasn't responsible for the policy change, Mr. Radin emphasized. He decided in early August, he said, that there was "no percentage" in showing bad Russian pictures, along with the good.

"And Amkino (the Russian distributing company in America) decided, with us, that they would no longer release a picture unless it was outstanding," he added. "After all, Amkino, as well as the Cameo, is a business organization."

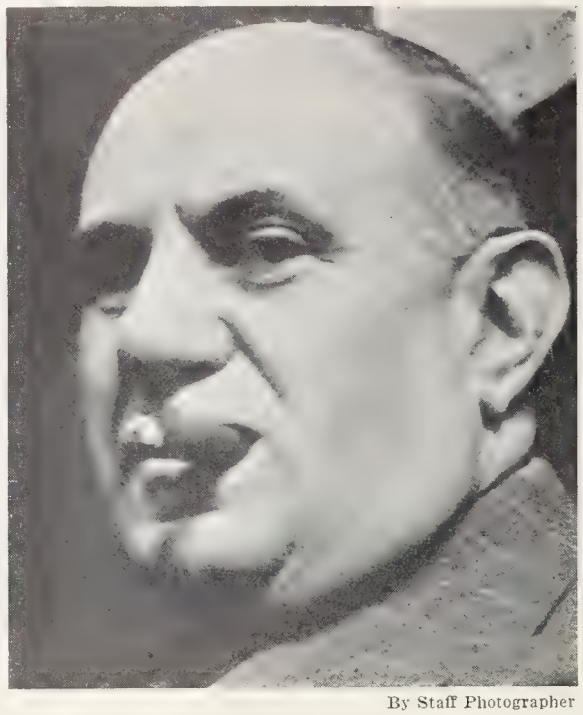
The decision was made after years in which, Mr. Radin asserted, he had lost money with Soviet "weak sisters." Always, he insisted, he had made good money, enough money to compensate for bad business, with the outstanding Russian pictures, like "Chapayev," "Ten Days That Shook the World," "Alexander Nevsky."

Fewer Good Films, He Says

But, in the last several years good pictures from Russia have been fewer, he said, and at the present time, partly because of the war, "there are no outstanding Russian pictures of merit in the United States—and we don't know when there will be any."

The war stopped the shipment of Russian films to America. They had been shipped in British boats, formerly. Now the Russians are using Norwegian boats, Mr. Radin understood. A shipment "might be on the high seas this week."

Amkino has only three unplayed pictures or so, he said, in its vaults. These he called "weak stuff."



Mr. Radin said Amkino should be pleased over the Cameo's new sense of discrimination. "When we lost money, they lost money," he declared. "If we play the good product only now, they will benefit."

His theatre never booked a picture more than two weeks ahead, he pointed out, and now had booked only the one picture mentioned.

The new field for the Cameo is wide, he said. Many pictures which cannot play elsewhere, in the circuits or even in the ordinary art houses, will suit his house. He pointed out that the Cameo was in a fortunate situation—a "semi-art" house bordering on the Broadway district and combining "sensational" exploitation with art product.

This week Mr. Radin was examining several French pictures and considering playing more Jewish pictures. He was also receptive to Latin-American subjects.

But they all must be classics, he said. He pointed out that the first "new policy" picture, "Miriam Efros," was a Jewish stage classic, by Jacob Gordon, different from the ordinary run of Jewish pictures. He is considering the booking of "Tavie," now being produced in the New York area by Maurice Schwartz, from the story by Sholem Alechem.

"Miriam Efros" was made by Credo Pictures.

Notwithstanding——

Mr. Radin appeared perturbed because he as well as Amkino had been "attacked," he said, for "propaganda and Communism."

"Notwithstanding the testimony of the Dies Committee," he said, "Amkino is a business organization, and will not release pictures unless they make money. This talk about the distribution of Russian pictures for propaganda is a laugh. Why, if we didn't pay those birds we wouldn't get the goods. We've fought every inch with them, on certain points, and many times."

"And," he continued, "there was some testimony about Amkino making a million dollars for Soviet Russia. That's a laugh too. I don't think Amkino ever grossed, on any picture, over $60,000 in the United States."

Mr. Radin again insisted that his political beliefs are represented in his membership in the Democratic Party of Tammany Hall.

Chicago Bookers Club Elects

The Chicago group, founders of the Bookers Club of America, elected this week the following officers for the coming year: Harry James, United Artists, president; Charles Davison, Balaban & Katz, vice-president; Joe Stout, Balaban & Katz, corresponding secretary; Joe Abramson, Excel Pictures, secretary; Frank Nardi, Republic, treasurer, and Oscar Berstein, United Artists, sergeant-at-arms.

22 More Jubilee Campaigns Held

San Francisco's Golden Jubilee campaign and Ann Rutherford's appearance as Queen of the Cotton Carnival at the Cotton States Exposition in Greenville, S. C., topped the final celebrations observing the industry's 50th anniversary.

Additional reports adding to those previously described have come in from widely scattered communities including Chicago, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Harrisburg, Los Angeles, Cleveland, Columbus, Milwaukee, Dallas, El Paso, Tacoma, Buffalo, Rochester, Houghton, Michigan; Fort Wayne and Elkhart, Indiana; Cleveland, Columbus and Zanesville, Ohio; each with its local angle on film history.

Reports of the campaign in San Francisco, where Mayor Rossi proclaimed October 8-15 as "Motion Picture Jubilee Week," were received from Phil Phillips, advertising manager of the San Francisco division of Fox West Coast Theatres.

San Francisco made the most of the fact that "California provided an historic forerunner to the Kinetoscope 27 years before Edison's invention," as the San Francisco News pointed out in its editorial. "At Leland Stanford's stock farm at Palo Alto, in 1872, photographs of horses in action were made with a battery of cameras with automatic shutter controls. These were the first pictures ever made of objects in rapid motion and were valuable to Edison's work."

Ann Rutherford's appearance at the Cotton States Exposition, arranged by Carter Barron, of Loew's, pointed up the significant part the exposition has played in the development of motion pictures. Thomas Armat caught his first glimpse of Edison's Kinetoscope at the Exposition in Atlanta in October, 1894; the following year the Armat projector, manufactured by Edison and known commercially as Edison's Vitascope, was used in the first theatre projection at Koster and Bial's Music Hall on April 23, 1896, the introduction of the screen to Broadway.

In Buffalo the film committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs celebrated the Golden Jubilee at a luncheon at the Hotel Buffalo.

In Fort Wayne, Indiana, the Indiana Photoplay Indorsers, as well as state, district, and country chairmen of the organization, met for an institute in commemoration of the anniversary.

In Baltimore, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland took full page advertisements in local newspapers to commemorate half a century of progress in motion pictures.

In a number of cities electric light and power companies and electrical dealers cooperated in the celebration. In Harrisburg the Pennsylvania Power and Light Company took ads in the newspapers to congratulate the industry on their anniversary and to point out that the electrical industry is "concurrently commemorating the 60th anniversary of the incandescent lamp."

As an aftermath of the New York celebration, NBC's Station W2KBS broadcast a television show from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. on October 13th with James Kirkwood as master of ceremonies. "The Great Train Robbery" and "The Kiss" were included as part of the show, which was produced by Warren Wade.

Roman Joins Alliance

Ben Roman, formerly of the MGM sales staff, has joined the Alliance Films Corporation. He will handle film sales in New Jersey and upper New York state.

The rights to the three-reel "The Warning," have been sold in Japan, the Philippines and the British West Indies.

Alexander Buys TAD Ad Company

Alexander Film Company, advertising film producer, this week purchased the principal assets of TAD SCREEN Advertising of Dallas. The sale marks the acquisition by Alexander Company of the business of its second largest competitor, formed three years ago. TAD, with C. B. Akers of Dallas president, has been operating in seven states, principally in Oklahoma and Texas.

Alexander will carry on TAD's business. Its assets, said Alexander, consist of some $300,000 in business on TAD's books, with thousands of customers which require about 1,500 film shipments a week. All accounts receivable and all films, prints and negatives in TAD's possession together with all physical assets are acquired by Alexander.

The deal also includes the assignment to Alexander of the co-distributor's contract held by TAD with General Screen Advertising, Chicago.

Included in the assignment of TAD's theatre screening agreements are three Paramount partner chains—Kincey, of the Carolinas, Interstate of Texas, and the East Texas Jefferson Amusement chain, as well as a long-time screening agreement with Griffith Amusement Affiliated theatres, which operates in the southwestern states.

TAD's business, assigned to Alexander, will be continued from Alexander's main headquarters in Colorado Springs, as well as Alexander's branch offices in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Dallas and Atlanta.

MAJORS STILL DIVIDED ON BENEFITS FROM COOPERATIVE THEATRE ADS

Advertising Directors Renew Conversations on Benefits of Plan under Which Distributors and Exhibitors Share Costs

Cooperative advertising, through newspapers and billboards, with distributors and exhibitors sharing the costs, became this week the subject of renewed discussion among several advertising directors at majors' New York home offices Opinions on the benefits of the plan were still divided.

The majors, through distributors' shares of first-run theatre advertising in local newspapers, at times have spent $1,500,000 a year on cooperative advertising.

Handled Quietly

Long felt unnecessary by some companies, cooperative advertising is seen by others as a vital adjunct to film merchandising. Almost all, however, agreed that the subject was one best handled quietly. The feeling was prevalent that the insistence of some companies on continuing the policy forced some others to do likewise, and that some exhibitors had been known to take advantage of it by using it to augment their own curtailed budgets.

In August, 1938, Paramount announced that it would drop its cooperative advertising in favor of magazine advertising. (See MOTION PICTURE HERALD of August 27th, 1938). At that time, Robert Gillham, the company's advertising and publicity director, said that "in 1933, Paramount was spending 11 per cent of its total budget in 'dealer helps,' cooperative advertising, assistance advertising, free paper, free posting, while the figure rose to 40 per cent in 1937."

A Matter of Results

However, the company again is using the method. Mr. Gillham said this week that "wherever we see results accruing from cooperative advertising, we will continue to do it."

Warner Brothers, reported believing strongly in the direct form of advertising (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, Feb. 25, 1939), said this week that "we will use cooperative ads wherever it is possible to benefit the exhibitor." The company's shift away from cooperative ads took form, according to that early report in the HERALD, in the advertising for "Four Daughters" in the second half of 1938. The company, at that time, bore the entire cost of newspaper ads in 33 key cities. These ads were styled on some used in New York papers, for the opening of the film at the Radio City Music Hall. Ads in national fan magazines also were used.

Howard Dietz, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer advertising and publicity director, said, "We advertise our pictures in many local situations, and are willing to go along with a theatre that is planning to extend itself." In February, Mr. Dietz had said that "it all depends upon the picture, which gets the exploitation treatment it warrants. Generally speaking, we are not using as much cooperative advertising as formerly. As far as straight newspaper insertions are concerned, it stands about the same as before, always depending on the type of pictures we have. For newspaper advertising, of all categories, we spend about $1,500,000 a year."

At Twentieth Century-Fox, Charles McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity, said that the company was continuing with cooperative advertising. Saying that "the exhibitors have been very cooperative," Mr. McCarthy reiterated his stand taken on the subject last February. In the HERALD of last February 25th he said: "We've always spent our money on ads with exhibitors, and we're keeping the policy. We spend about $750,000 a year in newspaper advertising, all for exhibitors, and there has been very little change."

The Twentieth Century-Fox cooperative advertising, as is typical, is for the most part confined to top pictures and key cities where newspapers and billboard circulation governs the surrounding territory.

Lynn Farnol, advertising and publicity chief of United Artists, said that the company was continuing with its policy of cooperative advertising, which it had always found successful, each of its pictures receiving individualized treatment.

Running, on the average, in 50 to 60 cities, and amounting to about $50,000 a picture, it was pointed out that on a film such as "Wuthering Heights" the company's share of the expense could go as high as $75,000 to $100,000.

Mr. Farnol, in February, said that about $400,000 was spent by the company in cooperative advertising, and about the same sum in 1938. "We have always found the exhibitor cooperative, and appreciate his help. To us, it is a reason for our success, and it is something we cannot afford to drop," he was quoted in February.

Individual Situation

RKO, while it has done some cooperative advertising, had no statement as to future policy, it being said that "it depends on the individual situation." In February, S. Barret McCormick, the company's advertising and publicity head, had said that the amount spent in 1938 on cooperative advertising was less than in 1937, and that this was indicative of the trend.

Universal is not doing any cooperative advertising. It was said last February that in 1938 the company had spent about $100,000, a "drastic cut" from the amount spent the preceding year.

Because of the different field distribution machinery of both Monogram and Republic, they do not engage in cooperative advertising projects with exhibitors. Their films are merchandised principally through states rights franchise holders and a few exchanges controlled on their own.

Lawyers Complain

Motion pictures exploiting "unprofessional and trickster" lawyers were attacked in a resolution to Onondaga County theatres passed by the local Bar Association at its annual meeting in Syracuse. The American Bar Association was informed of the action.

USE PICTURES FOR PLANE TEST FLIGHT

The Vultee Airplane Company of Los Angeles has used motion pictures to record the dashboard activity in and general qualities of, a new warplane reported capable of more than 400 miles per hour. Vance Breese, test pilot, talked into a microphone as the ship was being "proved," and a camera photographed the control instruments.

Pettijohn Hits 'Pressure Groups'

When Congress gets around to investigating and exposing a single professional pressure campaign of the sort which so frequently attacks motion pictures, it will have exposed them all, for their technique never varies, declared Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in an address Thursday morning before the Women's Clubs of Nebraska in convention at Lincoln.

Blames Misled Clubs

Many "pressure groups," with their infinite capacity for harm to a democratic system, would fade from the American political scene were it not for thousands of well-meaning, national, state and local public organizations which are misled into cooperation by their professional lobbyists who have axes to grind and jobs to keep, declared Mr. Pettijohn. Mr. Pettijohn, who has often defended the movies from attack before legislation hearings in Washington, spoke before the annual convention of Women's Clubs of the State of Nebraska.

"A pleading voice on the radio, a high-flown slogan—these are enough to start an avalanche of letters to Washington from people who assume that it must be the thing to do, because the publicists and lobbyists of their organizations advise them to do it."

"Self-Purification"

Mr. Pettijohn cited the experience of the motion picture industry.

"No other medium of entertainment, education and information," he asserted, "has been subjected to more self-purification than the movies. Yet pressure groups, whose real ambition is to break up the structure of self-regulation erected for the industry in order that the screen might become a prey to every subversive influence, can always count on hundreds of resolutions declaring that 'block booking,' 'blind buying,' 'clearance,' 'zoning' and other trade practices of the industry affect the morals of the screen. It would be safe to bet that few, if any, of these organizations contain a single member that could even define the trade practices referred to, let alone understand the part they play in the distribution of motion pictures."

Picture Pioneers Plan Fall Meeting

Arrangements for the Fall Conference Beefsteak of Picture Pioneers, Inc., were completed Friday at a special meeting of the executive committee. Jack Cohn, Marvin Schenck, Joe Hornstein, Harry Buxbaum, Hal Hode and Terry Ramsaye attended.

The event will be held Friday, October 20th. Novel entertainment is planned. At the meeting eight new members will receive their gold membership card. They are J. A. Conville, Leo K. Justin, C. S. Goetz, Oscar C. Binder, Peter Siebel, Eugene Meyers, Harry F. Karasik and J. H. Hoffberg.

Canadian Appeals Court Rules CBC Can Be Sued

The Ontario court of appeals has ruled that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation can be sued for wrongful act or on contract as a private company, reversing the decision of a lower court that held the CBC could not be made a defendant in a civil action because it emanated from the Crown, meaning that because it was a Government-directed body it was beyond the scope of civil law.

The case arose through the action of Gooderham and Worts, Ltd., formerly operating Station CKGW, Toronto, against the CBC for specific performance of a lease of the station property dated May 15, 1933, and damages of $250,000 for conversion of property of the lessor to its own use.

Order Suit to Trial

Trial of the suit of David Stoneham, Boston attorney, for $70,886 damages against former Paramount-Publix directors Fred L. Metzler, Sam Katz, Sam Dembow, Jr., Ralph A. Kohn will start Friday in New York supreme court. The suit charges the defendants with persuading Mr. Stoneham to lease a Portland, Me., theatre to Paramount-Publix by showing him allegedly false financial statements of that company.

Milton Theatre Drops Appeal

The Milton (Conn.) Drive-In theatre withdrew appeal on an injunction granted against it when it closed for the season last Sunday. The theatre says it will install individual sound mechanisms before reopening; this removes the cause of the injunction.

Pittsburgh First Run Houses Are Doubled

The number of downtown first run theatres in Pittsburgh doubled within the week, from four to eight. Following the opening of the Fulton after a two month shutdown, the Harris Amusement Company announced that the Senator had been placed on a first run policy. The third first run is the Barry, open after a 10 week layoff, while the Art Cinema switches from reissues and revivals to first run foreign imports.

Opening of the Fulton and transfer of the Senator into a first run give Twentieth Century-Fox and Universal downtown outlets after a summer drought. The Fulton plays Universal and Twentieth Century-Fox while the Harris houses split Twentieth Century-Fox product and book Republic, Monogram, Universal and Columbia.

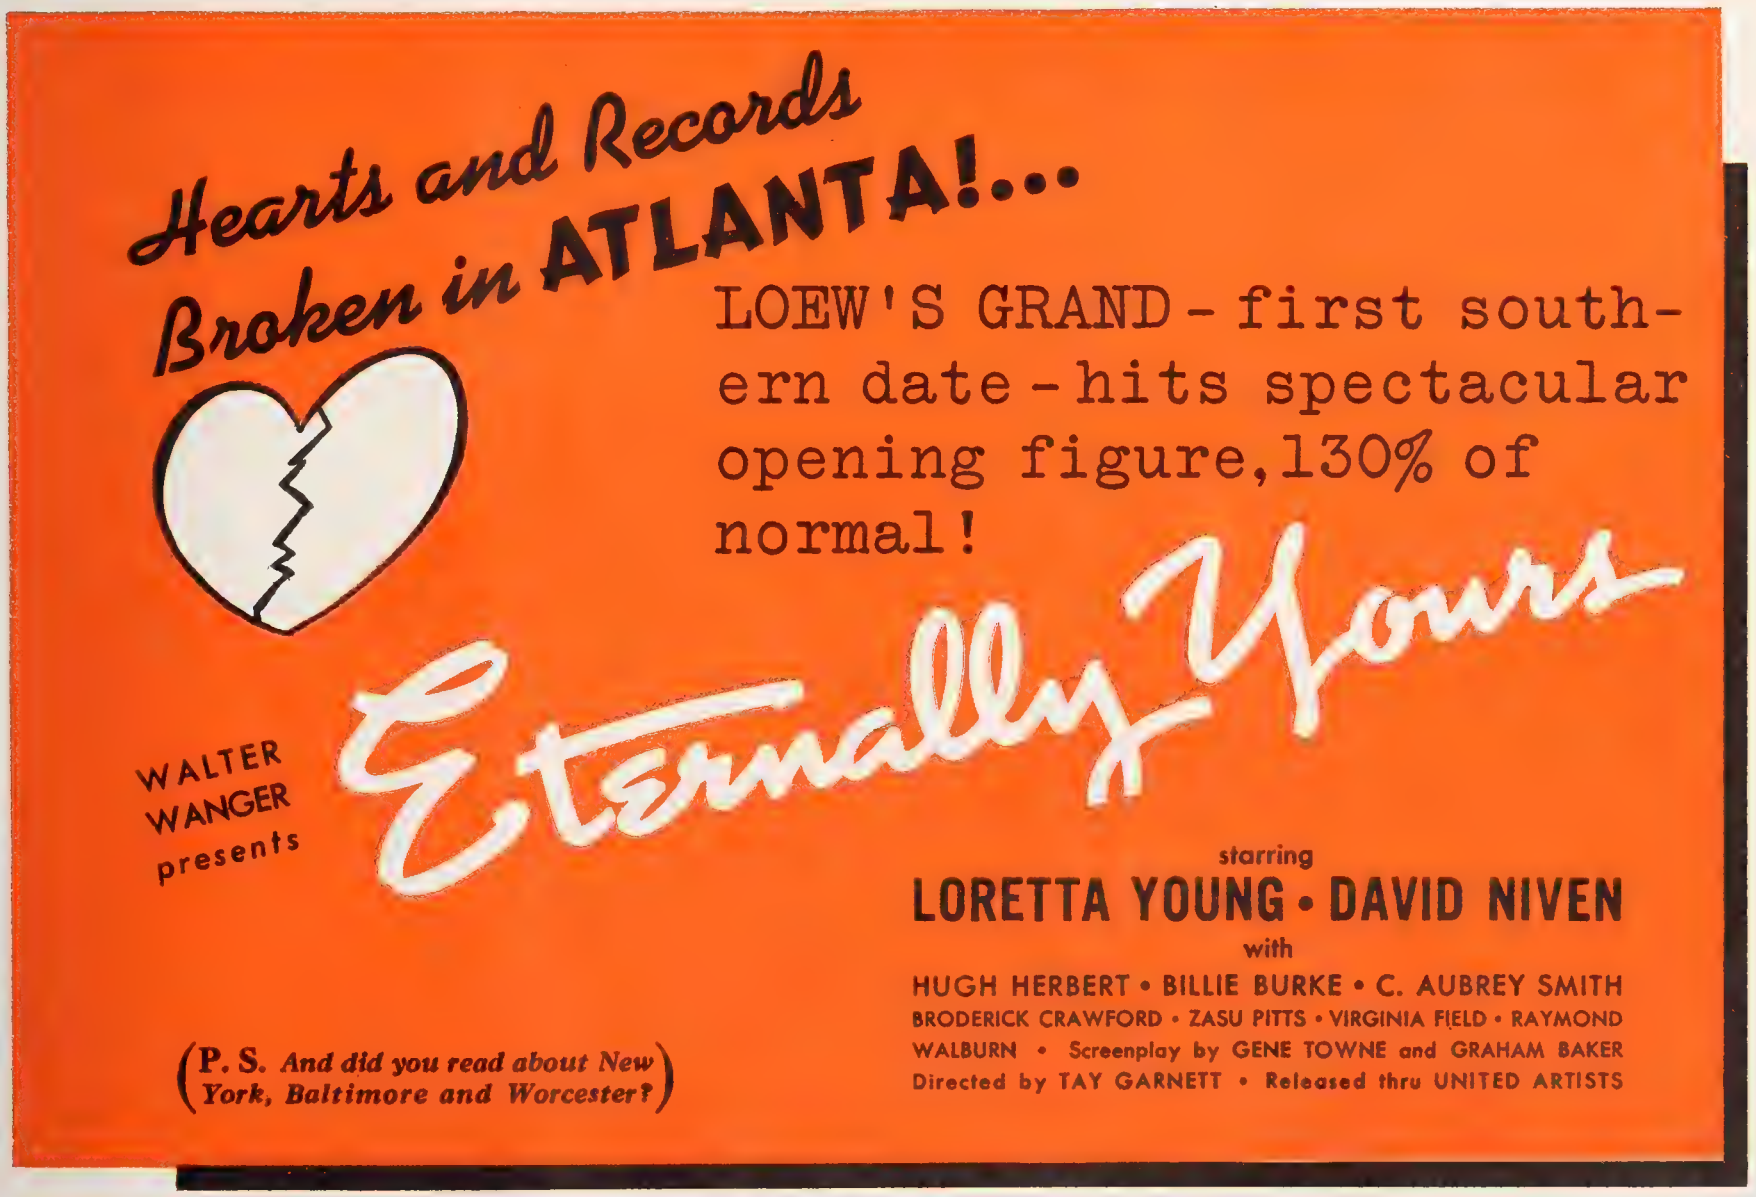
Ohio Managers Meet Grainger

E. C. Grainger, general manager of the Shea circuit, has returned to New York after a meeting with Ohio theatre managers. Those present were: E. J. Heihle, Weller theatre, Zanesville; W. O. James, Paramount theatre, Fremont; Joseph Scanlon, Ohio, State, Bellevue and Clyde theatres, Clyde; Thomas Alfred and H. E. Snyder, Lyric theatre, Lancaster; Duke Prince, Ohio theatre, Marietta; William Gillham, Union Opera House, New Philadelphia, and Chester E. Huprich and Paul, Dover theatre. Mr. Grainger is now visiting New England theatres.

Court Sets December 27th For William Fox Trial

The damage suit for $1,250,000 brought by the Lexington Ave. and 59th Street Corporation against William Fox was ordered to trial on December 27th by Isador Wasservogel, New York supreme court justice. The suit charges breach of contract to erect a theatre and office building on the plaintiff's property. Fox Theatres Corporation and Milton C. Weisman were originally included as defendants but their names were dropped when they settled out of court.

French Hearing Ordered



Final hearing on the reorganization plan of French Motion Picture Corporation was ordered for October 24th by Federal Judge William Bondy. A majority of the creditors have approved the plan which provides for payment in full to priority creditors and 15 per cent payment to general creditors.

Stoneman Application Denied

An application of David Stoneman to examine Stephen A. Lynch before trial was denied by N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Lloyd Church. Stoneman, an attorney, seeks $250,000 payment for legal services to the Lynch circuit for representing them in the Paramount reorganization proceedings.

Seymour Nebenzahl Sued

Jacques Haik, French distributor, has asked $18,000 damages from Seymour Nebenzahl, producer of "Mayerling." Haik claims he spent that much money under a contract with Nebenzahl when the latter did not have the rights he said he owned.

See Exhibitor Aid In Business Rise

Financial, governmental and general business analysts this week viewed with mixed opinions the position of American motion pictures abroad as a result of the war, but saw a brighter outlook domestically as a result of a marked rise in industrial activity, bringing greater employment and higher consumer incomes, both of which would be reflected in greater theatre attendance.

300,000 More Workers

A special survey by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics disclosed that in the first month of the war expansion in industrial activity resulted in the hiring by American factories of more than 300,000 additional workers. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins reported that only about one-third of this increase was attributable to the seasonal rise, indicating that the international situation brought immediate employment benefits to American labor.

This rise in domestic industrial activities, said Poor's financial analysts, gave the domestic motion picture market a "somewhat brighter outlook." Poor's also predicted some admission price increases reflecting favorably on domestic box office receipts.

The Wall Street Journal of Dow, Jones held virtually the identical opinion.

Better Business Reported

Motion picture executives returning to their home offices in New York from the field reported bright prospects and better business. A strong optimistic note was struck Monday by Murray Silverstone, executive operating head of United Artists, on his return from California. Broadway theatre receipts have been riding at such high levels since September 1st that several New York newspapers gave reportorial attention to the condition. Spyros Skouras' National Theatres reported that business in the houses of its 450-theatre circuit in the west was running better than in 1938, with marked increases noted particularly in the last few weeks.

Returning from a tour of the midwest, south central and middle Atlantic states, Harry A. Ross, president of Ross Federal Service, this week reported "encouraging developments in industry" noted in discussions with executives of key industries, of department stores, of hotels, of entertainment, show "true signs of permanent improvement."

H. M. Richey, field exhibitor contact for RKO, returned to New York from a Michigan Allied States convention with word that several owners reported business on the upgrade at theatres. Walter Vincent, of Wilmer and Vincent, cited much new activity in the Virginia area.

The "rebound" of theatre business also has been felt in Canada, important U. S. film customer and virtually considered a part of the domestic market. In the Dominion, reported N. L. Nathanson, head of Famous Players Canadian Theatres and one of the most important film executives in Canada, theatre business has rebounded after a period of recession following the outbreak of war. "Business now is moving along fairly normally and we look forward to improvement," said Mr. Nathanson last Friday while visiting New York.

Dow, Jones' Wall Street Journal concluded that with virtually all European film production abandoned, all important world markets, both in the Americas and in Europe, lay open to Hollywood films. Poor's likewise noted improvements in film foreign markets growing out of the same condition, mentioning, in particular, Argentina, Brazil and Mexico.

13 Film Stocks Gain, 17 Suffer Losses in First Six Weeks of War

Of 30 stock and bond issues of motion picture companies and those in directly related fields traded on the New York Stock Exchange and New York Curb Market, 17 suffered price losses and 13 enjoyed gains at the end of the first six weeks of the war in Europe, during which there was wide speculation both within the trade and without over the actual extent of the markets lost at this time for Hollywood product and the eventual status when the warring nations are readjusted to the emergency and theatres are reopened.

The total overall net change for the 30 issues was down 24¼; the losses ranging up to the 8½ drop in Eastman Kodak preferred, and the gains running up to the 9½ increase in the price of Universal's preferred.

Gains of less than one point were made by American Seating, Consolidated Film Industries common and preferred, Paramount common and second preferred, RKO common, Warner common—all on the Stock Exchange—and Monogram and Sonotone Corporation on the Curb. Other gains included the 2½ points by General Theatres Equipment; Pathe Film, 1⅝; Universal preferred, 9½—on the Stock Exchange—and a 1½-point gain by Technicolor on the Curb.

The principal losses were: Eastman Kodak preferred, 8½; Paramount bonds (3¼'s '47), 6¾; Kodak common, 4½; Columbia preferred, 4.

Following is a comparison of the film and allied company stock and bond prices at the outbreak of the war and those of the beginning of the week, rounding out the sixth week of the war.

BROADCASTERS SAY 84% IN U.S. USE RADIO, INVESTING FIVE BILLIONS

Association Declares 40 Million Sets Are in Operation, Contrasted with Eight Million in 1928; Six Million in Autos

The National Association of Broadcasters, proceeding under its new plans to draw public good-will towards broadcasters, particularly the radio networks—plans which started with the adoption of the new NAB code of fair practices last month—has circulated statistics to show in what estimation radio stands today in the public mind.

Eighty-four per cent of this country's families listen to radio, it is claimed. In support of this claim, it is asserted that 28,000,000 American families use and own 40,800,000 radio sets, to form motion picture exhibitors' biggest competitor for public attention.

Radio has grown in public use from 8,500,000 sets in 1928 to the present 40,800,000, the figures state. The growth from 1928 to 1938, is represented thus:

Year	Number of Sets Owned
1928	8,500,000
1929	10,500,000
1930	13,000,000
1931	15,000,000
1932	18,000,000
1933	22,000,000
1934	28,000,000
1935	30,500,000
1936	33,000,000
1937	37,600,000
1938	40,800,000

Votes and Radio Sets

Furthermore, the Association declares in this statistical survey, there has been a definite growth relationship in the number of votes cast in presidential elections with the number of radio sets in use; indicating, in the opinion of the broadcasters, that people will only come to the ballot box in large numbers when appealed to by the politician's voice over the radio.

It is pointed out that in 1922, when only 400,000 radio sets were being used, only 26,705,346 votes were cast; and that, coincident with the growth in radio set sales, the votes have increased; so that in the 1936 election, with 33,000,000 sets in use, 45,646,817 votes were tallied.

The Association chart illustrates the point, thus:

Election	Number of Radio Sets in Use	Total Ballots Cast
Harding-Cox—1920	*400,000	26,705,346
Coolidge-Davis—1924	3,000,000	29,022,261
Hoover-Smith—1928	8,500,000	36,879,440
Roosevelt-Hoover—1932	18,000,000	39,816,522
Roosevelt-Landon—1936	33,000,000	45,646,817

Going farther in its thesis on the present importance of radio the Association figures say that since, 1922, Americans have invested four and one half billion dollars in radio receivers; that listeners in America own more than one-half the radio receivers in the world; that there are three times as many "radio homes" as there are "telephone homes" in America; that there are 15 million more radios than automobiles in use here; that 6,000,000 automobiles are equipped with radios; and that $150,000,000 per year is spent by American listeners in electric current necessary for radio operation.

The figures also concern commercial time sales from the year 1934, when radio had apparently reached its stride as a national advertising medium, to 1938—and claim that gross time sales increased from $72,887,169 in 1934 to $150,118,400 in 1938—the networks receiving $48,647,081 in 1934, and $71,728,400 in 1938.

These figures are then compared with the gross revenues of other media in the same years. It is shown that whereas radio received $72,887,169 in 1934, magazines received $116,268,492, and newspapers $458,481,718 the same year. However, by 1938, radio, as noted, received $150,118,400, magazines $141,007,561, and newspapers $544,000,000. Thus, while the other media increased their gross revenues also, radio has already outstripped magazines.

Radio Outstrips Magazines As National Advertising Medium

Radio's growth from zero as an advertising medium, and then its replacement finally in 1938, of magazines as the second largest national advertising medium, is evidenced by the figures of the National Association of Broadcasters. The figures show that, while the other two media, from 1934 to 1938, increased their gross revenues, radio's gross sales increased more rapidly. The statistics also reveal how much, year by year, and in what categories—national and regional networks, and local stations—radio's gross time sales increased. The charts follow:

Comparison of Volume of Radio Commercial Advertising with Other Media

Dollar Volume by Years	Magazines	Newspapers	Radio
1934	$116,268,492	$485,481,718	$72,887,169
1935	123,093,289	517,513,000	87,523,848
1936	143,790,669	568,593,000	107,550,886
1937	161,967,804	630,000,000	144,142,482

Leo Pollock Appointed

Leo A. Pollock has been appointed director of public relations for Wire Broadcasting Corporation of America by J. R. West, president.

The Brandt circuit plans to open the new Pix theatre, on 42d St. in New York, in November or December. It will seat about 850. A contract has been signed for RCA Photophone equipment. The policy of the house has not yet been decided.

Need Long Laughs, Says Max Gordon

Max Gordon sees a definite audience preference now for laughter and regrets that "there isn't a big, long, laugh picture in the show business now, of the type that Lloyd and Chaplin used to make." Mr. Gordon is about to enter films with the dramatic story of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," which he is producing for RKO. (Picture on page 10.)

But the stage impresario may make "just such a long laugh picture," as his next, he said at his first interview this week, in New York, in S. Barret McCormick's press department in RKO's home office at Rockefeller Center.

Mr. Gordon thinks Hollywood would be wise when it hires a producer from the stage world, to let him work without interference.

Mr. Gordon says he will definitely produce "The American Way" on the Coast. The cast and writers have not been chosen.

He likes pictures. "There's so much you can do in screen production which would be impossible in stage work," he said.

He said many Lincoln plays had failed, but only because they needed the proper story and good production. He pointed to the success of the stage play.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BLONDIE: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake—We consider this one a very good comedy. Did a nice business on Sunday, but fell below average on Monday. Running time, 69 minutes. Played September 17-18.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

BLONDIE TAKES A VACATION: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Got this in ahead of my closest competition and did considerably above average for midweek. Picture starts out nicely but story material cheapens toward the close and the net result is a picture that won't especially satisfy the discriminating class. As that is a small group in a country town, most everyone thought this very much OK.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS AND HOW THEY GREW: Edith Fellows—A very good family picture. Will appeal especially to the kids. Played September 26.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Tex. Small town and country patronage.

FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS AND HOW THEY GREW: Edith Fellows, Dorothy Peterson—A sweet little homey picture that should do nice business on a short run. Very acceptable but do not expect too much from it. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: Barbara Stanwyck, Adolpe Menjou, William Holden—It just cannot be done. Hollywood should learn that they cannot take an unknown and put him in an "A" picture and get by. Perhaps in the future this Mr. Holden may be somebody but in his first attempt he is very amateurish. The picture itself, taken from the stage play, is very slow and draggy. It is all right for our situation on any day of the week except Sunday opening. Just another picture. Running time, 100 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

KONGA, THE WILD STALLION: Fred Stone, Rochelle Hudson—Good western and horse story that pleased. Running time, 63 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

MAN THEY COULD NOT HANG, THE: Boris Karloff—Here's one that clicks with Boris Karloff in the cast, and the title brings them in to good business. Running time, 64 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

WHISPERING ENEMIES: Jack Holt, Dolores Costello—A short feature and not very entertaining. I would rate it as the poorer than average program picture. Running time, 61 minutes. Played September 28-30.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

First National

ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES: Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, "Dead End Kids," Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas—There is no question about these kids; they are troupers. The picture is good but the scenario is getting typed. There is a similarity to the other pictures that they have played in, too much so, that if they hold up they will have to have a different treatment, is my opinion. Ronald Reagan especially good, and Sheridan seems to be improving.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas—Although we played this after the war started, it didn't do any extraordinary gross. Plot is rather hard to follow (if you can call it that). Too educational to suit the majority. I do not believe the first night showed hardly any women or children. I do not believe propaganda or war type pictures are going to do any unusual business.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—I played this very late but did not lose anything by that. Business good, quite a bit above average; in fact, the second highest grosser from Warners on the 1938-39 product. Picture will come close to rating the finest of the year.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

In this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

DAUGHTERS COURAGEOUS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, May Robson, Frank McHugh, Dick Foran—Just the type of picture for small towns and this drew extra business here. Story was not accepted by all but no one took any exception to the cast. If we could have them as good as this all the time, we would be satisfied. Running time, 107 minutes. Played October 1-2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

KID FROM KOKOMO, THE: Wayne Morris, Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, May Robson—Very good program picture which pleased our patrons nearly 100 per cent. Good action and plenty of thrills. Running time, 92 minutes. Played September 22-23.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent—This picture, it seems, is doing very good business everywhere. The women like it. The writer viewed it and considers it a very ordinary picture, a silly, implausible plot, far-fetched, that never happened and never will. But the answer is, it's doing business. Running time, 92 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

SWEEPSTAKES WINNER: Marie Wilson, Allen Jenkins, Johnnie Davis—Another of those fillers which do not mean a nickel at the box office. Too much of both Wilson and Jenkins, who are swell in support, but not leads. Running time, 59 minutes. Played September 13-14.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Grand National

SIX GUN RHYTHM: Tex Fletcher, Joan Barclay—This was doubled with "Trade Winds" and is an all around satisfying western.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker—A better than average B class picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 24-25.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal, Walter Connolly—Not a big picture but better than most socalled program features. Running time, 70 minutes.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD: James Stewart, Claudette Colbert—Very screwy. I saw it four times and still don't know what it was all about. James Stewart very popular here. Running time, 86 minutes. Played September 20-21.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Tex. Small town and country patronage.

LADY OF THE TROPICS: Hedy Lamarr, Robert Taylor—Just a boring lot of nothing and why Metro ever released it is beyond me. If I had realized how it would talk the audience into boredom, this would have been out with a large OUT. They talk, talk and no modicum of action, and frankly you want to put a burr under their tails and get some action. Couple it with "Idiot's Delight" and you will have the worst pictures that have come from Metro this season.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MAISIE: Robert Young, Ann Sothern—A surprise picture, although we are never surprised when one of Metro's "B" pictures turns out to be an "A" picture and vice versa. We told the men to come see "Maisie," and whispered to the ladies that Robert Young was in the picture, so they all came. Played September 29-30.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Tex. Small town and country patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—Grand picture. Just a little hard to understand at the first but the acting of Howard and Hiller soon made you forget that part of it. Running time, 87 minutes. Played September 17-18.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THESE GLAMOUR GIRLS: Lew Ayres, Lana Turner, Tom Brown—Good picture, good business. Pleased all. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 1-2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr—Swell show in color. Business was good, but mostly kids. Running time, 100 minutes. Played October 4-5.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ: Judy Garland, Ray Bolger, Frank Morgan, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—For the business done we can thank the national reputation this enjoyed. Of its scope and production, there is no question. But our audiences thought too heavy and not enough dancing and music to carry it through, and some of our kids on the matinee could not stay in their seats at the witch scenes. It is a box office picture in every way except for the heaviness.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Monogram

WOLF CALL: John Carroll, Movita—This was doubled with "Never Say Die" and can easily be classed as better than average program picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD: Jack Benny, Joan Bennett, Mary Boland, Yacht Club Boys—Good entertainment that disguises a fashion show. Played October 4-6.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Franciska Gaal, Margot Grahame, Akim Tamiroff, Walter Brennan—This was doubled with "St. Louis Blues." This program drew a little better than average but I believe that "St. Louis Blues" had some pulling power of its own.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

EDD TIDE: Frances Farmer, Ray Milland—Here is a good sea picture in all color that took well at BO. Played two days to a nice business. Running time, 91 minutes. Played September 7-8.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN MUSIC: Bob Burns, Martha Raye—I set this in place of "The Lady's from Kentucky" and have to pat myself on the back for this substitution. Picture is more than two years old but not having played here before, it drew very well and brought out more laughs than anything made since. I am sure the take on this was double what "The Lady's from Kentucky" would have been.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Bob Hope, Martha Raye—This was a lively, peppy, fun sprinkled offering that seemed to be much enjoyed, judging by audience reaction and for a Sunday and Monday showing drew a good average. This was doubled with "Wolf Call" from Monogram, which can easily be classed as better than average program picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RENEGADE TRAIL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—"Cassidy" series are best Westerns ever made and this is no exception. It is remarkable how picture after picture in this group can hit the consistently high par of goodness and never go stale. Our patrons never tire of Cassidys. Played October 2-6.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Lloyd Nolan, Dorothy Lamour, Tito Guizar—Would call this a better than average program picture. While this doesn't jell as well as one would like, it delivers quite a lot of entertainment that was somewhat different. This was doubled with "The Buccaneer." This program drew a little better than average but I believe that "St. Louis Blues" has some pulling power of its own.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THANKS FOR THE MEMORY: Bob Hope, Shirley Ross—Played with "The Young in Heart." The quality of the program deserved better results at the box office.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THUNDER TRAIL: Gilbert Roland, Charles Bickford—This is a fair western. Did a fair business on Friday, but fell below average on Saturday. This is a Zane Grey story, but has no star value. Running time, 55 minutes. Played September 9-10.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee—This picture is outstanding. Great production. Played to big business for three days. We picked three pictures from Paramount for Paramount Week and we are glad we did. Joel McCrea and Frances Dee did a great job as leads in the picture. Running time, 115 minutes. Played September 4-6.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

Republic

MOUNTAIN RHYTHM: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Here is Gene's best picture for a long time. Good songs, good story and plenty of comedy. Gene introduces the late song hit, "It Makes No Difference Now," which we publicized. Running time, 58 minutes. Played September 15-16.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

RKO Radio

FIXER DUGAN: Lee Tracy, Virginia Weidler—Played with "They Made Her a Spy." Double bill that gets by nicely.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

GIRL FROM MEXICO, THE: Lupe Velez, Leon Errol—Played with the "Saint in London." Double that pleased all the way, especially "The Girl from Mexico."—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

SAINT IN LONDON: George Sanders, Sally Gray—Played with "The Girl from Mexico." Double that pleased all the way, especially "The Girl from Mexico."—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

STORY OF VERNON AND IRENE CASTLE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—A good show if you can get them in to see it. This team used to mean box office to us, but not now. Played September 17-18.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Tex. Small town and country patronage.

THEY MADE HER A SPY: Sally Eilers, Allan Lane—Played with "Fixer Dugan." Double bill that gets by nicely.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHASING DANGER: Preston Foster, Lynn Bari—Why did they tag this with a ten cent store title? Here is an outstanding program picture, one that evidently cost a lot to make, and they bury it under a handicap that marks it for the double bill class. I have seen a lot of "A" pictures that haven't got half what this has. Similar to "Submarine Patrol" (same producer) but really a lot better and just as big.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

CHASING DANGER: Preston Foster, Lynn Bari—Very, very ordinary; put out by Fox to fill in the last half of a double bill. Played September 20-21.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

EVERYBODY'S BABY: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Shirley Deane—This was the first Jones Family show I tried on a single bill and it went over OK, doing better than average midweek business. Some liked it—most of the patrons—although there were a few kicks, too. Picture is so short that it takes a whole flock of shorts to round out a two hour show, so there was no particular saving in running as single.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Walter Brennan, Richard Greene, Bobs Watson—The manner in which the inmate population responded to this "picture of color" convinces me that a "jim-dandy" was selected to open our 1939-40 season. Without exception it was agreed that Walter Brennan stole the show, with little Peter (Bobs Watson) running him a close second. In addition to these fine bits of action, the beautiful scenery, shots of such outstanding horses as Man O' War, Gallant Fox and Omaha, the stable boys' rendition of "Goin' to the Races" and the excellent racing shots all contribute to make this picture one any person could like. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 7.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher—I had hoped to do real old time Shirley Temple business with this but we struck a hot spell, the year's hottest, but at that we did a good average. This is easily one of Shirley's finest. We sure hate to lose a mortgage lifter like Shirley Temple has been.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MEET THE GIRLS: June Lang, Lynn Bari—This one is weak. No draw at BO. Even the title is bad. Running time, 71 minutes.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent—Darryl Zanuck has done it again. Louis Bromfield should be proud of the way they handled his story. George Brent steals the show and that new gal, Brenda Joyce, is going places. Give it your best dates and step on it. We ran too early after release. Only those who had read the book and a few who read the movie mags came out. Needs lots of publicity. Running time, 104 minutes. Played October 1-3.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Tex. Small town and country patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—Very good. Sonja is a favorite but we do believe they should let up a little on her skating. We all know she is a wonder but get a little tired of too much. Power is always good. Running time, 87 minutes. Played September 29-30.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda—Not a very good draw but a very fine picture for those that appreciate the better things. Possibly there were a few too many love scenes and the action slow at times may have been responsible for the several unfavorable comments. Biographies are not going to make profitable story material in small situations.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

STRAIGHT, PLACE AND SHOW: Ritz Brothers, Richard Arlen, Ethel Merman—This is a good comedy for the weekend and business was good. This picture is quite a change for us on Friday-Saturday, as we usually play westerns and action pictures. Running time, 67 minutes. Played September 1-2.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

SUEZ: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella—This picture is outstanding both from production and box office. Acting by Tyrone Power, Loretta Young and Annabella superb. Great story and wonderful direction. Played three days to very good business. Running time, 103 minutes. Played August 22-24.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Binnie Barnes—This one sure pleased. A very good comedy. This Warner Baxter sure can sing. Why don't the producers give Baxter a chance to sing in pictures? Played September 13-14.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan—Yes, Mr. Fonda was the whole show! Not that the others were not good, because it was a swell cast, but Fonda stood head and shoulders above them all. He certainly should have very serious consideration when the Academy Award is handed out. Running time, 101 minutes. Played September 24-25.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, Paul Lukas, June Lang—The lack of popular stars and the rather meaningless title held business several notches below par, but let me tell you here is one of the best entertainments to come out of Hollywood this year. The comments for the size of the crowd were plentiful and all very favorable. The type that will please just about everyone and send them out feeling that they have seen a real show.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

DRUMS: Sabu, Raymond Massey—Shortage of pictures forced the playing of this one and for its type it is good. Rather long on some sequences that could have been cut out. Essentially a British picture and I'll hand this to the British that when they make a picture such as this one and "Four Feathers," that we played some time back, they go out on location and the scenes are breathtaking in some of the shots. There is no canvas background moving back of the camera. That is so apparent in some of the Hollywood productions. I wish that Hollywood would take a page from the book of the English and not try and fool the public in phoney outdoor sets. And if you don't think the movie public is wise to this, you are wrong—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, City, Ind. General patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—I was rather afraid of this for my best playing time, as the title is not very exciting, but it drew a fair average and better than I expected. This will please them if you can get them in. This was doubled with "Six-Gun Rhythm" from Grand National, which is an all round satisfying western.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART, THE: Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard—This one flopped at BO. Story slow moving and draggy. This picture was passed up by our patronage. We think the title had also something to do with keeping the patrons away. Running time, 91 minutes. Played September 11-12.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Janet Gaynor, Roland Young, Paulette Goddard, Billie Burke—Played with "Thanks for the Memory." This double program gave us a real low for the nice show weather we are now having. In fact, it gave us for a midweek showing about the year's low. The quality of the program deserved better results at the box office. —J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

CARNIVAL QUEEN: Robert Wilcox, Dorothea Kent—Very weak. Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 7-9—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

SUN NEVER SETS, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Basil Rathbone—Ninety-four minutes of slow, draggy rubbish that should never have been shown to the American public. Skip it. Running time, 94 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SUN NEVER SETS, THE: Basil Rathbone, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Good programer. Second half in the big towns. Running time, 96 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Frank McHugh, Alan Hale, Victor Jory—The biggest show we have run this season with exception of "Boys Town." These type pictures really draw them in. Running time, 104 minutes. Played September 29-October 1.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY: Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan—Good picture, good business. Pleased the action fans. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LOVE, HONOR AND BEHAVE: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane—Here is a honey of a picture, plenty of comedy, which did a nice business for two days. Wayne and Priscilla Lane are coming to the front fast. You cannot go wrong on this one. Running time, 71 minutes.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

NANCY DREW AND THE HIDDEN STAIRCASE: Bonita Granville—Another Nancy Drew adventure which pleased the children but failed to draw in the adults. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 6-7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Dick Powell, Ann Sheridan—Warner Brothers wasted enough stars in this to make a good picture. The only word I know that describes it is "silly." Dick Powell hasn't meant anything at our box office in years, but that Ann Sheridan seems to have something if given a chance to show it. We broke even on it, but that happens often to us. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 4-5.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Tex. Small town and country patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Dick Powell, Anna Sheridan, Gale Page—What we wouldn't like to tell the guy who invented "oomph" for Ann Sheridan. And, if Warner's don't forget it, and give her an opportunity pretty soon, they'll send her along the same route all these other glamour girls have gone. We think she's swell, but just let her be her own self once. This drew a little extra business on midweek showing. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 27-28.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan—Here is a powerful picture. Played three days to fair business. Acting by Garfield is outstanding; so is the supporting cast. Running time, 91 minutes. Played August 29-31.—Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Very fine Navy picture that drew better due to the war going on in Europe. Running time, 89 minutes. Played September 22-24.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

MGM AND RKO BOOTHS DRAW MILLION VISITORS

Over a million visitors have signed the register at the Loew's MGM World's Fair Information Booth in New York since June 28th. Questions about the Fair, New York City and the surrounding country were asked by travelers from every continent and many foreign countries. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio led the United States in number of visitors to the Booth. England, France and Italy supplied the most visitors from the rest of the world.

While MGM's Booth was for the general public, as well as exhibitors, the RKO World's Fair Lounge was exclusively for theatre men. Some 500 individual exhibitors representing more than 2,000 theatres were entertained in the RKO Lounge. These showmen came from all over the United States and from 18 foreign countries.

Short Features

Columbia

PEST FROM THE WEST: Buster Keaton—Best two-reeler I have seen in many a month. When the shorts draw comments, they have to be good.—L. B. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SCRAPPY'S ADDED ATTRACTION: Scrappy Cartoons—One of the poorer cartoons that Columbia has made. Just fair. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks. Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 1—The poorest Snapshot we have run. All about beauty makeup that is not even passable. Skip this one. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SKINNY THE MOOCHER: Charley Chase—For the audiences that like their slapstick, this is a knockout. This producer still heads the list in good comedy. Very good. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WASHINGTON, D. C.: Washington Parade—Very fine and timely. People are interested in shorts telling about the big cities of the nation.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CAPTAIN SPANKY'S SHOWBOAT: Our Gang—Average Our Gang comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THINK FIRST: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Very good two-reeler dealing with shop lifting. A little feature in itself.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

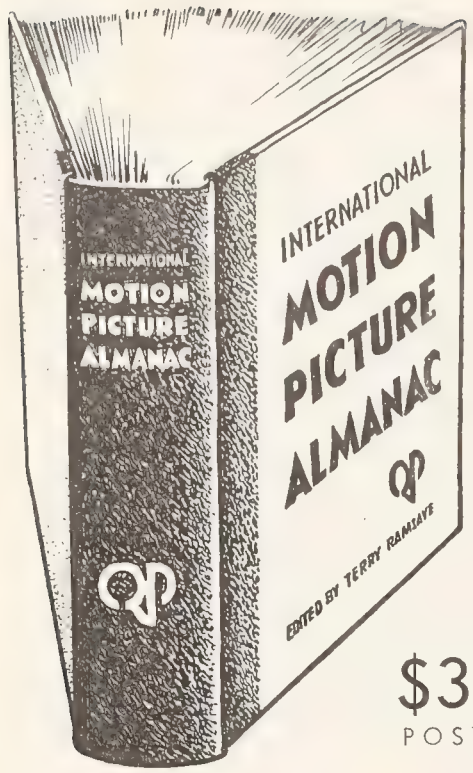
TO THE ENDS OF THE EARTH: Romance of Celluloid—Very good short on Metro's 1939-40 product. If you have the new product bought, by all means play it. Running time, 10 minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

YANKEE DOODLE GOES TO TOWN: Passing Parade, No. 6—Another patriotic short but this one is different. Give it a good date as it is worth it. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME: No. 13.—This was better than the majority of these subjects lately. People are interested in war subjects but 20 minutes of it at a time is too much.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox



SPORTS IMMORTAL: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—This short proved to be both interesting and amusing. Interesting because it brought back such outstanding heroes as "Red" Grange, Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Helen Wills, Gertrude Ederle, et al, and amusing because of the dress of our heroes and the old fashioned photography. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Universal

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 64—Very good. Diversified and interesting. Running time, nine min-

ARTIE SHAW AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A snappy musical short featuring the "clarineting" of one of the countries outstanding "clarinetters." Anyone who likes good dance music will enjoy this short. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreattion, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

BELIEVE IT OR ELSE: Merrie Melodies—We have had better cartoons than this one but still not so bad. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

COUNT ME OUT: Merrie Melodies—An amusing Merrie Melody. It proves quite conclusively that to learn boxing via Correspondence Schools is not so good, not so good. Running time, seven minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

CRAWFORDS "AT HOME," THE: Vitaphone Varieties—Good one-reel musical with the Crawfords at the pipe organ.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOLD RUSH DAZE: Merrie Melodies—Good colored cartoon.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT MICE: Merrie Melodies—We played this with "Naughty But Nice" and it made quite a hit with our poeple.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

RIDE, COWBOY, RIDE: Dennis Morgan—Good two-reel western in color with Dennis Morgan singing. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RIGHT WAY, THE: Vitaphone Varieties—Extra good. You may call it propaganda but what's the difference if it is a good subject and puts across a good lesson. Let's have more of them, opposing the forming of organizations working against the U. S. A.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SCALP TROUBLE: Looney Tunes—Good black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Junior Programs To Start Fourth Season

Junior Programs said this week that it is sending two companies on the road starting immediately to begin its fourth year as a national non-commercial organization providing children throughout the country with professional opera, ballet, drama, concerts and other entertainments at film admission prices averaging 10 cents to a quarter. Junior Programs said that bookings are now 25 per cent over last season's total, not counting those to be negotiated during the season.

The companies will tour from the east to the west coasts, as far north as Ontario, Canada and south to Florida. Contracts are said to be in hand for 365 performances and last year's audiences of 500,000 children and young people will probably be doubled, according to Mrs. Dorothy L. McFadden, founder-director of the organization.

Retsama Will Produce Five Features, 22 Shorts

Under a deal announced in Hollywood this week five features and 22 short subjects will be produced by Retsama Film Productions for release by Standard Pictures Corporation. Geraldine Spreckels will star in the first two, "The Trail Blazers" and "Women of Destiny."

Twentieth Century-Fox has announced that "Drums Along the Mohawk" will be released in 14 reels, making it the longest color feature ever released, it is claimed. The picture will star Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda.

Republic Managers on Leaves of Absence

Five Republic district managers are on leaves of absence to January 1st. Whether they will return to the company at that time depends on the world revenue situation. In the meantime they may be assigned to other positions when available. The only district manager provided for is Jack Bellman, who has been assigned as manager of the Buffalo exchange. He was in charge of the eastern district. District heads on leave are Max Roth, Chicago; Harry La Vine, Philadelphia; Grover C. Parsons, San Francisco; Clair Hilgers, Atlanta, and William Benjamin, St. Louis.

Dave Whalen and Charles Jones are jointly in charge of the company's advertising publicity and exploitation.

Republic has named Paul M. Wir as divisional manager for Central America to succeed Harry Davis, who will move to South America to open two new branches there. Mr. Wir will make his headquarters in Panama. Mr. Davis will open a main office at Santiago, Chile, with a branch at Valparaiso when he leaves his present job the end of October.

Name Murray, Binder

F. T. Murray has been named manager of branch operations for Universal and O. C. Binder, manager of exchange maintenance, by William A. Scully, general sales manager. Six Universal district sales managers were in New York a week ago for conferences with Mr. Scully to consider domestic problems which have arisen as a result of war conditions. Attending were A. J. O'Keefe, Los Angeles; E. T. Gomersall, Chicago, Pete Dana, Kansas City; H. D. Graham, Atlanta; Dave Miller, Cleveland; A. J. Herman, New York.

Cincinnati Office Takes Award

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office in Cincinnati, in charge of Edwin M. Booth, will receive a Leo plaque and the entire personnel of 44 will receive awards ranging from two weeks' additional pay to trips to the San Francisco Exposition, it has been announced by the MGM home office. The Cincinnati branch, for the second consecutive year, led all 32 exchanges in sales, collections, efficiency and bookings increase.

Suspend Commercial Plans

The March of Time has temporarily suspended plans for production of commercial motion pictures. The staff is being concentrated entirely on "The Ramparts We Watch," full-length feature picture now in production, and on the emergencies occasioned by the European war as they affect the regular monthly releases of the March of Time.

Roberts Appointed

Don Roberts has been named publicity director of Selznick International Pictures by Russell Birdwell, who now handles the account on a retainer basis. Mr. Birdwell has realigned the entire department as a result of curtailment of the department budget.

Herman Bernie, formerly eastern manager for the Myron Selznick agency, has opened his own management office, Herman Bernie, Inc.

New Zealand Film Board Is Formed

A Film Board of Internal Control has been formed in New Zealand, says a report to the Department of Commerce from the American Consul General at Wellington.

Meanwhile the new standard film contract, which classifies a feature picture as one 5,000 feet or more in length, is being invoked by exhibitors against pictures sold to them as features which are under the prescribed 5,000 feet, although many of them have been cut to under that length by the Commonwealth censor.

Censorship figures published by the New Zealand authorities indicate that the percentage of British quota films to the total number of quota films dropped from 19.2 per cent in the period April, 1937-March 31, 1938, to 13.7 per cent for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1939.

Australia reports a mild entertainment boom following the declaration of war. The uncertainty prevalent there for a long time previous to the actual declaration had resulted in a falling off in the amusement industry.

MORE UNIONS ASK RAISE; ACTORS HALT NBC SHOW

Guild Demands Use of Its Members in Television; Nick Mistrial Declared

Balked on several sides in efforts to effect economies to conform with foreign rental losses, while studio labor is demanding wage increases and talent is refusing salary cuts, the producers in Hollywood this week faced a new ultimatum from several crafts unless their requests for a 10 per cent raise are granted.

Actors Warn NBC

Other labor activities of the week in production were highlighted by a Screen Actors Guild warning to National Broadcasting Company that Guild members only are to be used in NBC television shows.

Unionism in exhibition this week was concerned principally with the opening of the trial of John Nick, deposed St. Louis union leader, on charges of extortion, and the continuance of arguments in New York between circuits and projectionists over new wage-and-hour conditions.

Five more locals whose members work in film studios demanded a blanket 10 per cent wage increase for their crafts last Friday. The groups are plasterers, plumbers, machinists, studio utility employes and molders groups, and are in addition to the 12,000 members of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes in studios who won demands for a 10 per cent increase last month.

Painters Delay Action

Meanwhile, last week's strike threat of moving picture painters, Local 644, over the question of a 15 per cent wage increase, was held up to the end of this week on the intervention of Pat Casey, producers' labor contact. The union will hold its strike vote Saturday.

The five organizations which demanded an increase in wages have agreements with producers nearing or past expiration dates. All belong to the American Federation of Labor studio crafts conference which hopes to influence William Bioff, Alliance leader, to accept the chairmanship for further negotiations.

On Monday, Frank Stickling, international representative of the IATSE, filed a petition on behalf of 11 studio locals asking the National Labor Relations Board to declare International Alliance units as bargaining agents for their classifications in all independent studios. This is preparatory to seeking new agreements which will make official the 10 per cent wage increase already granted by the major studios.

Also on Monday the Screen Actors' Guild told television officials of the National Broadcasting Company that any films produced specially for television purposes would have to be made with a Guild cast.

Telecast Cancelled

Last week NBC was forced to cancel a telecast of the stage play "Very Warm for May" because Actors' Equity ruled that members of the cast, at present in rehearsal, would have to receive a full week's salary for each performer taking part in the single program (reported in Motion Picture Herald of October 14th). The Equity council uncovered a regulation enacted before the advent of television which was intended to cover motion pictures and recordings, and in which, because of the permanent nature of films and recordings, a week's pay was required for each day spent in production. Actors who perform their parts over the radio are merely required to receive payment for one extra performance, or one-eighth of the weekly pay.

The question of which union shall have jurisdiction over television has not as yet been settled.

Thomas Hutchinson, NBC television director, and Max Gordon, stage and film producer, appeared Tuesday before Actors Equity Council to seek permission to submit a plan allowing legitimate plays from Broadway to be telecast without paying the required one week's salary to the cast.

Nick Case Ends in Mistrial

John P. Nick, deposed head of the theatrical unions in St. Louis and still a vice-president of the International Alliance, went on trial Tuesday before Circuit Judge Robert Aronson in federal court in St. Louis, on a charge of extorting $10,000 from theatre owners in 1936 to forestall a demand for wage increases by operators.

On the second day, however, Judge Aronson declared a mistrial after an information had been filed by Clarence Groeteke, a state's witness, charging that Robert W. Cox, a juror, had discussed the case with him Tuesday night.

Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis exhibitor, was one of the first prosecution witnesses to testify Tuesday.

The St. Louis dispute between Local 143 of the operators union, and the St. Louis Amusement Co., is in its third week with no settlement indicated. The difference grew out of a demand by the union that the company bargain with it for all operators.

Chief Justice Frederick Crane of the New York state court of appeals last Friday received the application of New York City major circuits to designate a fifth and neutral arbitrator on the board which will decide wage scales and working conditions for operators during the next two years. Judge Crane took the matter under advisement.

Withdraws from Election

The United Theatrical and Motion Picture Service Employes Union, Local 258, withdrew Monday from a proposed certification election at the State Labor Relations Board for ushers, doormen and cashiers at the RKO houses in New York. The union is an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organization; while it is claimed by Local B-171, connected with the IATSE that the Alliance, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, that the Alliance has 90 per cent of the RKO ushers enrolled.

New York Supreme Court Justice McLaughlin on Monday set trial for October 23d of the suit for an injunction and damages brought by Joseph Basson, head of Local 306 of the operators union, against Paradise Pictures, owners of the Belmont Theatre in New York. The defendant is charged with refusing to employ members of the local in violation of a contract allegedly made by it.

On Tuesday Projectionists' Local 306 started four actions in New York Supreme Court against RKO, Loew's, Warners and Paramount, intended, according to union officials, to recoup approximately $300,000 claimed to be due its members in unrestored wage cuts. The union asserts that during the administration of Sam Kaplan, former head of the union, a 10 per cent cut was agreed upon for a period of one year only. At the expiration of that period, it is claimed, the cuts were not restored.

On Quigley Awards and Promotions

Outside of the publicity attentions given to theatremen taking down Quigley Awards, what accrues to the winners that can be translated into real folding money? Presentations by Governors and other prominents, compliments from the boss-man, the pat on the back from fellow workers are all of the finest as far as they go. But the basic reason for the Competitions is to spotlight the continuously effective job done by the man in the field so that he may be properly rewarded with bigger pay or a better job.

That the Awards have been successful in this direction is no new story.

These pages have told it time and again, of winners stepped-up to more responsible and higher paying posts, who have unequivocally credited their successes in the Quigley Awards for a definite assist in getting there. The story continues to be told, currently by John Burhorn and Marlowe Conner, favored with advancement by their organizations.

Silver Grand Award winner in 1938, Burhorn, from manager of Indiana-Illinois' Gayety, Chicago, is now promoted to supervise coordination of all exploitation activities of the circuit's units in the Chicago and Calumet region. Writes John:

"This is a promotion no doubt due to my past work which was stimulated without a question through the Round Table and, notably, the Quigley Awards."

Other recent promotions among the Manta-men include those of Rex Williams, Chick Tompkins and Don Johnson, all active in the Awards and recipients of top honors.

Quarter-Master Plaque winner in the Second Quarter this year and prominent in other Awards listings, Manager Marlowe Conner now transfers his activities from the Warner Rhodes, Chicago, to the wider fields of the circuit's Avalon in the same city. He tells it as follows:

"This is a nice boost for me. There is no doubt in my mind that the recognition I received from the Round Table and the Quigley Awards has been a big factor in my favor."

It is significant to note that in most every case of promotion among Awards winners their entries have displayed an impressive consistency of boxoffice promotion. That this factor also has been noted by managers in the current Competitions is indicated not only by the quality but the increasing quantity of entries judged for Third Quarter-Master honors. It is doubly significant that the winners were selected importantly from among Fortnighters who realize the personal benefits to be had from a sustained showmanship attack as indicated by the frequency with which they were represented.

TO BE HANDLED WITH CARE

Haven't got the spanking clothes on today, so there is no need to mention names. But by now every member should realize how much dynamite there is in the post-card "phone me" gag—the one addressed in feminine handwriting to married men as a laugh buildup for a picture. This time it was signed "Maisie" who urged those addressed to call her at a given number, which proved to be the theatre. The phone rang all day, reports the Round Tabler, and many wives were asking. You can bet they were.

Fun may be fun. But not every wife is the best audience for comedy that points the finger at her old man. It would seem safer, then, to stay away from giggles aimed so close to the family fireside. Experience sadly relates that too often the laugh may be on the boxoffice.

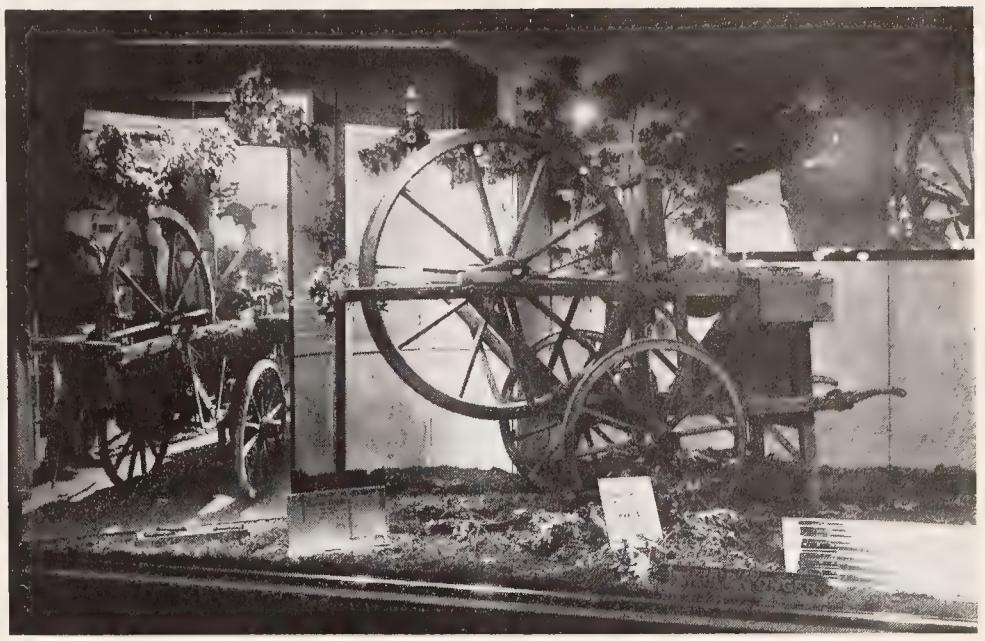
On behalf of "The Women" at the Warner Columbia in Portsmouth, Ohio, Manager Dick Cruciger promoted a women's golf tournament. Prizes were named after the stars. Everything was handled by the ladies and, as in the picture, no males were on hand. It was a highly successful afternoon, and peaceful, reports the Round Tabler. Not one fight. No one was bitten.

A-Mike Vogel

Arranged by Loew publicist Joe DiPesa was lobby stunt for the "Four Feathers" date at Loew's State, in Boston, shown above with Manager Fred Greenway pointing out the various high spots of a replica British fort used in the production. For street bally, 24-sheet mounted on compoboard was planted atop sound truck which covered beaches, playgrounds, main streets, etc.

When Paul Walker, columnist on the nearby Harrisburg Telegraph recently wrote a rave review on "The Old Maid", Nick Todorov, assistant to Charles Bierbauer, at Wilmer and Vincent's Colonial Theatre, in Allentown, constructed a 40 by 60 blowup and used it for a lobby display ahead and during run of picture. Both sides of review were flanked by scene stills.

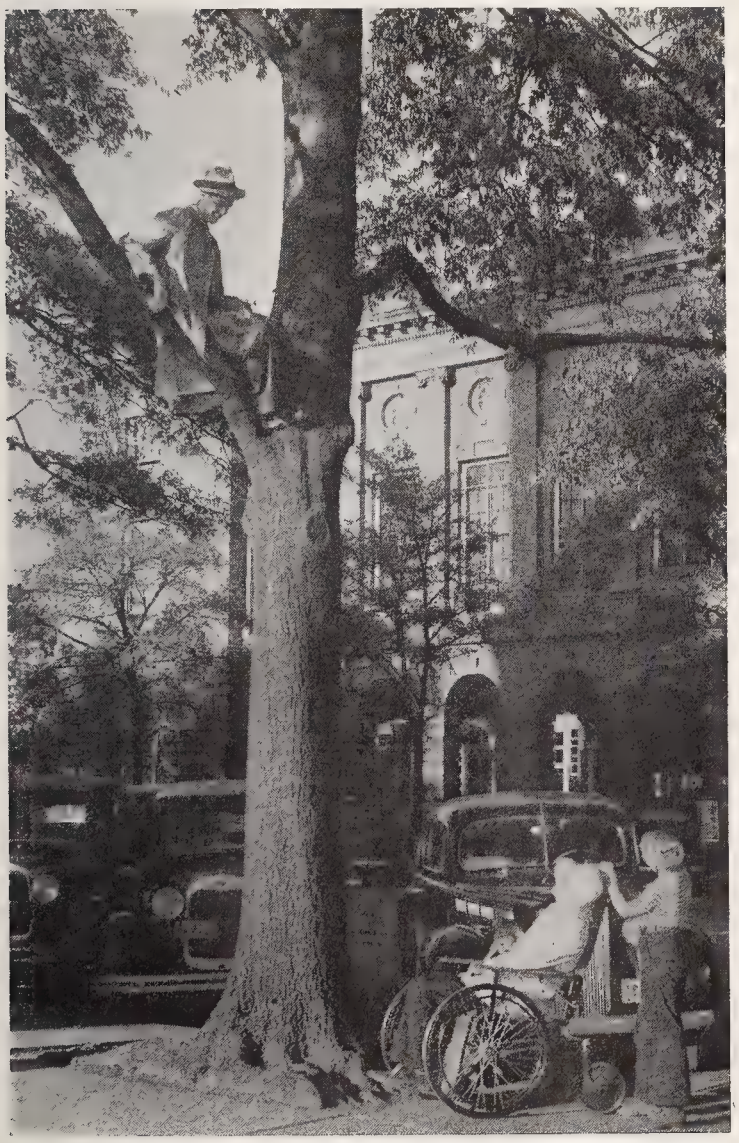
Entirely constructed and conceived by Harry Lahr of the Wardman, in Whittier, Cal., was the tin woodsman and scarecrow used for his "Oz" lobby display. Large book contained pages filled with scene stills, write ups, comic strips and inserts pertaining to the picture. Patrons were invited to scan through the book.

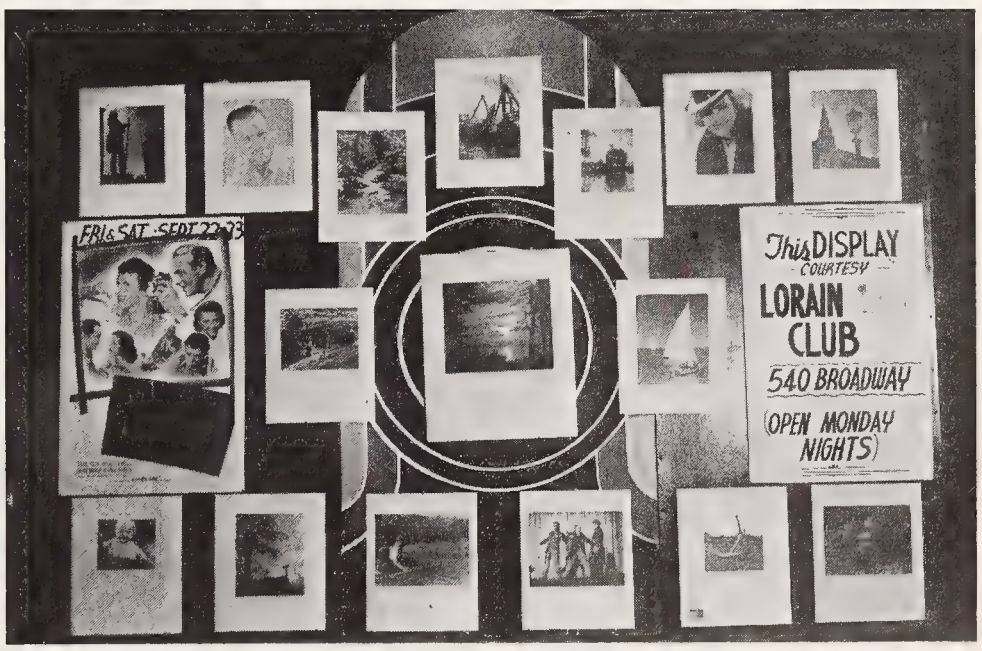


Three girls carrying umbrellas and chest banners with cast, title and playdates on "Fifth Avenue Girl" visited leading stores as part of John Dostal's exploitation on that date at the Orpheum in Waterloo, Ia. Street broadcast was also used, with passes going to participants.

Entered in a recent local celebration was the "Young Mr. Lincoln" float created for that date at the Olympic, Canyon, Texas, by Manager Charles Donnell. With a red, white and blue color scheme, rolls of crepe paper were cut in fine pieces and tacked to frame.

Round Table In Pictures





The original knife grinder's cart which plays an important part in "Harvest", showing currently at the New York World Theatre was brought over from France to make a "personal appearance" in hard-to-get hardware window, tying up with modern cutlery. Cart which is over 100 years old was backed up with blowup of scene still. Tieup was arranged by Herman G. Weinberg, publicity head, French Cinema Center, distributors of the picture.

Enlargements of stills from the picture showing actual locations in the famed French fortifications were used to highlight the front of the New Amsterdam, in New York for the date on Al Selig's "Crime in the Maginot Line" . . . In connection with "Everybody's Hobby", Louie Lamm at the Palace, Lorain, Ohio, promoted through Lorain Camera Club, display reproduced below of enlarged snapshots taken by localities which were used for lobby setpiece ahead and during run of picture.

Described elsewhere in this section was stunt arranged by Lucas and Jenkins City Manager Moon Corker through courtesy of civic authorities to keep "Mr. Brink" up a tree in front of postoffice for five days ahead of opening as part of his exploitation on "Borrowed Time" at the Palace, Athens, Pa. Tieups with merchants brought food, drinks, cigars, etc., to "Mr. Brink", with Gramps and Pud carrying on an animated conversation regarding the picture.

Model Plane Contest Planted On "Men with Wings" by Bryan

Through the cooperation of local model building supply dealers, Manager A. F. Bryan for his date on "Men with Wings" at the Columbia Theatre in Warren, Pa., held a model plane building contest. Merchant devoted windows to the stunt with appropriate tiein copy and the theatreman displayed the models in lobby ahead and during run. In addition, other merchants, who cooperated by presenting prizes to winners, also devoted windows to the stunt. Daily announcements were made over Station WJTN, plugging contest and name of picture, and the judging was held on stage evening prior to opening, event being covered by local newspaper.

Cards were placed in the YMCA branches and Boy Scout offices, and Bryan personally contacted and secured the support of the executives of both these organizations to announce the contest at their meetings.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Talent Search Proves Successful for Daniels

Staged each summer at the Strand Theatre, in Perth Amboy, N. J., and inaugurated by Manager Julius Daniels, is his ten week series of contests in a search for local amateur talent. Held each Saturday afternoon, one winner each week is eligible for the finals. Wrist watches promoted from cooperating merchant are presented weekly with a minor prize to the runner up and a grand prize of $50 awarded to the finalist. Contest is open to children up to the age of 16 and winners are selected entirely by audience applause. Application blanks are available at the theatre and must be accompanied by photo of the entrants. Cooperating stores plugged the event in their ads.

Notaro Promotes Newspaper Contests

As a result of a talk had by Pat Notaro, manager of the Columbia Theatre, in Sharon, Pa., with the sports editor of his local paper a weekly contest was instituted, featuring a gridiron guessing tiein, with passes to the winners. Each Monday through to Friday, cooperating paper runs list of teams playing Saturdays and provides box spaces for entrants guesses. Theatre is conspicuously mentioned each day, contest to continue throughout the season.

Another contest angle was engaged in for "Beau Geste" in the form of a co-op page, each merchant's ad containing cut of a flag under which Gary Cooper served in various of his pictures. To the first contestant submitting correct list, as a special award, the original script used in the filming was presented, runnersup received guest tickets.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Selected Group Invited To "Cavell" by Schreiber

Officers of the Fort Hayes barracks and the infantry band were guests of Manager Harry Schreiber of the Palace Theatre, in Columbus, Ohio, one night during the run of "Nurse Edith Cavell." In addition superintendents of six hospitals were invited to attend along with two nurses from each institution. The Columbus Dispatch was tied into the promotion and interviewed the superintendents.

Through a hookup with local news agency, entire fleet of trucks were bannered. Other units of exploitation included the distribution of heralds in Liberty magazines, spot announcements at football games, art blowups of Anna Neagle in hotel lobbies and numerous window displays.

Unusual Support Accorded Corker To Exploit 'Time'

For a reported "first time" in Athens, Ga., L & J City Manager Moon Corker for "On Borrowed Time" at the Palace secured personal endorsements from four of the state's most prominent citizens, cuts of each used along with their comments and set in a three-column full on opening day. The tiein was promoted and other newspaper publicity secured were two effective contests. The first was labeled "Are You Living On Borrowed Time?" and invited readers who had survived near fatal accidents, or who had come near having one, to describe their experiences for prizes offered by the theatre. The second, a grandparents essay contest which made page one offered guest tickets to sets of grandchildren and grandparents in return for prize essays of not more than 100 words written by the adults on "What I Like Best About My Favorite Grandchild". Teaser ads pointing up the two ideas were also promoted by the theatreman, running one a day for week ahead.

Unique Tree Stunt Arranged

Shown in this section's pictorial section was the unusual tree stunt, based on a sequence in the picture, arranged by Corker, wherein through the courtesy of the Mayor, City Council, Chief of Police and the postmaster, Gramps and Pud kept Mr. Brink up a tree in front of the postoffice five days ahead. At certain times each day, Gramps and Pud would visit different stores and carry Mr. Brinks sandwiches, drinks, cigars, etc., through the courtesy of cooperating merchants. All three were well schooled to answer any questions asked by passersby.

An old model "A" Ford bannered appropriately with copy such as "Gramps and Pud Goin' Fishing on Borrowed Time, see" etc., etc., with an old man and boy riding with a dog sitting on the back seat was used as street bally. Fishing pole hanging on side gave reality to the stunt.

Tieup was also made with all automobile dealers for a parade, all cars properly bannered and led by motorcycle escort covered entire city, including college campus. Other promotions included furniture store tiein sponsoring an "Answer It If You Can" program over WGAU, which brought plugs for the picture nine days ahead.

Effects Numerous Promotions

Through cooperation rendered by local grocer and janitors of several buildings, the "Forbidden Apple" gag was effectively used, with 500 cards and apples placed on the desk of prominent citizens in the business section and on the University campus. Florist presented a tagged basket of cut flowers to each bank president, cards in each case being signed by either Gramps, Pud or Mr. Brink, and containing theatre credits. Flowers were prominently displayed in the banks. Tags were unusual, being one foot in size, copy in capitals and each personally addressed to the president. Another promotion was a two-column display promoted by Corker, wherein a cut of the theatreman emphasized his personal endorsement for the date.

Third Quarter-Master Listings Name 68 Fortnighters as Awards Sweep Into Last Quarter of Year

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Marking the turning point into the fourth and final period, voting for the Third Quarter discloses a new Awards high of 68 Fortnighters selected for Quarter-Master honors, with Plaques voted to three, Medals to five and Citations to 59. Names and situations appear elsewhere on this page. The record number, topping all previous listings in the 1939 Quigley Awards, was designated by a Judging Committee comprising Lou Pollock, Eastern advertising manager for Universal, Lou Lifton, Monogram advertising and publicity director and Harry Mandel, RKO Theatres advertising and publicity head.

Summer Months No Handicap

The record listing of Quarter-Master honors was made possible in great part by the unprecedented total of individual contributions entered during the two-week preliminary periods of the Quarter. From these, as is usual, were selected the outstanding promotions for Fortnight Appointments which were considered in the finals.

Continuing interest in the Competitions was also noted by the Judges in the fact that the unusual number of entries occurred during a period that covered the summer months, when promotional effort usually is not as spirited. This is borne out in the week-to-week consistency displayed by winners, especially among those who had scored in previous Quarters. Of the eight Plaque and Medal recipients, seven have been represented in the First or Second Quarter-Master listings, a majority in both. The same holds for the Citation winners, among whom are numbered entrants who won honors in previous Quarters.

Interest Turns to Last Quarter

And now all eyes turn to the Fourth Quarter which will definitely determine many of the Quarter-Master names to be represented in the Grand Awards judging. As the records show, the race is still wide open. Many previous winners are grouped neck-and-neck as the Awards tear into the stretch. There are six distinct Fortnight periods in which aspiring theatremen can register what they are doing for the boxoffice and their chances in the Awards. What they have already done to register is set down on the following page, with more to come.

PAST "FORTNIGHT" EXPLOITATIONS

Authorities Cooperate with Nelson On County Schools Premiere of "Oz"

With the school year just getting underway during Glenn Nelson's date on "Wizard of Oz" at the Harris, in Findlay, Ohio, theatreman contacted county school superintendants for permission of kids to attend a premiere of the picture. Theatreman gave passes to the drivers of the buses bringing the kids in and to the teachers accompanying them, children paying regular admission prices. Five schools, totaling 814 youngsters from a radius of eight to 10 miles, attended the showing in bannered busses, stunt landing two column story and art work in papers.

In advance of the arrival of the MGM travelling "Oz" truck, Nelson promoted paper to run a contest to find youngsters to fit the costumes representing the characters of the picture. Next step was tieup arranged with local automobile agency which furnished cars and trucks to form a parade, police department provided escort and granted permission for Nelson to park the truck in front of the theatre during run. Cooperating paper ran stories with art daily on the stunt.

McGee Forms Brenda Joyce Club Among Syracuse Univ. Sorority Gals

Neat tieup was arranged by Pat McGee at the Paramount, in Syracuse for "Here I Am a Stranger" when he persuaded the local chapter of Delta Gamma at Syracuse University to form a Brenda Joyce club in honor of the star who is a member of that sorority from USC. Girls attended the showing in a group and as a result a nice story was landed in the Daily Orange, Syracuse U publication. The Orange also ran a football score guessing contest which brought breaks for four days. In addition, a litho-offset bulletin was placed in all frat and sorority houses, cafeterias, dormitories and boarding houses on college grounds.

Leading restaurants and both major hotels cooperated on a Richard Greene special luncheon, the idea being that each patron ordering one of these was given a small envelope which contained either a pass or blank piece of paper. Ratio on this was one out of 15, 22 by 28 cards were posted in all spots plus menu space. McGee further tied up with the Greeters, organization which arranges to greet newcomers to Syracuse and introduce them to merchants, churches, etc. Tickets were presented with newspaper story as a result.

Caldwell Gives "The Women" Well Rounded Campaign

The consistency of his week-to-week campaigning at Loew's Valentine, in Toledo, is indicated in the representative job done by Wally Caldwell on "The Women," some 60 odd items being listed by the Round Tabler covering general exploitation, lobby and theatre front, windows, co-op ads, radio and newspaper breaks.

Over WTOL, the theatreman planted a radio dramatization with full picture, theatre and playdates credits, same station also running a six-day contest "What do you know about women?" for men only in addition to the complete MGM sponsorship programs, and a daily "Man-on-the-Street" broadcast in front of theatre. Spot announcements were landed on WSPD, electrical transcriptions on WYOL, a "Name the Song" contest and others. Newspaper coverage included art work on Shearer and Crawford, two-column headed story with drop head giving outline of story, intimate details of the productions, complete star credits and other essential details, publicity carried over into second week.

JANECKY CELEBRATES THEATRE'S 87 YEARS

To build up his "October Anniversary Month" campaign at the Academy of Music in New York, Manager Harold Janecky tied the celebration to the 87th anniversary of the original theatre of the same name which occupied a site opposite the present house. Displays of old posters, newspapers, photos of the early period decorated the lobby. Also featured was a 10-page souvenir program carrying outside ads and including historical data, house personnel and picture copy.

Merchants' Goodwill Booster Used By Wheeler for "Second Fiddle"

With the cooperation of local paper on Chicago's South Side, Manager J. Ray Wheeler at the Lex, in Chicago contacted six merchants, each in a different line of business and each in a position to get good distribution, for a full-page newspaper ad. Each store's ad carried a different scene from the picture "Second Fiddle," and heralds were distributed with each sale in the individual stores. To the first 100 patrons bringing the complete set of six heralds to the boxoffice, guest tickets were awarded. Cooperating merchants paid entire cost of ads and the printing and distribution of the colored heralds.

Most Popular Newsboy Chosen By Kalberer for "Golden Boy"

In connection with National Newsboys Week, celebrated currently with the opening of "Golden Boy" at the Indiana Theatre, in Washington, Ind., Manager A. J. Kalberer effected a tieup with the Herald where a contest was run to determine the most popular local newsboy. Cooperating paper ran coupons good for 100 votes daily week ahead, ballots to be dropped in box in lobby.

In addition to the honor of being designated as "Golden Boy", carrier winning highest number of votes received a wrist watch promoted from local jeweler. Second highest received a coat and third haberdashery, all promoted.

First Anniversary of Kid Club Celebrated by Brien with Party

In the second run Prince Theatre, in Ambridge, Pa., Manager Lige Brien to celebrate the first anniversary of his kid club put over a sock goodwill campaign which included the parents. Board of Trade ran a front page resolution advising parents and children of the special free Saturday morning show which consisted of free stage show of 36 acts, 47 members of the Kid Club participating. Ice cream was promoted from cooperating merchant and 1000 kids strong paraded to theatre carrying banners plugging following day's attraction.

Highlight of the parade was tieup with the Aliquippa and Ambridge bicycle safety clubs members who rode to theatre carrying "Jeepers creepers use your peepers" banners as a streamline slogan in relation to safety precaution. Secretary of the Motor Club gave an interesting talk to the 2,100 folks who attended the show. Giant birthday cake was also secured gratis and Brien acted as master of ceremonies during the festivities.

Sock Newspaper Campaign Landed By DiPesa on "Wizard of Oz"

Headed by national ads, art and stories, publicist Joe Di Pesa planted 80 cuts in local dailies in advance and during run of "Wizard of Oz" at Loew's State, in Boston. Coverage included serial run for six days, full page pictorial feature in Sunday Post, roto layout in the Sunday Herald and Globe. Much was made in the papers over the presentation of an "Oz" trophy to Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox by Fred Greenway, manager of the theatre. Contest angle was covered by running daily six characters appearing in the picture, guest tickets to those submitting best coloring jobs.

Music wrappers with picture and theatre copy were distributed from all music stores in city, chain druggist was tied up for special window streamers, imprinted balloons, some of which contained guest tickets were released from prominent spot downtown and radio tieups included six weekly plugs over WEEI, transcriptions used over WMEX and WAAB, the latter coming through with a special Hollywood highlights program and WBZ tied up their special kiddie program for a five-day contest.

Magazine Agency Plugs "Oz" Opening for Lippe

Tying up with the local distributors of the Red Book Magazine, Al Lippe, director of publicity at Loew's State in Newark for his advance on "Wizard of Oz", agency put out 500 cards on newsstands and dealers' windows, selling title, cast and playdates.

Also arranged by Lippe was a coloring contest for kids which was distributed through 75 chain drugstores; window posters plugged the slant, and each store had available on all counters 6 by 15 inch heralds with cuts of various characters in the picture which were to be colored for prizes; 10,000 contest blanks are reported to have been used.

BOTWICK BROADCASTS SATURDAY KID SHOW

Program Evolved by Theatre Now in Second Year; Staged Before Screen Show Begins

The M & P State in Portland, Maine, opens at 11 in the morning with the only possible time for a Saturday kid show being two hours starting at nine. Since it has been found difficult to give a two-hour kid show for 10 cents when the children can see the regular three-hour program for the same amount, Manager Harry Botwick created a radio program, "Recess Time," a copyrighted title, to tie in with a satisfactory children's show at the theatre and to fill the local need for a suitable juvenile program on the air.

The program was built to give children a broadcast of their own along the lines of Vox Pop and also to allow them to see for themselves the workings of an actual broadcast. These purposes have aided Botwick in putting on a novel children's Saturday show which would be entertaining and boxoffice.

Contests Divided in Three Parts

Since the screen program at the theatre starts at 11, the tiein was made with WCSH to put on a 30-minute sustaining program starting at 10:30, the program to be conducted for children 16 years of age and under. The house opens at 10 o'clock and by 10:20 Botwick and the radio executives have selected from the audience at least 12 children who are brought up on the stage to participate in the program. It starts with a theme song, "School Days" in the form of a community sing, accompanied by slides on the screen. Then the lineup for the broadcast is announced followed by more community singing, accompanied by organ.

The contest proper is broken up into three sections, which might include, for instance, a Spelling Bee, True & False, Questions & Answers, etc. After the first eliminations, a guest performer is introduced, usually a talented child who plays or sings. Of the contestants who have survived the first eliminations, another contest is put on until but four children remain.

Request Numbers Are Popular

Then follows a request number, selections played on the organ that have been requested by children listening in from all over the state. Names, ages, schools and towns in which they reside are announced before each request number. Then the finals of the contest are held and announcements made of the winners. The theme song follows the closing announcement for the finals.

Some of the contests used by Botwick are Song Guessing, Questions and Answers in which, for instance, is asked, capitals of states, rivers, etc. Other contests have to do with names of nursery fame, names in comic pages, public life, sports figures, spelling bees, etc.

Prize Distribution Effective

Among the most effective ways of distributing the prizes is a large glass bowl on the stage next to the microphone which children use. Bowl contains 50 to 75 small envelopes each containing anywhere from one cent to a dollar in silver, each envelope marked with amount of money. Children are usually allowed to select their own envelopes, which is often cause for amusement since contestant who supplies a difficult answer may receive a small amount and a child who answers an easier question may receive a greater sum. In the spelling contest, if a word is misspelled, children drop the envelope they select and deposit it in loser's bowl, placed next to winner's bowl, contents of the former divided between winner and runnerup.

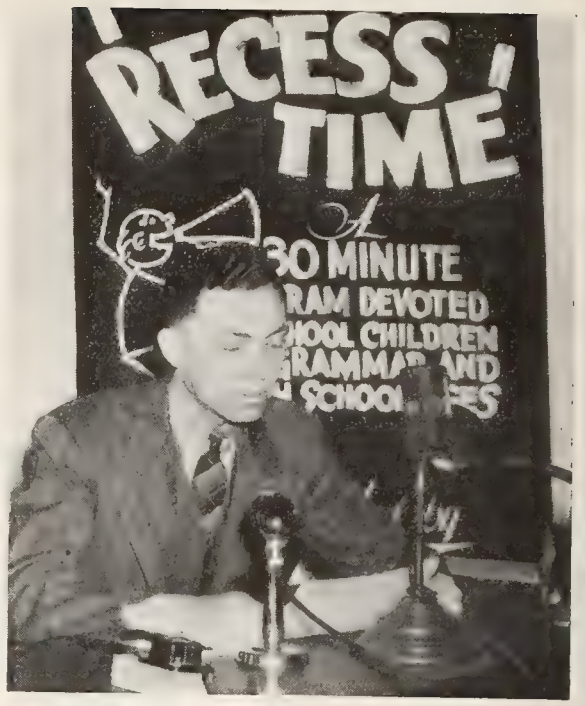
Bell Announces Skates Winners

Also awarded are a few pairs of roller skates. An automatic bell controlled from the desk by Botwick goes off sometime during the contest. Contestant who is standing before mike at that time wins the skates whether a correct reply or not is given. Generally though, it is arranged that a boy and a girl each win a pair.

Announcer from the radio station handles the straight announcements, introductions, etc., with Botwick conducting the contest for the children. The Round Tabler advises this close theatre participation, since it sells the theatre to listeners-in and builds house prestige.

Theatre Advertising Found Valuable

Regular admission is charged, the show being open to adults and children alike who are invited to arrive when the house opens, take in the radio program and remain to see the regular show. When the feature attraction is not suitable for children, Botwick arranges for a number of cartoons at the start of the screen program, so that the children can get their money's worth if they do not care to sit through the main feature.



An extremely valuable result is the advertising received by the theatre during the broadcast, over the air and at the theatre, especially as a kid show since it was originally conceived and devised to please the children. In addition to the publicity value, the returns pay off all costs, build up business for the theatre each Saturday morning and do much to create further goodwill among the youngsters and their parents.

Botwick reports that the success of the program was in no small part due to the wide curiosity of patrons who had never seen a radio program actually put on.

Program Held Over for Second Year

Program was run for 35 weeks during the fall, winter and spring of 1938 and 1939 and its success has carried it over for a similar period in 1939 and 1940. To indicate the effectiveness of the broadcast, Botwick was allowed by the station to put on a program for 17 weeks during the summer months at the same period in order to "freeze" the time and hold it until he was ready to go on again in the fall, the first program this year starting on September 30th.

Success of the idea, writes Harry, is due to the fact that the program is designed for school children and presented in their own language.

Morgan Petitions City Council To Name Street "Fifth Avenue"

Citywide interest was stirred in Macon, Ga., when O. N. Morgan, manager of the Grand Theatre, petitioned the city council to consider a proposal to change the names of local streets to Fifth Avenue, the petition coming just in advance of the engagement of "Fifth Avenue Girl."

Three giant books were placed in the downtown area along with cutouts of Ginger Rogers and ushers solicited signatures. Petition was presented in lieu of local confusion brought about due to lack of definition of some of Macon's city thoroughfares wherein their various sections are designated by varying names. Papers picked up the angle and much was made over the stunt with stories, all of which mentioned the picture title and playdates.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Animated Railroad Display Used by Moss for "Pacific"

Secured from the Union Pacific Railroad was an animated, illuminated display of old and new trains with unusual star figures, etc., which was featured in his lobby by Dick Moss at the Fox Belmont in Los Angeles for his date on "Union Pacific." Through tieup made with Pennzoil, theatreman promoted oil for giveaway to his patrons.

On "Rose of Washington Square," Moss constructed a musical lobby display consisting of piano, music scale, sheet covers of tune, hits, etc. Entire staff wore imprinted roses, and songs from the picture were played over house mike week ahead of opening.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Star Discs Sell "Juarez"

Two weeks ahead of "Juarez" at the Library, in Warren, Pa., Manager George C. Sarvis made up special 16-inch discs of the stars and placed them on easels in lobby, these later were moved to a downtown store window with appropriate tiein copy. Action heralds were distributed throughout the surrounding area, broadcast was held over WJTN and announcements made from the stage by Sarvis.

IN COURTS

20th-Fox Wins English Action

Twentieth-Century-Fox's "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" does not infringe the copyright of a song of the same name, according to the judgment of the judicial committee of the privy council, the British Empire's highest court. The suit was brought by Francis Day and Hunter, Ltd., music publishers, against Twentieth-Century-Fox, Ltd., and Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd. The producing and distributing company and the theatre company both won judgments.

The case had a long legal history. The British supreme court with Sir Lyman Poore Duff, Chief Justice of Canada, presiding, decided only after an appeal was taken from the Ontario Court of Appeal which had reversed a decision of Justice John A. McEvoy of Toronto. The highest court decided that first of all the song did not have the notice of copyright printed on each copy, and anyway the use of the title did not mean the song had been used in the film. Also it had not been proved that the title had been copied and no one thought he was going to hear the song when he went to see the picture. The judgment ordered the music publishers to pay the costs of the appeal.

Roxy Theatre Appeals For Tax Reduction

Roxy Theatre, Inc., this week petitioned the New York supreme court to order a reduction of $950,000 on the assessed valuation of the Roxy theatre in a writ of certiorari filed against the City Tax Commission. The Commission was directed by Justice Julius Miller to respond to the writ on November 6th.

Depositions Taken in St. Louis Libel Suit

Depositions of Chris Zotos, owner of the Roosevelt theatre, St. Louis, and Nat E. Steinberg, president of Republic Pictures Corporation of St. Louis, have been taken in connection with the $200,000 libel suit brought in that city by Frankie Baker against Republic, Republic Pictures Corporation of St. Louis, Republic Mid-West Film Distributors, Inc., Chester Erskine, Jack Kirkland, the estate of Lilyan Tashman, Chester Morris and Helen Morgan.

The plaintiff, who says she is the original "Frankie" of the "Frankie and Johnny" ballad, charges that she was libeled in the Republic film based on the song.

Copyright Suit Begun

The $250,000 copyright infringement suit of Legette Blythe against Loew's, Inc., and MGM has started in the Charlotte Federal District Court. Blythe charges that the defendants made illegal use of his book, "Marshal Ney: A Dual Life," in their picture, "The Bravest of the Brave."

Movie Quiz Suit Dropped

The plagiarism suit brought by Edward J. Pfeiffer against the Quiz contest of the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign has been dropped. Edward Churchill and Donahue and Coe, Inc., had been named defendants.

Question No. 4 in the Bluebook School

The Bluebook School, conducted in the HERALD for many years by F. H. Richardson, has been resumed, based on the new Second Revision of the Sixth Edition of Mr. Richardson's Bluebook of Projection. Under the new presentation of the material, projectionists are asked to submit answers, as formerly, but often the answer that will be published will be that of Mr. Richardson himself, or of other specialists in projection and sound. This procedure has been adopted with the thought that it will serve the real purpose of the "school": to encourage and assist in study and at the same time facilitate preparation of effective answers.

Previous questions beginning with the first, which appeared in the September 2nd issue, are as follows :

QUESTION NO. 1: What is feedback? Reverse feedback? Interelectrode capacitance? Oscillation?

QUESTION NO. 2: (a) What is exact width of 35 mm. film sound track? (b) What characteristics of the film concern projectionists most? (c) Describe, in detail, correct method of making film splices.

QUESTION NO. 3: Name two classes of circuits found in modern amplifiers? What types of electrical power are required by sound systems? What apparatus in an amplifier functions as an electrical valve and why is it not called a valve, in this country at least?

QUESTION NO. 4: Explain the various effects of high and low speed intermittent movements. What approximate speed has been generally adopted for professional projectors? For what reasons was it finally adopted?

Answers will begin to appear as soon as several questions have been submitted.

Charles W. Rackliffe

Charles W. Rackliffe, 79, for many years an operator of theatres in Holyoke, Springfield and Northampton, Mass., died in Holyoke on October 12th. He owned the Suffolk and Majestic theatres in Holyoke but had leased them several years ago to Boston interests. Mr. Rackliffe formerly leased the Academy of Music in Northampton and the Bijou theatre in Springfield. Surviving are a daughter and two brothers.

Samuel Diege

Samuel Diege, 37, production manager for Fine Arts studio in Hollywood, died in Los Angeles October 15th, of a heart attack.

Frederic B. Wagner

Frederic B. Wanger, 47, head booker at Twentieth Century-Fox's Chicago exchange, died in that city on October 12th. The funeral was held Sunday, October 15th.

Nate Leipzig, 66, famous magician and sleight-of-hand artist, died in New York October 15th.

OBITUARIES

Ford Sterling, Comedian, Dies

Ford Sterling, one of the first great slapstick motion picture comedians, died in Hollywood on October 13th.

In the years just before the World War the Chief of the Keystone Cops was one of the best known characters in America. Mr. Sterling was not only a great humorist himself but he was the guide of many who came after him. He gave his own over-sized comic shoes to Chaplin when Charlie needed a funnier costume to stay in pictures. When Mack Sennett was searching for a new idea, it was his chief assistant, Ford Sterling, who suggested bathing beauties.

When Mack Sennett started making pictures in 1912 Ford Sterling was one of the original actors; the others were Mabel Normand, Pathé Lehrman and Fred Mace. For the next few years Sterling and his Keystone Cops—Slim Summerville, Billy Hauber, Billy Gilbert, Bobby Dunn, Charles Avery and Charlie Parrott (Charley Chase)—were the characters in the funniest comedies of the day. The comedies were ground out at the rate of one a week. Sterling was on the throwing and receiving end of innumerable custard pies; he wielded a savage night stick; chased and was chased; fell out of and clambered into black marias.

Sterling played in the first long comedy, "Tillie's Punctured Romance." The other players were Marie Dressler whom Sterling brought to Sennett's company, Charlie Chaplin and Mabel Normand.

George Stitch—Sterling's real name—was born Nov. 3, 1883, in Las Crosse, Wis. At an early age he ran away. His first engagement was with George Hutchinson's Shakespeare repertory company. Later he worked with the "Flying Leos" in a circus. After five years, Sterling entered vaudeville. Mr. Sennett signed him while he was playing in a New York musical comedy. Together with Mabel Normand and Mr. Sennett he formed Keystone Comedies. He appeared in over 100 pictures since 1912.

Mr. Sterling had been in a hospital since June last year. In August his leg was amputated. Teddy Sampson, his wife, survives. The funeral was held on Tuesday.

William Robert Mohr

William Robert Mohr, 46, head of the bonding and security department of the Actors Equity Association, died in Chappaqua, N. Y., on October 13th. Mr. Mohr was born in New York and a graduate of Dickinson College at Carlisle, Pa., and Fordham Law School. He joined the legal staff of Actors Equity in 1924 and has been head of the bonding and security department since 1925. Mr. Mohr received and disbursed more than $7,500,000 paid by Equity on salaries and claims of members. His mother, Mrs. J. Leonard Mohr, survives. The funeral was from his residence at Far View last Sunday.

John R. Minhinnick

John R. Minhinnick, former manager of the Grand theatre, London, Ont., and manager of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, died October 11th in Toronto. Mr. Minhinnick for many years had been representative of the late Ambrose J. Small and in 1922 became a director of Trans-Canada Theatres which acquired Small's interest.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

ON REVIEWING

SPECIAL significance attaches to the announcement of the Chicago Daily News, staid, old and a leader in mid-continent journalism, that its reviews of motion pictures are hereafter to be reportorial rather than critical.

Our Chicago correspondence indicates also that Mr. Lloyd Lewis, drama editor, has issued orders that there are to be reviews only of pictures of merit.

Just incidentally it is to be remembered that Mr. Lewis has had abundant motion picture theatre experience, including service with the Balaban & Katz houses in Chicago. There he dealt out the space buy among the Chicago papers and other media. Also he had many the errand of diplomacy. He had just recently made a change of picture critics in his department.

This impinges on an oft repeated point raised in the office of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD endeavours, within the limits of journalistic performance, to make its reviews of motion picture product reports to the showman of what is offered, not in terms of opinion but in inventory, so that the exhibitor may make his own decisions.

There remains, however, an appreciable margin of showmen who say that they want a review to say in the first two lines the equivalent of "wow" or "lousy".

It is the HERALD'S opinion that no one knows that much about pictures. If authority were so precise and absolute, or even remotely approximately in the region of half accurate, a lot of pictures would never be made, never released and some of the best paid executives of production would be worth more than they get. All that can be said in that sector is that one way to identify the biggest executives is to see who makes the biggest mistakes.

A CONVENIENT example comes to mind at the moment. The other day Twentieth Century-Fox delivered "The Rains Came". Many critics, including notably Mr. Frank Nugent of the Times, took exception to cast, story and everything in sight. Several of this editor's confidants declared the picture tremendously less than good. Then it went out and did amazingly good business. That, for the purpose of the readers, the showmen, is what a picture is supposed to be, makes it a good picture.

(Happily, Mr. William R. Weaver, our Hollywood editor, thought very well of the box-office possibilities, and said so.)

If the average review of "The Rains Came" had been accepted, the showmen would have been wrong.

Just casually the other day, too, we chanced on the fact that Paramount had an argument with its partner, Mr. M. A. Lightman of Memphis, about "What a Life", Jackie Cooper and Betty Field. Mr. Lightman didn't think so much of it and its prospects. Paramount, as the saying goes, "sold away" to Mr. Howard Waugh for Warner's Strand. Mr. Waugh liked it and the report is it gave Malco strong competition against "Honeymoon in Bali", a more highly rated picture.

No indictment of the judgment of any of the showmen concerned is involved. There is, however, evidence that every one had best be his own expert.

The HERALD will continue to endeavour to tell the exhibitor who and what's in the picture, and after that he can form his own opinion of whether or not it has promises for his special attention.

CENSORIOUS

THERE'S plenty of discussion elsewhere in this issue about the hullabaloo over the alleged excitement of official Washington over "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington", but most surprisingly of all comes this week from the usually urbane, suave, restrained Mr. Pete Harrison a piece in his "Harrison's Reports" entitled "Frank Capra's Lack of Good Taste".

Mr. Harrison says he resents "Mr. Capra's casting a reflection on the integrity of the United States Senate". That's very nice and patriotic, but all Senators are not the Senate, and since when should Senators be protected by a censorship of the sacrosanct, when Kings and Presidents, even, can be criticized?

Also Mr. Harrison thinks that Congress "must make it possible for them (exhibitors) to reject such a picture". How would Peter woof if Columbia Pictures Corporation took the picture away from some exhibitor who has bought it?

JACK RABBITS

A CERTAIN caution about the incidental display of trade-marked goods among the properties of the motion picture is indicated again just now. "Advertising Age," journal of the trade, records that one Mr. C. Nelson Schrader has undertaken "a reporting service to inform advertisers of the extent to which products are mentioned on the screen and to evaluate the type of impression left in the minds of theatre goers by these mentions."

Inescapably the screen will be hearing from this, in various directions, before long. It may be anticipated that the reactions will be no large help to the amusement industry.

It is reported that in 140 feature dramas Mr. Schrader found "alcoholic beverages were referred to in one way or another in 137." He found 113 mentions favourable, 24 unfavourable. There is a considerable and militant contingent which will be deciding against that 113.

Mr. Schrader found some pretty good liquor woven into the drama and reports that the scene of Charles Boyer and Irene Dunne ordering pink champagne at a ship's bar has trebled the demand for colored champagne since.

It is not likely that any moderately sane producer will be permitting the invasion of his million dollar wares by the petty possibilities of revenues or gifts from blandishing merchandisers, but the subject is an acutely tender one. There are memories of other days. This writer can recall a weekly chore of cutting close-ups of Apperson Jackrabbit roadsters out of each installment of a famous Western serial, circa 1917.

Also it would be absurd to invade the verisimilitude of picture representations by requiring the elimination of all incidental appearances of brands and signs. A shot of Broadway without its blaze of neon bulletins would be a painful fiction. If the hero, or the villain, wants a double Scotch, both Haig & Haig, or a spot of Jamieson, let him say so. The sole question is: Does it belong in the story?

This Week in the News

Official Hell-raising

JUST AFTER LUNCH Monday, New York home offices and some southwestern theatre executives returned to Times Square offices to find the telephone a-jingle with calls from Dallas offices to find out what to do about Texas officers standing-by and demanding possession of the books.

The very sovereign state of Texas, which has quite as complete a trust-busting and business regulation program as Thurman Arnold of the United States of America, has got around to the motion pictures on its program of investigation. (See page 14.)

MEANWHILE, like a high hot wind off the desert, Lyle Boren, Democratic congressman from Oklahoma, in Washington had at the motion picture industry with great violence in an "extension of remarks in the Congressional Record," last week.

Commonly those "extensions" are matters not really delivered on the floor but written into the record for subsequent distribution to constituencies. That is sometimes known as propaganda.

Mr. Boren delivered himself of headline stuff, saying: "I invite your thoughtful analysis to careful comparison of the methods of the Al Capones, the Pretty Boy Floyds, the Dutch Schultzes, and so forth, to those of the movie moguls. . . ."

The Congressman urged that present international problems were not to cause internal issues to be ignored and he observed that "a few of us have prepared, with your aid, to make a comprehensive measure of the Neely bill. We plan to put more guts and teeth into it."

Also Mr. Boren thinks the controlling executives of the industry pay themselves too well: "twenty-four times as much . . . as other leading industries pay their executives."

MORE TROUBLE and adverse excitement began in Washington within the week with attacks on "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," a highly praised Columbia-Capra drama which had been previewed for official Washington at Constitution Hall the week before. The Senators and official Washington, which applauded the picture, did not know they had been hurt until a trouble-promoting press fomented objection. Curiously the leadership in that came from the news columns and editorial page of the Chicago Tribune—which, if you'll be remembering, a number of years back did a considerable job of its own on certain aspects of the Senate and one Senator William Lorimer, "blond boss," ultimately unseated as part of an amazingly ramified series of melodramas in real life, and a hotter story than Mr. Capra recorded. That one was a Chicago Tribune extra-special crusade-campaign. (See page 13.)

Hollywood Whittles

HOLLYWOOD this week continued its exceedingly tedious and painful process of whittling readjustment to a shrinking amusement world, but only thin shavings fluttered into the news. The big slices, if any, would affect the sitters-on-the-lid, still secrets for a while.

Sample item, at the Paramount Studios there's a "no personal calls" tag on every telephone, and orders like that have been issued at other studios and even so far East as the United Artists' office in New York. Twentieth Century's Westwood Studios cancelled many $3 a month extension lines.

Hollywood's funsters were passing the remark that the phone restrictions would probably be tough on the bookies when Santa Anita opens.

But the East needn't indulge in cracks about that. It was to be observed that a meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in New York was coincidentally postponed the day of a world's series ball game. And not one in the lot of them had a grandmother to sacrifice.

Speaking of telephone calls—it is not the personal calls forbidden to clerks that matter—it's those hour long talks between Hollywood and New York, and way-stations including key cities, that count up. In one big year, 1937, the motion picture business—talking to itself—spent $970,000 on "long distance," including, that year, a lot of trans-Atlantic conversation. There's less of that now—but this is still positively "the talking picture business." Probably only the horse race and bookmaking "industry" can compare in volume.

THE WARTIME WHITTLING movement continues manifestations on assorted payrolls, including, especially including the Hollywood "Hays Office." Inferentially announced was the coming departure of Kyle Palmer, printed locally in Hollywood as an item about his returning to his old paper the Los Angeles Times, as political editor.

To some familiar with the fact that Mr. Palmer was appointed, among other good reasons, because of his closely friendly relations with Governor Culbert Olson, and of the special miscellany of services extraordinary rendered in decidedly extra-mural matters, there was surprise in the current eventuation.

Mr. Palmer's severance appears to have been delayed until the official completion of one of those extra-mural jobs.

From the same office, it was reported that on the same date, November 1, Gabe York, Hollywood administrator of the advertising code, is also to depart from the organization, with his labours being taken over by Tom Petty.

THE ADVERTISING CODE reference brings to mind the increasing tendency to the horizontal in the feminine components of current advertising art. The early perpendicularity of the advertising reform period has been lost to a slant like the leaning tower of Pisa for months, and now with "The Housekeeper's Daughter" the movement is a full ninety degrees. It is, on the level, a matter of angle, achieving the level. The trend is toward those untrammeled days when the trade journal advertising outstripped the Police Gazette.

EVIDENCE and symbol of the low tide of employment in Hollywood was afforded with the publication in the local dailies of an advertisement:

> ATTENTION old timers, bit players, char. actors of screen, stage, radio, opera—all ages: Wealthy visitors will pay to meet, talk to, and entertain you. Register with us Friday, 3-5, 7-9. Bring 8x10 prof. photo. FOUR STAR AGENCY.

The argument is that since tourists cannot get into the studios they will buy contact. That opinion squares with the fact that a New York sucker will spend ten dollars and half a day trying to get a pair of three dollar theatre seats.

ANOTHER DIVERGENT commercial exploitation came to attention with the publication in the New York Times Magazine section Sunday last of an advertisement that Norman Krasna, long and still profitably employed script writer, now at work on a Deanna Durbin vehicle, was operating with Warren E. Schutt, one time Columbia professor, a "home study school . . . for the express purpose of discovering and developing amateur writing talent. . . ."

EVEN HOLLYWOOD enjoyed surprise with the announcement that Louella O. Parsons planned next month for a personal appearance tour, with a notion of being accompanied by a troupe of picture personalities. She said that bookings were being made for picture theatres all over the country.

November 3, Louella is to introduce Kate Smith on Miss Smith's regular program, the scene of which has been shifted to Hollywood. Part of the program is to be given over to dramatization of "Drums along the Mohawk," 20th Century-Fox production, with Henry Fonda and Claudette Colbert. The Smith troupe gets transportation to Hollywood and studio access for interviews. It is understood that the studio will pay stars the equivalent of the American Federation of Radio Artists scale, which is considerably less than the once standard five thousand dollar per appearance per "name."

A similar treatment for Paramount's "The Light that Failed" is in negotiation for a month later.

Conclusion jumpers have assumed that these stars-on-the-air developments were Miss Parsons' project, but it appears on a second look that Bill Bacher, the radio producer who started M-G-M's "Good News" program two years ago, and then withdrew, has been exploring the documents and finds in players' contracts an exploitation clause which allows one air appearance to boost each film appearance. This is supposed to answer objections of the Guild and the alleged "studio objections" to film stars competing with themselves by radio.

"Mohawk" and "The Light that Failed" are both Bacher projects, ingeniously arranged. They are said to be the first of a projected series of twelve "Movie Nights." They tend to show that where there's a Bill there's a way.

As William R. Weaver, Hollywood editor, remarked in an aside, "just about everything in the radio-film situation seems to have been taken care of, except the exhibitors."

This incidental return to the air brought a minor flurry among players who mistakenly assumed that Louella would head a new regular program, and who remembered that Campbell's soup show on which they appeared without fee. The Kate Smith-Parsons appearance is, says Louella, "a one-shot" idea.

When it was suggested to Miss Parsons that it was more than remarkable for a picture columnist to embark on a personal appearance tour, she replied: "It is not. Ed Sullivan does it. Winchell does it. Why can't I?"

The fact that Sullivan and Winchell alike were vaudeville performers of stage experience and circulation before they became "writers" was not brought into the discussion.

AND SPEAKING OF Louella, who has laid down the law that she may not be scooped, Hollywood got a merry titillation last Sunday morning when blonde, agile, slim and vociferous Hedda Hopper, actress columnist, flowered in a page one story in the Los Angeles Times with an interview in which she indicated that James Roosevelt, the Goldwyn vice president, declined to affirm or deny a divorce rumor.

That was and is not to be forgiven by Louella. Monday, her Los Angeles Examiner caught up by printing a substantially identical interview in its news columns, but unsigned.

Miss Hopper operates with a staff of seven rumor hawks, while Miss Parsons has eight. Hedda is now one up and there'll be something waiting at the cross-roads.

Came Tuesday and Louella lashed out in italic bold face, firing both barrels of her fowling piece to say:

"Now that James Roosevelt, insurance-selling son of F. D. R., and more recently a part of our movie industry, no longer denies the rift in his domestic life, we see no reason why we should keep the promise we made to him to say nothing. . . ."

What Louella then said was so much that it did not appear in the New York Journal-American—or other discreet Eastern papers.

As has been remarked before, "Hell hath no fury like Louella scooped."

Fan—Bubble—Bust

WITH FIGURES which showed that her gross was good but her net was gone, Miss Sally Rand filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in San Francisco last week. She wafted herself to fame with a fan, got rich on a bubble and went bust with all her clothes on running a show at the San Francisco Fair. She listed liabilities of $64,631 and assets of $8,067. And it may be observed that Miss Sally has never been one to conceal her assets.

Serial Flurry

IF THURMAN ARNOLD, assistant attorney general and Washington's exponent of American-free-for-all competition in industry, has had reports on recent maneuvers in the serial situation he must have been pleased indeed. Three companies produce serials, on normal schedules of four chapter plays a year each, giving a total output of twelve. Since serials have arrived at a standard of fifteen installments, it follows that the maximum that a theatre can consume is four. Recently one of the serial makers got late on the schedule. Curbstone rumors arose as leaves fly in the autumn wind, and competing salesmen hurried out to sell into a market allegedly menaced with shortage. Serials were going to be few and hard to get—maybe prices would be a lot higher, too. Now, again, the schedule is back to twelve.

Columbia Pictures Corporation this week put into production and announced "The Shadow," new serial.

France doesn't count

SECOND THOUGHT about the effect of the war on the French market for American films has left American distributors considerably more reconciled to their fate whatever it may be.

The fact is that war conditions in the Republic are not likely to have appreciable effect upon the operations of American companies in that market for the simple reason that for some time French operations, while on a grand scale which involved a great show of activity, have produced little or nothing in the way of net profit.

Operations in France have been expensive—in personnel, in government fees and in the general cost of doing business. For several of the companies profitable operation has seemed to be just around the corner, but it stayed just there. Hence, even the total loss of the French, which is not expected, would fall far short of being a disaster for the American industry.

BEFORE AND AFTER addressing a convention of Women's Clubs in Omaha at which he assailed the Neely Bill and its proponents and political pressure groups in general, C. C. BEEFSTEAK FOR THE PIONEERS

REPEATING the reminiscences which poured forth when the Picture Pioneers were organized last Spring, more than 125 men who have been active in the industry for 25 years or over gathered for their Fall Conference in Colbert's Restaurant, New York, last week. A class of 35 candidates for admission was sworn in at the conference by Judge Ferdinand Pecora, only honorary member of the organization. According to Jack Cohn, House Manager, and moving spirit in the formation of the group, many applications for charters have been received from out-of-town groups and plans are under way to organize them. New members and old are caught between reminiscences in the pictures left and below.

PRESS TELLS SENATE "MR. SMITH" INSULTS IT, SO SENATE IS INSULTED

Chicago Tribune News Letter Upsets Applause of Preview but Correspondents Doubt "Ganging Up" for Neely Bill

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Propagators of disturbance managed to set the Washington pot a-boiling again this week by a fomenting and poulticing project which aimed to make the entire United States Senate sore about "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

The new Columbia-Capra picture about a senator was being attacked as an indictment of "the entire senate." All this after the officially applauded preview given at Constitution Hall in Washington the week before.

No Criticism at Preview

It appears that the Senators and official Washington could not tell that they had been insulted by merely looking at the picture. They had first to be told by a trouble-hunting daily press, exemplified by the procedure of the Chicago Tribune, which specializes on raising hell with all and sundry in Washington—the same Chicago Tribune which, between 1910 and 1914, did quite a job of its own on the United States Senate, and, in particular, on Senator William Lorimer, the "blonde boss" from Illinois, who was finally unseated as chairman of a powerful Senate committee after one of the most relentless journalistic attacks ever directed at Washington legislators.

Columbia Pictures' officials emerging from the Constitutional Hall preview, along about 11:25 on Tuesday night, October 17th, were, naturally, on the professional lookout for any opinionated words that might be dropped by any of the 45 Senators and 250 Congressmen present. No adverse political criticisms were heard, according to a Columbia official, reporting Wednesday at the New York home office.

Accused of Insult

However, four days later, on Saturday, October 21, the Washington office of the Chicago Tribune Press Service sent out to the 20-odd daily newspaper subscribers to its service, a daily news letter in which Columbia, Capra and "Mr. Smith" were accused, individually and collectively, of "insulting" the Senate, the Chicago Tribune reporting that as a result resentment in Congress was high and that "several Senators have organized to put through" the anti-block and blind selling bill pending in Congress, in retaliation for the "malignment," thus "wounding the movie moguls where it hurts most—in the pocketbook."

The author of the article was identified by the by-line appearing over the account in the Washington Times-Herald as one Willard Edwards, a political columnist on the staff of the Washington Bureau of the Chicago Tribune Press Service. His name does not appear on any of the identical accounts in other subscribing newspapers in hand, not even in the parent Chicago Tribune in Chicago, where the editors took the "insults" into the editorial columns, saying:

". . . The Senators present were soon hot under the collar. . . . The scenes on the Senate floor were in high degree uncomplimentary to the honesty, intelligence, and decency of the legislative body whose members had been invited to see the production.

"It was 'a movie publicity undertaking' that 'kicked back at its promoters.' "

Say Senators "Writhed"

The Chicago Tribune Press Service's political-column observations by Mr. Edwards were added: "If opinions among Senators in the last few days are to be credited, Senate Bill No. 280, making compulsory block booking of films illegal, will become a law early in the next session." The column described Senators "writhing in their seats" at the preview.

Two days following publication of the Chicago Tribune's syndicated story, the New York Times, in but a single edition, carried an Associated Press dispatch from Washington, saying that Senate Majority Leader Alben William Barkley told reporters on Monday that a "motion picture dealing with the Senate was 'silly and stupid.' "

"In the picture," continued the AP account, " 'Mr. Smith' barely escaped being ousted from the Senate. Mr. Barkley said that the picture 'makes the Senate look like a bunch of crooks and would give a false impression throughout the country.' "

There were no formal Senatorial comments.

Only in the Columns

Columbia officials in New York Wednesday pointed out that the only "political" attack in the press came from the political columns.

It was stated at Columbia that the company and its officials were "in the background" at the preview and in its arrangement, explaining the exhibition was conducted by the National Press Club, the membership of which embraces some 900 reporters and political and feature writers of Washington and elsewhere.

Fred Perkins, of the Washington Bureau of Scripps-Howard, and the National Press Club's entertainment committee chairman, last July wrote to Frank Capra, director of "Mr. Smith," in Hollywood, requesting a showing of the production, in honor of James Preston, oldtime Press Club member of the Senate press gallery, who was acting at the time as technical advisor for Mr. Capra during filming.

The request was sent to Columbia's home office, from where the Press Club was advised that a special preview would be considered if the Club appoint a committee to view the production in advance. Accordingly, Mr. Perkins, as entertainment committee chairman; Arthur Hatchen, of International News Service, and Walter Karig, Washington correspondent of the Newark Evening News, arrived in New York Tuesday, October 3rd, and, at 8:50 P.M., were escorted by Columbia officials to a special surprise preview of "Mr. Smith" at the Dyckman Street theatre in the Inwood section of New York. Columbia now reports that the Press Club's committee accepted the film favorably, and approved a preview for Washington's press and politicians.

Columbia, it was said, proceeded from that point, but the Press Club participated in actual arrangements, even listing and sitting the invited politicians and dignitaries according to tern Washington protocol—Congressmen did not rate a box, Senators did, and so on.

Amusement But No Rancor

From Washington on Wednesday came word that around the lounges of the National Press Club the "traditional Hollywood depiction of a Washington correspondent" ('Mr. Smith' has such a character) "aroused great amusement, but no particular rancor among Washington newspapermen."

However, it was admitted that because of some reverberations it probably will be a little more difficult in the future for any picture company to get the National Press Club to "sponsor" a film.

The Press Club lounges also echoed to words that, while some Senators felt privately "Mr. Smith" should never have gone to Washington, there is little likelihood of any retaliatory action in the way of a "ganging up" for passage of Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely's anti-block selling bill, as was suggested by the Chicago Tribune syndicate.

Wednesday's Washington reports from its Press Club further said that "traditional Senatorial dignity" was principally involved, not to forget a fear of impressions that might be carried to constituencies.

As if in answer to this, if not to point out "the privileges of the freedom of the press" (and the screen), Columbia Pictures on Wednesday began a three-day series of full-page advertisement "messages" under the general label: "Liberty Is Too Precious a Thing to Be Buried in Books," quoting from dialogue by Hollywood's James Stewart, the Senator "hero" of the plot in "Mr. Smith."

Press Stories Quoted

Without any of the commercial copy of the usual theatrical advertisements as to exhibition date, place and price, the "messages" were confined to quotations from the press, among them:

"He (Frank Capra) has set himself to the task of pointing out and upholding the workable principles of our representative democracy. . . . he sets out to make film audiences aware of the significance of governmental benefits which we take for granted."—The Cincinnati Enquirer.

"We would stake a New Deal dollar against a war-time mark that 94 out of 96 Senators will chuckle over it as heartily as the audiences, recognizing it as the best possible proof of America's loyalty to and continued belief in, the democratic principle."—The New York Times.

"Running through the whole picture, you will detect a deep reverence, a warm affection for democracy."—Editorial in the New York Daily Mirror.

"One could read dozens of books . . . and learn far less about the actual workings of democracy than one may ascertain by attending 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington.' "—New York Herald Tribune.

SHERMAN PROPOSES "WESTERN" AWARD

Harry Sherman, producer of the "Hopalong Cassidy" pictures for Paramount release, proposed this week to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences that it give a special award for western pictures.

TEXAS INDUSTRY UNDER STATE QUIZ; U.S. SETS UP ITS CHICAGO CASE

Texas Action Parallels, within a State, the Federal Government's Inquiries into "Big Businesses"

Texas this week turned its statewide investigation of "big business" within its borders toward motion pictures, in the first inquiry of its kind to be undertaken by any state since the United States Government and independent exhibitors began, two years ago, widespread attacks against the majors, charging illegal trade practices and circuit operations, a movement which resulted in the filing of nearly 50 anti-trust suits by the Department of Justice and independent operators. The Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell Interstate Circuit in Texas is the most prominent target of attack by independents in Texas, in actions pending.

The Texas investigations of "big business" parallels within a state the United States Government's action in investigating "big business" in recent years in interstate commerce, looking into oil, building construction, fertilizer and motion pictures, among others.

Tuesday the state's attorney's office in Dallas revealed it was extending its investigation of the state's "big businesses" to the large theatre circuits, the Interstate and Texas Consolidated, and the Gordon-Clemmons Circuit.

The state already has investigated 12 other industries, in 11 of them making no recommendations of procedure to legislators, police or its legal officers.

U. S. Explains Action in Brief Filed in Chicago

Contentions of the Department of Justice in its criminal action against Balaban and Katz, in Chicago, were detailed this week in a brief filed in federal court there.

Interpretation of the consent decree handed down there in 1932 by Federal Judge Woodward will determine the outcome of the suit the Government has filed against B & K, Barney Balaban and the major film companies, defense counsel is said to believe, following a perusal of the brief and findings of fact as filed by the Government attorneys, Robert L. Wright and Seymour Simon. The brief indicates that the Government believes distributor owned circuits, such as the Paramount-Publix-B&K circuit, represent both distributor and exhibitor in negotiations for films and in their exhibition. The defense will probably contend that each deals separately and must be considered a separate unit. The wording of the consent decree does not clarify the exact relationship of the distributor-owned companies, and it is over this technical point of law that a battle is expected to be waged. If the Government can prove that the distribution company and the circuit, because of their affiliations, are as one, it will bring about a new interpretation of the decree, it is believed.

Aside from that the brief filed by the Government charges that the film companies and B & K agreed to the restriction of licensing of first-run feature pictures in Chicago. They claim that deals made by Fox, Vitagraph and Loew's for three year periods, with B & K for first-run exhibition are violations of the decree. The Government also claims that many first-run pictures were delayed from 30 to 131 days after release date by B & K. It also is charged that Barney Balaban as executive head of two of the principal corporate defendants (B & K and Paramount Pictures), participated in the Loew franchise deal for a $400,000 annual film rental for five years, and in so doing violated the decree.

Calls Clearance "Unreasonable"

The Government said in its brief that it considered the establishing of a clearance system by admission prices was legal, but charged that the present clearance setup was "unreasonable."

Detailed information regarding various product negotiations between sales executives and exhibitor competitors to B & K were listed in the brief. These deals concerned attempts of exhibitors to get first run product for the Oriental-State-Lake and McVickers theatres which are, or were, independently operated. That Fox-Loew's and Vitagraph gave clearance over these three theatres also was charged.

It was stated in the brief that the film companies' revenue from B & K, as compared with the other theatres in the Chicago territory, was as follows:

50.32% for Loew's in 1935-'36, 1936-'37.
35.26% for Fox in 1936-'37-'38.
50.56% for Paramount from November, 1935, through 1938.
40.68% for United Artists (same period).
26.96% for Universal (same period).
25.60% for RKO (same period)

This revenue also included that from the B & K subsidiaries such as the Great States circuit.

Monopoly of first-run theatres by B & K also was charged.

It was recommended in the brief that all charges made by the Government against Universal and RKO be dropped. This recommendation will be acted upon after the defense files an answer and the matter is brought up before Edgar Eldredge, master in chancery, who in turn will refer his findings to Judge Woodward.

At the start of the case it was brought out that the Government did not intend to press its charges against RKO and Universal, product from these companies being shown first-run in the RKO-Palace theatre, almost exclusively.

As the defense has 30 days to file an answer, no developments are expected before December 1st. Oral argument then may be started if necessary.

ROBBERY OF PATRON HELD JURY MATTER

The liability of an exhibitor when a patron is robbed in an unattended rest room for women is a question of fact for a jury to determine, the appellate division of the New York supreme court has ruled. The ruling reversed a lower court decision which dismissed a suit brought by a patron against Hercules Theatre Corporation, operator of the Paramount, Manhattan. Both the plaintiff and her escort testified that there was no matron, usher or attendant present except on the main floor.

In reversing the lower court decision the appellate division said: "Defendant owed plaintiff the duty of exercising reasonable care to protect her from injury from causes reasonably to be anticipated . . . it is for a jury to determine whether the defendant should take reasonable precautions to guard against such eventuality by adequately policing the theatre with matrons, ushers and attendants or in some other manner."

Majors Must Answer Coast Trust Suit

In Los Angeles federal court, Fox West Coast Theatres and the majors have until November 13th to answer the Government's petition to that court for an order to show cause why they should not be held in contempt for alleged violations of a 1930 anti-trust consent decree.

Sets $1,000 Costs in Orange County Case

Federal Judge Clancy fixed costs of $1,000 against the Orange County (N. Y.) Theatres, Inc., in New York last week, after that organization had dropped its $225,000 treble damage anti-trust suit against five majors, the Netco Theatres Corporation, George Walsh, and Eugene Levy. Orange County Theatres, Inc., is an independent unit.

Seek Selling Terms In Florida Case

The Washington Operating Company, plaintiff in an anti-trust suit against Paramount Enterprises, Wometco Theatres, and the majors in the Miami, Florida, area, this week filed in federal court in Miami a questionnaire, asking the defendants the terms and percentage bases upon which feature films have been played by 27 theatres of the territory. The questionnaire also asks for figures on gross box-office receipts during 1938, and the first six months of this year.

Drops "U", Warners From Quemos Action

In Newark, N. J., Judge Fake, in federal court, struck Warner Brothers and Universal from the list of defendants in the Quemos Theatres Company anti-trust action against the majors. The judge held that the two distributors' business had not been conducted within the meaning of the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust acts.

The other defendants have up to two weeks to answer proceedings in the $3,525,000 case.

Quemos is the former operator of the Mosque, downtown Newark theatre. The company alleges that, because it was unable to obtain first and second run pictures in 1936 and 1937, it was the victim of a monopoly practiced by the majors and other downtown houses.

Take Depositions in Wisconsin Trust Suit

The $1,050,000 damage suit in LaCrosse, Wis., by the LaCrosse Theatres Company against Welforth Theatres and the majors, was featured last week by the taking of depositions from officials of both sides. It is a restraint of trade suit, and was started about a year ago.

105 SYNDICATE FEATURES SERVICE FILM NEWS ONLY

ONE hundred and five daily news letters or weekly feature articles devoted exclusively to Hollywood's product and people are now syndicated regularly to several hundreds of newspapers in this country.

Virtually a million words—equivalent to five good-sized novels—pour forth from Hollywood every week.

Writing their material in all of the "major" languages, such as English, French, Spanish, Italian, Chinese, Japanese and the like, and in many "minor" tongues, there are 190 duly accredited newspaper reporters in Hollywood covering pictures and personalities, 64 staff and free-lance magazine writers, 71 correspondents for foreign publications and 33 radio commentators.

In addition to this voluminous outpouring are the 100,000 stills and 15,000 separate stories sent out annually by the press agents of the studios, not only to the reporters and writers assigned to Hollywood, but also to 500-odd motion picture editors.

Much has been heard about the general coverage by press and radio in, by and for Hollywood, but little is known of the rapid growth in recent years of the line of reporters and writers doing regular news and feature pieces on the films exclusively for syndicating to the country's newspapers. One hundred and five of these syndicate features are now listed by Editor and Publisher, in its 16th annual directory of newspaper syndicated features, that publication showing in its listings of syndicate features on other subjects of the day that the screen's 105 syndicated features in number are ahead of nearly all other syndicated subjects, such as the 65 syndicated features on fashions, the 62 on beauty hints and 61 for cross-word puzzles, the 48 short story syndicate features, 40 on food, 39 on science, 38 on children, 37 on religion, 34 on books, and 33 on health.

The 105 motion picture syndicated features compare even more favorably with the 20 features syndicated regularly on radio, 19 on aviation, 13 on gardening and the mere seven on society.

In addition to the hundreds of feature and reportorial accounts emanating from Hollywood on pictures and picture people from syndicate writers, radio film news gatherers, Associated Press, United Press, International News Service, regularly assigned and free-lance news and feature writers for individual newspapers and magazines, Hollywood stories of picture and personality happenings are reported at one time or another in scores of columns and features not directly identified with screen coverage, such as the columns of the Winchells, the Runyons, Sullivans, Walkers and Chapmans, and in columns and features in other fields.

The motion picture syndicate features are serviced by such well known syndicates as King Features, NEA, Dominion News, McNaught, Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, Associated Press Feature Service, North American Newspaper Alliance, the Ledger Syndicate, International News Service, and others.

Following is the list of syndicated features on motion pictures and stars as compiled by Editor and Publisher.

GRIERSON HEADS CANADA WAR FILMS; WAR AIMS ALSO EXPLAINED ON AIR

Director of British Government's Film Center in London Chosen Dominion's Commissioner in Surprise Move

by COLIN R. HAWORTH
in Montreal

Rumors in the hustle of war activity at Ottawa that the recently passed Canadian National Film Act would be shelved "for the duration" exploded abruptly last weekend when trade minister W. D. Euler, chairman of the National Film Board set up under the act, announced the appointment of John Grierson, British Government film expert, as Canadian Government film commissioner, chief salaried position in the organization. (Picture in the Pictorial Section).

Proposed Fund Recalled

To many this was an indication that Canada's government would go into the business of producing propaganda films, or at least distributing them. Supporting their contention was the reminder that early this year the government had had under consideration a bill to appropriate $250,000 for the production of "films on Canada's national resources."

The appointment of Mr. Grierson came as a welcome surprise to many, for it was the stocky business-like Scotsman, one time fellow-worker with Gene Fowler on the hell-raising Denver Post, who investigated the Canadian film field and drafted the National Film Act for the Canadian Government.

For the last two years Mr. Grierson has been making trips to Canada, studying the set-up and advising trade ministry officials in which direction to move.

This summer Mr. Grierson arrived in Canada on the S.S. Empress of Australia and smilingly assured MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S representative he had no designs on the Ottawa post. "No, I'm going to Australia," he said. "Those fellows (Ottawa government) have got a fine set-up there and I'm pretty sure it will work well. I'm not doing any more to it."

But he remained in Canada. And now he's Canada's first Government film commissioner.

According to the Act the new Film Board is to correlate the film activities of the Government's various departments, to avoid duplication and to form an efficient distribution center. Production by the Board was not emphasized in the Act. Ottawa, however, has considerable equipment, and with a suitable appropriation could readily enter the film making business on a large scale.

Newspapering and film work has taken Mr. Grierson all over the world. A native of Stirling, Scotland, he rose through cub reporter and desk man to provincial newspaper owner and thence into film work, eventually becoming director of the British Government's Film Center in London, and making a name for himself in the much-stressed documentary film work overseas.

Mr. Grierson's scheme in the documentaries is to select young talent, much of it from the newspaper world. "They're the boys who'll get you the story," he says. He often has expressed a desire to exploit some of the many possibilities for documentary film work in Canada. "There's too much travelogue stuff," he claims.

Others in the Film Board personnel are: Resources Minister Crerar; J. G. Parmelee, deputy minister of trade and commerce; R. S. Hamer, general executive assistant department of agriculture; Col. V. I. Smart, deputy transport minister; Professor Walter Murray, former president of the University of Saskatchewan; Edmon Turcotte, former editor-in-chief of the French-language newspaper Le Canada in Montreal; and C. G. Cowan, of Ottawa.

Resignation Reports Denied

Announcement of Mr. Grierson's appointment brought reports in Toronto, Ottawa and other Canadian capitals of the immediate resignation of Frank C. Badgley as director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau. These were denied on Tuesday both by Mr. Grierson and Mr. Badgley, Mr. Grierson explaining that his duty as Commissioner to coordinate all Canadian Government film activities in no way affects Mr. Badgley's post of director of the Motion Picture Bureau, the Government production bureau. He added that the director will have new responsibilities under the new setup.

Mr. Badgley has served since 1927 in the Motion Picture Bureau, which was founded by Bernard E. Norrish along about 1915.

Mr. Norrish has for years been managing director of the Associated Screen News, Ltd., of Montreal, a Canadian Pacific Railway subsidiary or "affiliate." It is the concern which prints product from "the States" for Canadian distribution.

FILM SHOWS FOR CANADIAN CAMPS

The first official move to provide screen entertainment for Canadian soldiers was taken this week when the Canadian Citizen's Committee for Troops in Training was organized to arrange recreational features at Dominion military camps. Representing the film industry was Henry L. Nathanson, general manager of Regal Films, Ltd., Toronto.

The Independent Theatres Association of Ontario has received letters from Prime Minister Mackenzie King of the Dominion Government and Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario thanking the independent exhibitors for the offer of their theatres for war purposes and advising that the cooperation of theatre owners will be used when war loan and further recruiting campaigns are launched. The screens are already being used for Red Cross and women's organization drives.

Asks "Temperate Influence"

The importance of working for temperate influence in motion pictures was urged in a departmental report to the Pennsylvania Women's Christian Temperance Union convention on October 23rd. Mrs. Harry A. Ling, WCTU state director of motion picture activities, asked members to watch local pictures and complain promptly against those types they considered objectionable.

Shakespeare Goes to the Block When Broadcasting System Decides on Light Entertainment; War Drama Barred

The war has forced many changes in the schedules of the Canadian Broadcasting System. Special broadcasts are to be made to explain war aims and the activities of the various Canadian armed forces, and hereafter all sponsored news programs will be under strict supervision. Dramatic material dealing with the war is banned. Entertainment hereafter will be light, heavy material having also been ruled out.

Cheery Programs Emphasized

The Canadian Broadcasting Company plans "special emphasis on musical and variety programs of a light and cheerful sort" to counterbalance war tension. However, symphony music will not be omitted.

Shakespeare becomes one of the first war victims in Canada. Plans to continue the series of Shakespearean plays begun last year have been dropped. Cedric Hardwicke and Walter Huston were guest performers in the last series. Expense and difficulty in obtaining foreign talent contributed to the decision not to broadcast Shakespeare. Military programs are planned to take the place of Shakespeare's plays.

The symphony programs, including the Philharmonic-Symphony of New York, the Toronto Symphony and Les Concerts Symphoniques de Montreal, will be continued.

Defense Minister Explains

In the introduction to the war broadcasts Defense Minister Norman Rogers gave the reasons why Canada entered the war and a spokesman for the Department of National Defense gave the first speech, explaining the activities of the navy, air force and army and plans for the future.

All news broadcasts, including news sources, preparation, announcers and methods of delivery, are subject to CBC control, and no new news programs may be planned without permission of the company. Situations growing out of the war must be avoided either for major or only background dramatic presentation.

Leonard W. Brockington resigned the chairmanship of the board of governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. McKenzie King, prime minister, accepting the resignation, praised Mr. Brockington for his work during a three year term which was to expire this month. His successor will not be named for several weeks. The appointments of Rene Morin, vice-president, and Nellie McClung, governor, also expire soon, but both are expected to be reappointed.

Warner Studio Up to Schedule, Says Einfeld

Warner Brothers is maintaining full production operations and will make the entire 1939-'40 program without impairing the quality, S. Charles Einfeld, advertising and publicity director, said in New York Monday on his arrival from the Coast.

Work on the remaining four of the scheduled 12 "B" pictures will be resumed in six weeks.

WALKER NAMED MPTOA COUNSEL; STATE UNIT HITS STAR BROADCASTS

Board of MPTOA Commends Distributors Incorporating Code Provisions Into Contracts; All Officers Reelected

Led by its chief, Ed Kuykendall, of Columbus, Miss., the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in session at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, from Monday through Wednesday, considered many of the motion picture industry's ailments and purported cures, the "illegal" trade practice code in particular; heartily praised those distributors who voluntarily included portions of the code in the new season contracts; appointed Frank C. Walker, head of the Comerford circuit, to be general counsel; and reelected all officers.

Urge Others to Act

The praise for the distributors was contained in a resolution which also urged other distributors to include some of the code's provisions in their contracts, "to eliminate the agitation for the Neely Bill," and unify all exhibitors in opposition to federal regulation.

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of the MGM and chairman of the distributors' negotiating committee when the code was formulated, told the MPTOA directors that the trade practice code of the distributors, rejected by the National Allied States Association and called illegal by Thurman Arnold, assistant United States attorney general, would "eventually have a place in the industry."

Mr. Rodgers blamed the distributors' present inaction on the Government's stand.

Says Most Want a Code

Most exhibitors want a code, Mr. Rodgers said.

He criticized the Neely Bill for its effect on exhibition.

Mr. Walker was elected general counsel at the Tuesday session. He is an MPTOA vice-president.

Mr. Walker is head of the Comerford circuit, built by the late M. E. "Mike" Comerford, who was a founder of the MPTOA. He is also treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

George Aarons of Philadelphia, secretary of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, was elected assistant general counsel, a new post.

Oppose Propaganda Films

The organization's directors adopted five other resolutions as follows:

Opposing propaganda films, and scenes in pictures which might incite war sentiment.

Stressing the importance of keeping production quality high, to avoid losses from decline in foreign revenues.

Condemning competition to theatres from radio, and asking that motion picture stars be kept from the air lanes.

Attacking the Neely Bill as a "step towards dictatorship" and as a violation of the freedom of the press principle.

Protesting competition to theatres from 16 mm. shows, and praising distributors who refused their films to television broadcasters.

It was said that the organization would take no measures on the fees levied by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, until pending litigation over the Washington State anti-Ascap law is settled.

The directors discussed the creation of public speaking bureaus by each state unit, to combat publicity adverse to the industry.

At one meeting, closed to the press, the directors also were reported to have discussed labor and legislative matters.

Watching Production Standards

In connection with the resolution against lowering of production quality, it was understood that a special fact-finding committee of the organization will carefully watch Coast production.

The directors were said to have expressed fear, at closed sessions, that publicity given to Hollywood's pay and budget slashes, may lead the public to believe it is not being given quality product.

Urges Adoption of Code Points

In connection with the resolution on insertion into contracts of trade practice code points such as the 20 per cent cancellation and non-forcing of shorts, the board is said to have decided that the organization's executive committee should personally try to convince sales managers of those companies still not providing such points, that they should, if the industry is to defeat the Neely Bill.

H. V. Harvey of San Francisco said that a uniform system of clearance on the Pacific Coast was being devised by the Pacific Coast Conference of independent theatre owners, an amalgamation, for working purposes, of three Coast independent associations. The proposals, which will eliminate a print shortage, are to be submitted to distributors, Mr. Harvey said.

Several New Directors

Officers reelected were: Ed Kuykendall, president; Fred Wehrenberg, chairman of the board; Morris Loewenstein, secretary; Walter Vincent, treasurer; Frank Walker, M. A. Lightman, Mitchell Wolfson, E. C. Beatty and A. Julian Brylawski, vice-presidents.

New directors, who were designated to the national board by their respective organizations, are Leonard Goldenson, Paramount Theatres; S. J. Hyman, West Virginia Managers' Association; Morris Leonard, Exhibitors' Association of Chicago; and Lyle M. Wilson, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina.

Other directors attending were Joseph Denniston, William Benton, Frank C. Cassil, Oscar Lam, Arthur Lockwood, A. C. Hayman, Benjamin Pitts, Lewen Pizor, Roy Walker, Charles E. Williams and R. X. Williams.

The meeting was held at the Greenbrier hotel. Between sessions, there were rounds of golf and other divertissements.

NEW MEXICO CITIZENS SEE TWO FILMS A MONTH

New Mexico theatre patrons spent $192,815 in July, according to figures just released by the office of the Commissioner of Revenue.

On the basis of an average 25-cent admission price and using the total of population of the last census (1930), each person in the state saw two motion pictures in the month.

Indiana Theatre Owners Demand Producers Keep Players Off the Air; Myers and Cole Call Neely Bill Antidote

Marked activity in the orbit of the state exhibitor organizations this week brought a demand by the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana that producers withdraw film stars from radio; a call to New York Allied members to map their campaign now that the secession group has met; a plea by Col. H. A. Cole, president of National Allied, before the MPTO of Western Pennsylvania, that the Neely Bill is the solution to monopoly; and the election of a new board by Allied States of Connecticut.

Divorce of Film Stars, Radio Sought by Indiana Exhibitors

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana at the organization's 13th annual meeting Monday at the Hotel Antlers in Indianapolis unanimously adopted a resolution demanding Paramount withdraw Bing Crosby, Bob Burns and Jack Benny from radio programs. Similar requests will be sent to other producers. The action followed an address by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of national allied.

Meanwhile the Screen Actors' Guild told the Producers Association in Hollywood that any move to have actors appear on the radio without pay would be considered a contract violation.

Mr. Myers urged exhibitors to be ready for television, "both financially and socially."

He said present conditions do not warrant increases in film rentals. "For the first time in history," he added, "the independent theatre owner can feel his investment and profits are safe against the invasions of affiliated theatre circuits. Building of affiliated circuits in competitive situations has come to a halt."

H. A. Cole, national president of Allied, addressed the meeting on Tuesday. Other speakers included Ernest L. Miller, Leonard Sowar, Alex Manta and Mr. Markum. The annual banquet was held Tuesday night.

The following directors were elected: Vern U. Young of Gary; H. Lisle Kreighbaum of Rochester; Pete Mallers of Fort Wayne; William Studebaker of Logansport; Sam W. Neall of Kokomo; Leonard Sowar of Muncie; I. R. Holycross of Anderson; Perc Dickson of Wabash; Carl Niesse, Harry Markun, Ernest L. Miller, A. C. Zaring and Frank Sanders of Indianapolis; Walter Easley of Greensburg; Roy Harrold of Rushville; Trueman Rembusch of Franklin; Joe Schilling of Connersville; Paul Meloy of Shelbyville; Sam Switow of New Albany; Herbert Johnson of Madison; Oscar Fine of Evansville; Harry P. Vonderschmitt of Bloomington and Bruce Miller of Bicknell.

Ray Harold of Rushville was elected president, succeeding Maurice J. Rubin. The other new officers are: Ernest L. Miller, Indianapolis, vice-president, and Harry Markun, Indianapolis, treasurer.

of his leadership, headed by T. Thornton Kelly, executive secretary, attempted to set up a new New York Allied affiliated with the national association.

That meeting, which Mr. Cohen called a "fiasco," brought a resolution directing Mr. Kelly to ask Mr. Cohen for the records of the organization.

In a special bulletin, announcing the November 1st meeting of his unit, and explaining his aims, Mr. Cohen "congratulated" officers of the National Allied for a "more tolerant" attitude towards trade practice reforms.

New York Allied, from its inception and under Mr. Cohen's leadership, was at loggerheads with the National Allied officers over adoption of the distributors' trade practice program and the divorcement of distribution from exhibition.

Colonel H. A. Cole, national Allied president, said last week in New York, after attending Mr. Kelly's meeting in Syracuse, that the New York group would have to drop Mr. Cohen before National Allied would consider its reinstatement.

Pennsylvania Owners Hear Cole on Neely

Exhibitors must unite to accomplish improvements in industry, Col. H. A. Cole of Dallas, national Allied president, told the first session of the annual two-day convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, held October 23 and 24 in the Roosevelt hotel in Pittsburgh. A former Allied president, Sidney Samuelson, business manager of the Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, and Abram F. Myers, general counsel, also spoke.

Monopoly was charged by Colonel Cole. He called for passage of the Neely anti-block booking bill, which, he said, would create competition in selling, cause new theatres to be built and create additional business. Col. Cole said no district has too many seats if product were available. Because of the Government's equity suit against the majors, according to Col. Cole, theatres can obtain product easier and for this reason, he said, Texas leads in the construction of new theatres.

On Monday 75 registered delegates attended a midnight preview of "Disputed Passage" and "Seventeen" at the State theatre. H. M. Richey of RKO was a Tuesday speaker, as were Ray Branch, president of Michigan Allied, and Jack Kirsh, president of Illinois Allied.

The members voted to change the organization's name to the Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania.

Officers elected were: Morris Rosenberg, president; Edward Beedle, vice-president; Joseph Gellman, treasurer; Fred Herrington, secretary; William Wheat, Dr. C. E. Herman, I. Roth, Charles Blatt, L. Corcoran, directors.

A banquet and dance wound up the event.

MPTOA of Northwest Will Discuss Code

Though the date has not been set, it was considered probable in Seattle that the 17th annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest, to be held soon, would deal largely with the ill-fated trade practice code.

M. F. Hone, secretary, is planning the convention, with L. O. Lukan, the president.

Zukor to Mexico

Adolph Zukor, who has been examining Paramount operations in various foreign countries and acting as the company's "good will" emissary, is scheduled to leave Hollywood at the end of November for Mexico, for conferences with exhibitors there. Tentative date for Mr. Zukor's arrival in Mexico City is November 26th. He is expected to stay several weeks, and may visit Cuba; and from there, go to New York.

Keystone Comedy Revived

Mack Sennett has been signed by Darryl Zanuck to collaborate with Harry Joe Brown, associate producer, on a comedy film, following the public's reaction to the Keystone Kop sequence in Hollywood Cavalcade." The new feature has been temporarily titled, "Left at the Altar," or "Love in a Pullman Car."

BRITISH EXHIBIT PHOTOS OF ESQUIRE THEATRE

In response to an invitation from the Royal Institute of British Architects, photographs of the Esquire theatre, Chicago, are to become part of an exhibition and permanent collection of the Institute in London.

The Esquire photographs will be part of "upwards of six thousand photographs, representative of all that is best in modern architecture at home and abroad", according to H. S. Goodhart-Rendel, chairman of the exhibition committee of the Royal Institute, in his invitation to Elmer Balaban of the Esquire theatre management.

The Esquire, completed in 1938, was constructed under the direction of Pereira & Pereira, Chicago theatre consultants and designers.

Czech Films Now Under Nazi Agent

by Special Correspondent
in Prague

A complete change has overtaken the film industry in the Protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia, formerly the independent republic of Czechoslovakia, since the Nazi coup of last March. For one thing, there is no way to export money.

The Reich Government has appointed H. Glessgen special supervisor in charge of film activities, responsible to Baron von Gregory, who is in charge of the cultural affairs of the protectorate.

Non-Aryans Barred

In line with the German method, non-Aryans have been eliminated from the industry. Mr. Glessgen appointed Karl Schultz head of the largest studio in Prague, the Barrandov Studio, and the plant, one of the largest and best equipped in middle Europe, is being used entirely for the production of Nazi films.

Some Czech films are being produced at the Fojo Studio and the Bapoz-Hostivar plant. Production in the Czech language will be increased to 40 to 45 films this season, according to production announcements.

The managers of virtually all American film company branches in the protectorate have been succeeded by Czechs.

RKO, MGM, United Artists, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox and Universal are represented at Prague, but with communication to Paris broken, American offices have no knowledge concerning the flow of product, and there is doubt they will be able much longer to supply pictures.

German Competition

The competition faced by American product is now of course German, since all French and English films are banned, but Italian product, however, is due for a considerable increase in playing time.

The Nazis have published lists of films prohibited, chiefly because someone connected with each film is non-Aryan.

The Exhibitors Central Union has issued strict instructions that every theatre must charge not less than seven cents. Programs must start with the newsreel, to be followed by a culture film (this may be omitted if the feature runs more than 2,600 meters), followed by the feature. Double features are prohibited. In Prague and Bruenn, key cities, first and second runs may show only two Czech features in any one week.

The film Advisory Board of the Ministry of Commerce has devised a plan for a subsidy of 200,000 crowns (about $7,000) for every film approved by the board. If it is of unusual quality, an additional 100,000 crowns will be given.

All foreign films must carry superimposed dialogue translations in Czech and German.

Frank Seltzer, publicity director for Hal Roach, has been named eastern studio representative, replacing Tom Walter. Mr. Seltzer will divide his time between New York and the coast. Jules Seltzer, brother of Frank, has been named publicity director for the studio.

WAR REDUCES STORY PURCHASES; 9 PRODUCERS BUY 29 PROPERTIES

Originals Account for 79 Per Cent of Month's Purchases; Warners Buys "No Time for Comedy" for Bette Davis

Reflecting perhaps the rigid economies invoked by Hollywood, story purchases in the first month of the European War fell to a low of 29 properties. This compares with the 51 bought in September of last year, and the 33 acquired in August, 1939.

With producers and story editors turning to the millions of dollars worth of stories in studio vaults, agents are reporting that the demand for new material is diminishing rapidly pending the determination of trends in future film fare.

$55,000 Reported for Play

Herbert J. Yates, head of Republic, said recently while on the coast that that company would not bid for screen rights to any available war stories. "It is our contention," he said, "that what the world needs today in the way of entertainment is pictures that will take the troubled, propaganda-fed minds of the picture going public off the tense European situation."

Highlights among the month's purchases were "No Time for Comedy," S. N. Behrman's play which was bought by Warner Brothers, for a reported $55,000; with Bette Davis to take the role Katherine Cornell played in the stage version. Twentieth Century-Fox acquired two biographies of Steinmetz by John Winthrop Hammond: "Charles Proteus Steinmetz" and "A Magician of Science."

Originals accounted for 23, or 79 per cent, of the total month's purchases; while there were four books, two plays, and no magazine stories. Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount each made six purchases.

The Titles and Credits

The month's acquisitions, with all available production credits, follows:

BACK HOME, original by William A. Ulman, purchased by Universal.

CALIFORNIAN, THE, original by Sam Hellman, purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox.

CHARLES PROTEUS STEINMETZ, biography by John Winthrop Hammond, purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox.

CITY OF CONQUEST, original by Aben Kandel, purchased by Warner Brothers.

CITY WITHOUT MEN, original by Albert Bein and Aben Kandel, purchased by Samuel Goldwyn (United Artists) for Jean Arthur and Jon Hall.

DAYS OF '49, original by Norman Houston, purchased by Republic for Roy Rogers.

DEVIL IS YELLOW, THE, original by Frederick C. Davis, purchased by Universal.

DOUBLE-SADDLED LAW, original by Sam Robins, purchased by Universal.

DOWN WENT MCGINTY, original by Preston Sturges, purchased by Paramount.

GHOST BREAKER, THE, mystery play by Paul Dickey and Charles Goddard, purchased by Paramount for Bob Hope and Eddie "Rochester" Anderson. Arthur Hornblow, Jr., will produce.

Monogram Raises Budgets on Eleven

Monogram announced this week that it is increasing the negative cost on 11 top pictures, following a meeting in Kansas City of members of the franchise holders advisory committee consisting of Ray Olmstead, Los Angeles; Steve Broidy, Boston; John Mangham, Atlanta, and Charles Trampe, Milwaukee, together with W. Ray Johnston, president; Edward A. Golden, vice-president, and George W. Weeks, sales manager.

The committee also worked out plans for exploitation and release of the company's important production, "Mutiny in the Big House." One of the forthcoming productions to receive an increase in budget is "Rip Van Winkle," which will shortly go before the cameras on a proposed budget of $350,000. Jackie Cooper's current season's Monogram picture also has been given a $100,000 boost in allocation.

Others to be given 50 per cent increases in allocation are "His Father's Son" and "Son of the Navy," featuring Martin Spellman; "Under Northern Lights," operetta by Charles Wakefield Cadman; "Haunted House" to star Boris Karloff; "Queen of the Yukon," novel by Jack London, and "Freckles Comes Home," by Jeannette Stratton Porter.

Following this lineup on the Monogram program will be three Hugh Wiley Collier's Magazine mystery stories starring Boris Karloff; "Dawn on the Great Divide," now in the cutting room; two specials with Marcia Mae Jones and Jackie Moran, called "Hoosier Schooldays" and "Tomboy."

Also on the Monogram program are four Tailspin Tommy pictures, four Frankie Darros, four action melodramas, eight Tex Ritter westerns, the "Renfrew of the Royal Mounted" films, two Mickey Balcon productions, based on Edgar Wallace stories, and scheduled for November and December release; "The Pioneers," by James Fenimore Cooper, to star Jack Randall; "Raiders over England" and "Fight for Peace," two timely releases.

Monica McCall has left the Curtis Brown agency, where she handled for the last four years play and film rights, to establish her own agency. Allan Collins, Jr., assumes her work at the Curtis Brown agency.

MAJORS TELL U.S. HOLLYWOOD NEEDS AID IN LATIN AMERICAN MARKETS

MPPDA Attorneys Tell Washington Committee Protection Is Needed to Offset War Losses

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The American motion picture industry needs protection in Latin American markets because of the war losses in Europe, members of the Administration's Committee for Reciprocity Information were told last Thursday at hearings on the proposed reciprocal trade agreement with Argentina. The Federal Government aims to extend our markets in South America through extended credits and loans.

Call Protection Vital

Pleading that the agreement should contain provisions protecting the industry from trade barriers in the Latin American country, representatives of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, told the committee that the producers must have access to foreign markets, from which they expect a yield of 35 to 40 per cent of their return, in order to continue to produce a high type of pictures.

The industry already has lost Central European markets and is suffering from quotas in the United Kingdom, testified Harry Levine, of RKO, heading the MPPDA's lawyers committee. Not only has the war aggravated the loss of markets but, due to exchange conditions, the industry has been exceedingly hard hit, so that it has had to curtail employment, he said.

Mr. Levine asked specifically that the distributors be not put under the necessity of meeting arbitrary quotas in Argentina. "With the state that Europe is in today," he said, "the Latin American market is all-important." He insisted also that films should be recognized as essential articles of commerce which, he explained, would relieve them of luxury taxes.

Duty Increased 550%

Arguing that the agreement should protect the industry against excessive duties, Mr. Levine pointed out that Argentina has increased its duty 550 per cent since 1930, and now has the highest rate of any of the Latin American republics.

He explained that in Argentina, also, unless motion pictures are classed as articles of commerce they are subject to a surtax which, due to exchange control, amounts to about 20 per cent. Further, he said, the government now is attempting to lay a further surtax on remittances from exhibitors, and while negotiation of the agreement was underway imposed an income tax of five per cent on such remittances.

At least 50 per cent of the gross returns from exhibition in Argentina must remain in that country, due to taxes and exchange control, he told the committee.

Questioned by Committeemen

Mr. Levine was questioned at length by members of the committee, who asked whether the industry's difficulties were due to efforts to protect the Argentine film producers or to the exchange situation. He explained that competition from the Argentine industry was not keen enough to warrant the various forms of taxation the government has resorted to, and that native production is only about 50 films a year as compared with 350 features imported from the United States. He also refused to admit that the taxes might be imposed for revenue purposes, and said there was no objection to non-discriminatory taxes but that levies on gross proceeds with no consideration of negative costs were unfair.

Asked whether his fears were not based on anticipations of what might happen, Mr. Levine said the industry would be thoroughly satisfied if the Argentine agreement included some concessions such as were granted all American industries in the French treaty, which protects them against sudden increases in taxes, imposition of greater restrictions, and the like.

David Lewis, Loew representative in Argentina, with Franklin S. Irey of Twentieth Century-Fox and Joseph Rosthal of MGM, testified that the Argentine film producers need very little protection, since the pictures it makes are for its own people and receive wide distribution.

The proposed agreement went to the Committee for Reciprocity Information, after a four-day hearing.

British Films Decline Noted in Argentina

British films have lost ground in the Argentine according to a memorandum issued by the Department of Overseas Trade, a section of Britain's Board of Trade. According to the report American productions continue to dominate the market, with Argentine films strong competition to the American pictures. The British claim that the receipts of American exhibitors have dropped off 30 per cent.

American Films Gain in Peru

Competition is considerably weaker in Peru this year, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from the American commercial attache at Lima, David M. Clark. A survey in the Lima district shows that 67 per cent of the motion pictures were English dialogue and 27 per cent Spanish as against 50 per cent English and 42 per cent Spanish in the corresponding period in 1938.

A substantial number of French films was available in Peru but the war was expected to affect that

On the other hand, a lack of protection to first-runs in Lima is hurting business there, Jose Calero Paz, distributor of Spanish language films in Latin America, said in New York. Mr. Paz blamed the American distributors, and the serious competition of modern subsequent-run theatres.

Mr. Paz has signed as Republic distributor in that territory, beginning this year. His company also handles sound equipment.

Americans Winning Colombia, Santo Domingo

The attempt of the United States to win the Latin American markets held formerly by European countries is apparently successful, says the U. S. Department of Commerce. American agents in Colombia have increased bookings, and there has been a swing to America in the Dominican Republic.

Brazil Expects Trade Increase

Improved exportation on account of the war and the purchase of United States gold to strengthen the milreis are factors that indicate a general improvement of business in Brazil and a greater trade with the United States, according to commercial attaches.

Pictures Figure in Paraguay Trade Pact

Negotiations are being initiated by the State Department for a trade treaty with Paraguay. Motion pictures figure in all the existing and proposed pacts. Other commercial pacts being negotiate dare with Argentina, Chile and Venezuela.

SHORTER TERMS ON LATIN AMERICA DEALS

A growing tendency to quote shorter terms on sales to Latin America was observed among foreign traders by the New York Times last week. The caution, export officials say, is due to fear that present heavy commitments from the Latin-American republics may cause a piling up of exchange obligations in those countries and result in delayed payments six months hence. Up to now the curtailment has been principally among exporters of foodstuffs.

Shorter terms enable the exporter to take steps to meet any exchange difficulties in a specific market. If exchange goes against them they can wait for an improved rate.

The tendency now is to ship on sight-draft, which is causing some shortage of dollars in several Latin-American countries, and heavy shipments have caused custom delays in many countries. It is expected that the situation will be restored to normal soon.

Vote November 6th On Dramatists-Film Plan

The plan by which Hollywood backing would be returned to the legitimate stage of Broadway, long in work, having been considered by the council of the Dramatists' Guild, will be submitted to a vote of the membership at the annual meeting on November 6th; the plan being voted on by mail or proxy, as well as by individual members. The Guild's active membership is 565, while there are 1,687 associates; only the active members voting.

In all probability, the legitimate theatre managers will have taken action on the plan before that time, although they had received no outline by midweek. Copies also will go out to the Guild membership before the November meeting.

Gus McCarthy Leaves Quigley Publications

Gus McCarthy, for the last eight years associated with the Hollywood bureau of Quigley publications, has resigned his post effective in mid-November. At that time he will assume a new affiliation.

NEWSREELS GIVE THIRD OF FOOTAGE TO WAR; HEAVY BOOKING INCREASE

Cost of Operations Markedly Increased without Pronounced Addition to Income, Executives of Five Newsreels Point Out

The war has been a stimulus to the newsreels, officials of the five newsreels said this week in New York. More than one-third of all newsreel footage issued since September 1st has been on the war. Also, exhibitors and the public have considered the newsreels more important than any time since the World War, executives declared.

12 Exclusively on War

Out of the total of 85 newsreel issues since the invasion of Poland, 12 have been devoted evclusively to the war, and only four have had no war subjects at all. Movietone News has devoted two complete issues to the war; News of the Day, 4; Paramount News, 4; Universal, 2; RKO-Pathe News, no complete edition. Over 45% of the subjects in the other issues concerned war. [Actual shots made in Europe and matters such as the special session of Congress, that are directly related to the conflict, are considered war subjects for the purposes of this calculation.]

From the viewpoint of the sales manager, Harry J. Michalson of RKO said the newsreel business is better since the war. Some theatres are running more newsreels and others are taking more issues from the same company. As the war has continued, public interest in the newsreels has been steadily building. People, he found, like to see pictures of what has happened, even though they have read about the events in the newspaper and heard the news on the radio.

M. D. Clofine, managing editor of the News of the Day, called the war the "greatest human interest story of our time."

Operation Cost Increased

The war has markedly increased the cost of operations, said the newsreel leaders, without bringing any pronounced increase in revenue. The editors expect that less spectacular material will come over now that the Polish campaign is finished. The war in the West discourages picture operations, they added, because most of the movements are conducted at night or in the pale light of dawn.

Truman H. Talley, Movietone News, observed that the increase in the sales of one-sheets to the exhibitors indicates that there is greater interest in the newsreels and that theatremen are advertising them more than ever before.

Leo Abrams, Universal's New York sales manager, saw newsreel distribution constantly expanding. Some exhibitors are adding reels; others who never used newsreels are playing them. This growth parallels to some extent the increase in newspaper circulation owing to interest in the war, said Mr. Abrams.

Footage Determined by Merit

The newsreel companies cited no defined policy on handling war news. All are treating the European trouble as an important source of material and the shots are judged on the same basis as other newsreel pictures, issue by issue. All the good material is used. No attempt is being made to control, deliberately, the amount of war footage in any issue or to aim at any percentage figure.

Thousands of feet of film are discarded because they do not come up to the necessary standards of quality or because they have been spoiled by foreign censorship or are obviously propaganda, the newsreel men added. No reel that comes from any of the countries at war is free from censorship and much of the material has some elements of propaganda. The newsreel companies let the public know, as the newspapers do, that the material has been subject to foreign war censorship.

Material from France Pooled

By order of the French government the newsreels must pool all material photographed in France. The scenes are passed through censorship and then are available to all the companies.

In Germany the situation is similar. The films are made under government supervision and the material then is available to the American companies through arrangements with German newsreel companies. The Germans request that captions and commentators' remarks do not twist the interpretation of the pictures. Official captions are sent with the material. Not in all cases can the captions be followed, but the American newsreels are trying to present the war in keeping with the neutrality of the United States.

The last World War helped to establish the newsreel. Then the material was not very new. Today the Clipper plane service brings timely pictures from Europe and other air services carry the finished reels to South America and the East while the news is still fresh. However, even in the last war there was great public interest in war material. Very few actual war shots were made then but the public liked the parades, training scenes and other war subjects.

The Federal government was active in production in the war two decades ago. One division of the Department of Public Information, headed by George Creel, was the Division of Films. This motion picture division operated in New York under Charles S. Hart. A weekly topical release called the "Allied War Review" was issued through Pathe Exchange, Inc. The "Review" was the official war newsreel. Charles Urban, pioneer in the field of color motion pictures, of the Kineto Company of America, did the editing of the reel.

Up to now the present war has brought no boom to the newsreel business. It has increased public interest and to a limited extent increased newsreel distribution, but costs to the newsreel companies have soared.

NEWSREEL EDITOR ON A WAR TOUR

W. P. Montague, assignment editor of Paramount Newsreel, left Monday aboard the Dixie Clipper for Lisbon as the first stop on a trip which will take him to many European capitals.

The purpose of the trip is to make a general survey of war conditions and to confer with representatives of Paramount News on coverage of the European war. War restrictions will determine Mr. Montague's exact route, but Rome, Paris, Brussels, London and Switzerland are on the schedule. He will remain abroad 30 days.

ATT-General Patent Suit Ends

A final agreement was reached last week in a seven-year litigation by AT&T, Western Electric and ERPI on one side and Generarl Talking Pictures Corporation on the other. The action included patent, anti-trust and damage suits.

In settlement of the case which went twice to the U. S. Supreme Court, General Talking Pictures has the right, on request, to be licensed by ERPI to manufacture sound reproducing equipment and public address systems under Western Electric-ERPI patents on the same basis as any other licensee in the United States. The parties agreed on the settlement of attorneys' fees and court costs.

ERPI receives some of the General Talking Pictures licenses in the recording and reproducing field but the latter's printing patents were excluded from the settlement. Also RCA Photophone licenses were not included. No damage payments or considerations for releases from claims or charges were involved, according to T. K. Stevenson of ERPI.

"Damage claims were a very minor phase of the action at the outset," Mr. Stevenson said. "In initiating the action, in which General Talking Pictures was charged with infringement of our patents, ERPI was mainly concerned with the extension and perpetuation of the defendant's business on the basis on which it existed at the time."

The U. S. supreme court had decided in ERPI's favor and later granted General Talking Pictures a rehearing but again ruled in ERPI's favor. The agreement reached last week was made pursuant to a settlement order of the Federal court at Wilmington in which the action was originated.

Luncheon for Sol Wurtzel

A. J. Goulding Held

Alfred J. Goulding, director, was remanded to the Los Angeles county jail in lieu of $500 bail ordered in an immigration hearing. Before Immigration Inspector Henderson it was charged that Goulding had entered the United States illegally. He came to the United States from Australia in 1912 and visited England from 1935-38, when he returned to Hollywood on a three months' permit.

Managers of the Balaban & Katz-Great States circuit will meet in Chicago November 8th and 9th to discuss policy changes and management problems.

A PARAMOUNT RELEASE

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Picks Up

After a few weeks of stalling and balking, the production machine began to operate with a degree of normal efficiency last week. Ten pictures were started. Two or three of them may become objects of more than ordinary popular attention. Twelve were finished, and here again there is a share of better than average merchandise.

Two started at Columbia. "Passport to Happiness," a romance, will feature Tony Martin and Rita Haworth with Andre Kostelanetz, Edith Fellows and Eric Blore. A crime drama, "The Cop from Hell's Kitchen," will present Jacqueline Wells, Bruce Cabot, Wynne Gibson and Don Beddoe in the leading roles.

Paramount also began work on two. To make "The Biscuit Eater," a company of almost all new names, went to Georgia on location. It was headed by Lonnie Leroy, Cordell Hellman, Helen Millard, Richard Lane, Leslie Matthews and Snowflake. Harry Sherman started "Light of Western Stars," in which will be seen Victor Jory, Russell Hayden, Noah Beery, Jr., Jo Ann Sayers and J. Farrel MacDonald.

Gable Returns to MGM

Clark Gable returned to his home studio MGM, after a prolonged absence in which "Gone with the Wind" was made, for the lead role in "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep." Joan Crawford and Betty Compson are the only girls in the cast, which will feature Peter Lorre, Melvyn Douglas, Paul Lukas, John Arledge, Eduardo Cianelli and J. Edward Bromberg.

Tex Ritter is the star of Monogram's "Under Western Stars."

The cast for RKO-Radio's "Distant Fields" will include Alan Marshall, Barbara Read, Helen Vincent and Patric Knowles.

"Charlie Chan in Panama" went on the stages at 20th Century-Fox. Sidney Toler heads the cast, which lists Jean Rogers, Lionel Atwill, Sen Yung, Chris Pin Martin, Kane Richmond and Mary Nash as supporting players. Constance Moore, Frank Albertson, Robert Armstrong and Jerome Cowan are the principals in "Trouble's My Name," Universal. "Fugitive from Justice," a crime melodrama, started at Warners. Roger Pryor, Lucille Fairbanks, Don Douglas, Morgan Conway and Sheila Bromley have the leading roles.

Columbia Completes Three

Columbia accounted for three of the 12 finished pictures with "Incredible Mr. Williams," "Street of Missing Women" and "Gun Lord of the Frontier." Republic checked in with two, "Zorro's Fighting Legion" and "Cowboys from Texas," as did 20th Century-Fox, which finished "Daytime Wife" and "Everything Happens at Night."

For United Artists distribution, Samuel Goldwyn finished "Raffles" and Walter Wanger turned in "City for Sale," formerly titled "Send Another Coffin."

"The Secret of Dr. Kildare" was completed at MGM while Monogram removed "Roll, Wagons' Roll" from the active list and Harry Edington's production for Universal, "Green Hell," crossed the finish line.

THREE STORIES BOUGHT FOR BIG PICTURES

Supplementing already announced production plans, three studios have purchased three new stories, each of which will be made as a big picture. Cecil B. DeMille has bought "The Son of Glory", an original, from its authors, J. Robert Bren and Gladys Atwater. The story deals with the development of the Southwest, a geographical jump of a couple thousand miles from the locale of "Northwest Mounted Police", which he has not yet started.

With one story dealing with events in pre-war Germany, Iscount Castleross' "I Had a Comrade", definitely set for production shortly after January 1st, MGM has bought "Escape", a story by Ethel Vance which appeared recently serially in The Saturday Evening Post and since has been published in book form and sold 175,000 copies in the first three weeks of publication. It is the story of a German actress.

At Twentieth Century-Fox Darryl F. Zanuck has acquired rights to "Marching as to War", an original story dealing with the Salvation Army. The authors, Lawrence Pohle and Thomas Aherne, are preparing it.

STUDIO UNION AUTHORIZES STRIKE; EXTRAS WITHDRAW THEIR PETITION

Painters Support Demand for 15% Pay Raise; Writers Nominate; Eastern Actors Voting on Advisory Council

Union activity in the motion picture industry was distributed as widely as ever this week but was relatively quiet. The sole disturbing development indicated was the strike authorization given by its members to the officers of the Motion Picture Painters' Local 644, Hollywood, to gain a 15 per cent wage increase.

Reject Plea for Delay

The authorization to strike, "at any time," was given to the painters' executive board. The local at the same time rejected the producers' request that the wage demand be postponed until December 5th, when the studio representatives meet with representatives of the "Big Five" international unions to draw up a new "basic agreement."

Also on the Coast, the Cinema Players, Inc., withdrew without prejudice its petitions before the National Labor Relations Board for designation as sole collective bargaining agency, for extras and stunt men. It criticized the board for delay in considering the petitions. Walter Spreckels, regional director for the board, had asked the Players to withdraw their petitions, saying they had failed to support their claims.

Screen Writers Nominate

In Hollywood, also, Mary McCall and Sheridan Gibney have been nominated for the presidency of the Screen Writers Guild.

The Guild will meet November 8th in annual convention. The war's effect on the motion pictures, and especially, on writers, will be the principal topic.

The vote of the Artists' Managers Guild, in Hollywood, on a proposed franchise agreement with the Screen Actors Guild was deferred, last week, till managers could examine the contract in entirety. The vote may be taken this week; but it was also expected that the Guild would be asked to change certain aspects of the agreement.

Officers of the Screen Actors Guild last week began probing rumors of favoritism and "payoffs" in obtaining work in Hollywood. Ralph Morgan, president, asserted that extras had complained that the Central Casting Office had "favorites" for the best and most frequent assignments.

Voting on Advisory Council

Members of the Eastern branch of the Guild have received ballots to record choices for the advisory council of the East. These are to be returned before next Thursday, and the results are to be announced on Friday, at the annual meeting of the Guild's Eastern section, at the Hotel Astor, New York City. Fifteen members, succeeding the former nine, are to be elected to the advisory council.

Final negotiations on the new two-year contract between the five newsreels and Cameramen's Local 644 were expected in New York next week. Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, was to come East for the negotiations, under a new assignment whereby he is to handle Eastern labor matters.

The contract, already tentatively approved, embodies a ten per cent wage increase for newsreel cameramen and a prohibition against the "pooling" of resources by the employing companies, except where Governmental regulations necessitate the use of only one crew.

Sues to Restrain Picketing

In St. Louis, the Eden Theatre Company, a subsidiary of the Fanchon and Marco Service Corporation and the St. Louis Amusement Company, filed suit in St. Louis County circuit court to restrain picketing at the Fox theatre, a first-run, and eight neighborhood theatres. Robert Tomsen, president of Motion Picture Projection Operators Local 143, was named defendant, with seven other officers and 28 union members.

In the same city, the case of the state against John P. Nick, former chief of the union, for extortion of $10,000 from theatre owners in 1936, was declared a mistrial; and retrial was set for November 6th. A juror was accused of talking with a state witness.

In Detroit, Local 5 of the International Association of Operating Engineers, renewed a contract with the United Detroit Theatres, retroactive to September 1st. The union also renewed contracts with several other theatres. The renewals do not involve changes in wages or working hours.

Stagehands Renew Contract

The stagehands' Local 38, of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, also has renewed contracts with theatres using its men, in Detroit.

In Chicago, projectionists' Local 110 warned public school principals this week that it would enforce union wage scales in all shows to which admission is charged.

In the same city, the Theatre Engineers' Union gained restoration of a five per cent wage slice imposed last year.

Chicago exhibitors were reported this week to be considering a demand for reduction in wage scales of their projectionists.

The employees in that city's film exchanges were negotiating this week for a new wage level.

In New York City, officers of Local 702 Technicians Union, were reelected, with the exception of the first vice-president. John Francavilla was elected to this post. John Rugge continues in the presidency, William Vermont as secretary-treasurer.

Also, in New York, at last week's election of officers by Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union, at which, as previously reported, Abraham Kindler was renamed president and Nicholas Pitta was chosen vice-president, the following nine members of the executive board were elected from a slate of 21 men:

James Addesso, chairman; Alfred Schnall, Michael Finkelstein, Joseph Casella, William Greenspan, Allen K. Savitch, Louis Davis, Ignatius Ricca and Jack Millet.

In Cleveland, projectionists and independent exhibitors agreed upon a new one year contract, with no changes. First-run houses and those affiliated with distributors already had signed again with the union at the prevailing terms.

As an aftermath of the actors' inter-union fight, in which the American Federation of Actors was expelled by the parent actors union, the Associated Actor and Artistes of America, a suit for libel by Ralph Whitehead, AFA head, against AAAA leaders, is pending in New York supreme court. Motion to dismiss the suit was to be heard this week.

Television Jurisdiction Disputed

Three member unions of the Four As were reported this week still disputing jurisdiction over television performers. The three unions are the Screen Actors' Guild, Actors' Equity, and the American Federation of Radio Artists.

The Actors Guild stand was modified, in relation to its jurisdictional claims, by a declaration from its spokesmen that it would not try to enforce a closed shop in television, but would be satisfied if union scales were paid to television performers, and if they belonged to at least one of the Four As unions.

The "one big union" plan of the Four As, whereby office space and personnel would be reformed and possibly cut, and whereby economies in the payment of dues would be effected, appeared delayed in conclusion until next month, when Screen Actors Guild officials are to confer in New York with officers of the other Four As unions.

Chorus Equity last week reported a 50 per cent rise in employment of its members, compared with last year's record.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

There was the mud-packed tomb of the African chief inside the sacred burial house of Kondola, a native village deep in Central Africa. Beside the tomb stood the limb of a tree, exactly the dead chief's height, covered with tribal fetishes.

But the walls were covered with Coca Cola ads, photos of Clark Gable and pictures from virtually every popular American magazine except the National Geographic.

And the fetish pole rested in a rusty American tomato soup can, which the natives explained, kept the chief's spirit uncontaminated.

This demonstrates the "crazy impact of civilization on Africa," according to Ray Garner and Virginia Garner, 26 and 24, respectively, blond young couple from Brooklyn, who, for a honeymoon, spent 16 months taking 10 motion pictures and 3,500 still shots of the Belgian Congo and the French Cameroon, as described in Motion Picture Herald, three weeks ago.

Any morning between five and seven, with the rising sun, the Roxy management lets loose a full dozen staff porters with sharpened putty knives, pails and a strong de-gummer to pry loose the wads let loose along the long expanse of Roxy sidewalk. Up the street, on the Music Hall's sidewalk, a scant two or three de-gummers may be seen engaged in the same de-gumming. Heads of foreign film departments in New York who are trying with such handicaps to keep straight on their daily-changing European markets, might consider wall maps with rubber borders.

It's a long jump from dynamos and motors to Mickey Mouse oatmeal plates for young Buster and Mickey Mouse milk cups for the babe in bib, but Westinghouse Electric has made the grade with one swoop—but made it unconsciously.

Most on the outside are aware that Westinghouse, today, as it has for years, stands among the leaders in the manufacture of electrical products and electrical gadgets; but few know that the same company also is one of the leading makers of tableware, toys, smokers' articles and smokers fittings, spoons, plates, tumblers and kitchenware and hundreds of such things, many with pictures glorifying Walter Disney's Mickey Mouse, Mickey's gang, Walt's Snow White, soon Walt's Pinocchio.

It came about this way: When the possibilities of plastics were first startling industry, Westinghouse took over a plastics plant near its Bridgeport, Conn., electrical equipment plant, to mould various plastic devices to house its electrical outlets, switches, plugs, fuses and other connections in wiring systems. The capacity of this plant was greater than their needs, so they either had to cut it down or find new uses for plastics—and they found new uses, in the vivid, rainbow colors now used in their dish-and-ash tray sideline. Licenses were obtained from Disney and other cartoon creators to use their characters. And that's how Mickey Mouse joined the Westinghouse family.

Since Washington effected that wholesale slash in WPA ranks, some months ago, there has been wonderment about what the WPA Federal Writers' Project might do about that bibliography of the motion picture which it has had in compilation for so long. Practically no word has come out of the Project on the subject for months. However, all seems not lost, the Project is not gone, for word of "new life" came only this week from Project headquarters down on King Street in New York that Project researchers on a writing project of one kind or another had uncovered a bill itemizing the cost of hanging and burying a criminal in New York back in 1752. The executioner got five pounds, eight shillings for hanging one Charles Beekman, Negro; a horse and cart to cart him cost 12 shillings, a rope to hang him, five shillings, three shillings went to "horse hyer," and two shillings, nine pence for "liquor for hangman." Actual burial cost six shillings—less than two dollars.

Eddie Buzzell had finished his job—and he'll admit it was some job, directing "Marx Brothers at the Circus" (released last week, MGM, free advt.). In appreciation, Groucho, Harpo and Chico, who appear in the picture, gave Eddie a dinner, with the aid of Zeppo and Gummo, who do not appear in the picture. The big-feed started at Hollywood's Trocadero. Groucho told the waiter the place was too dark. The waiter asked him why he didn't strike a match. That started a "quarrel," and they all left in a seeming huff. They went in search of a "swell cafe" Harpo knew about.

Harpo couldn't find it. However, he found a man at a street-curb with a hot-dog wagon. Harpo produced bridge tables and chairs and set them up on the sidewalk. The hot-dog man served chicken soup. Eddie Buzzell in the meantime was feeling a bit of nervous indigestion.

Harpo then maneuvered Eddie and the rest of the Mad Marxes to a Hungarian restaurant but another "fight," prearranged, started after the entree so Chico suggested they go see a wrestling match.

The American Legion Stadium was locked, but they broke in and found two wrestlers and a referee in the ring. They were served ice cream and cake in the ring with the contestants still going strong.

TELEVISION WILL NOT COMPETE: NBC; STILL LACKING PLANS FOR SUPPORT

Will Supplement and Complement Films with Educational and Cultural Programs, Says C. W. Farrier, Coordinator

Television still stands without any practicable plan of self-support, after all the years of laboratory approach, technical development and its first six months of regular daily broadcasts, via NBC-RCA, which terminate this weekend with the close of the New York World's Fair. NBC started its public telecasting at the Fair's opening last April.

Admission of the "very red," "unhealthy" economic condition of the medium at this time came from C. W. Farrier, television coordinator for National Broadcasting. For film exhibitors, from NBC, comes the assurance that television will not be a competitor.

Supplement and Complement

The telecasters see years ahead before a representative program is brought before the television camera. When it does arrive, Mr. Farrier predicted, "it will radiate more educational and cultural programs than Hollywood has been able to produce." The medium will both "supplement and complement the movies and radio," with the day rapidly approaching "when we shall be unable to fill our current needs by drawing on material in film vaults and in stage libraries," he said.

Mr. Farrier, however, declared that television will not compete directly with entertainment media, that "it will stand alone and give expression to human activities in novel and individual ways."

Studying Film Methods

"Besides trying to change the color of the financial ink from red to black," said Mr. Farrier, there was also "the responsibility of studying movie production methods, since there are obvious similarities between movie and television programming.

"From time to time we also call on the stage and the movies for help in building television programs. In this way television is taking root in the vast scheme of modern entertainment."

"Television needs the reaction of many people before it can fully utilize the materials and the talents now available," he explained. "Although not extraordinarily high, the artistic level of production to date was achieved with the aid of comments from televiewers in the New York metropolitan area. As our audiences increase, we will learn more about production from their reactions also.

". . .Our first big job is to produce the entertainment that will sell television to the public.

New Technic Required

"It would appear simple for us to rent or borrow films from Hollywood and merely transmit them through space. But even at this stage we know that the usual celluloid drama is unsuited to television. The consensus is that if we are going to use films extensively, they must meet television requirements."

"The possible scope of television embraces so many phases of human activity that it will take years to bring representative programs before the cameras," declared Mr. Farrier, adding: "Television will radiate more educational and cultural programs than Hollywood has even been able to provide.

"Among our numerous prospects are programs showing the motions of heavenly bodies, experiments in science, lessons in agriculture, methods of safeguarding public health, lessons in safety, pictures of microscopic life and microscopic reactions, candid television, slow motion television, and travelogues.

"In all this preliminary activity we are fully conscious that, although television will supplement and complement the movies and radio, we must work out new treatments and techniques. Stage, radio, and movie material can be adapted to television, but the presentation of a television program differs from any other presentation, and as time goes on, the differences will become even more marked.

Doubts Direct Competition

"The day rapidly approaches when we shall be unable to fill our current needs by drawing on material in film vaults and in stage libraries. The maw of television could easily absorb all that the world's film studios produce. In going afield for new material we realize that television is an ultra-modern art and that it cares nothing about precedents; we can, therefore, experiment with the most unorthodox program material and bring before your eyes a new world of animation and drama."

"It is wrong to assume that television may compete directly with other entertainment media," he continued. "It will stand alone and give expression to human activities in novel and individual ways. Television is especially designed for home consumption, and it does not compete with entertainments where your enjoyment and thrill depends to a considerable extent on the presence of a large audience under one roof.

"A flourishing theatre and a booming movie industry would prove a boon to television, for it would give more talented people their opportunity to develop; it would also facilitate an interchange of talent from one medium to another. If the metropolitan theatre suffers after the public advent of television, there will be a compensating theatre revival in rural centers.

"The cost of television entertainment, which present calculations give as about three times the cost of radio entertainment, will necessarily limit the distribution of programs. A television antenna one-quarter of a mile high covers an area with a radius of about 50 miles, and so it appears probable that a large portion of the country will be without television entertainment.

Sound Radio Demand Seen

"One hundred transmitters located at strategic points can cover about four per cent of the country's area, inhabited by 45 per cent of the population. A transmitter in the heart of New York, such as that atop the Empire State Building, covers about 8,000 square miles, inhabited by about 11,000,000 people.

"These considerations lead us to believe that sound radio will always be useful and in demand. First, because it enjoys a much wider range of transmission and can reach remote settlements. Next, because people are inherently music-loving and they find pleasure in moving about the house or even in talking with a background of music. Finally, because radio does not limit your mobility; you may hear a program while driving through the country or riding sky high in an airplane. When the country's leading manufacturers agree on a set of standards for an American television system, your prospective investment in a home receiver will be protected, and you will have immediate access to any program in a given area."

"At present, about a dozen firms are equipped to turn out such receivers. Mass production will begin when these manufacturers adopt standards that will allow each receiver a reasonable period of use before obsolescence sets in," concluded Mr. Farrier.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF NEWSREEL THEATRE

The Embassy Newsreel thearte, New York, the first newsreel theatre in the United States, celebrates its tenth anniversary on November 2nd. At the ceremony will be shown a two-reel subject compiled by Fox Movietone News from the original program. Lowell Thomas will introduce Courtland Smith, who conceived the newsreel theatre while head of Movietone News, Truman Talley, present editor, and W. French Githens, president of the theatre.

The part of the original program which will be shown to the guests at the celebrations includes: the attempted assassination of Prince Humbert of Italy; the interior of the Stock Exchange during the crash in 1929; Winston Churchill speaking on the friendly relations between Great Britain and the United States, and the opening of the George Washington Bridge.

In point of historical fact the newsreel theatre came before the newsreel. It was the Pathe Journal, a nickelodeon type house, devoted to current events, opened in Paris in the dawn years. To supply that, Pathe's European newsreel evolved and in time came overseas to America with an edition ancestral to the Pathe News of today.— THE EDITOR.

Mrs. Lillian Ziff-Marks, owner of the Bellard theatre, Fort Erie, Ontario, will build another theatre opposite the Buffalo and Fort Erie ferry landing at an estimated $75,000. Mrs. Ziff-Marks also bought the Elmwood theatre, London, Ont.

Rights to a French weekly news issue, "Bulletins," have been acquired by the French Cinema Center. The films will be flown to New York by clipper. The commentary will be in English. The running time of each issue will be ten minutes.

U. S., MAJORS, OUTSIDE INTERESTS ADVANCE PLANS FOR SCHOOL FILMS

Department of Commerce Executive Outlines Possible Standards for Industrial Films; Distribution-Company Formed

The educational motion picture field took a sudden spurt this week on three fronts:

The United States Government cited the need for the use of industrial films in education;

The major motion picture companies' own plans for participating in the educational films field reached the point of actually supplying prints to schools, moderately at this outset;

The Harmon Foundation, 17-year-old philanthropic organization, set plans for a marked expansion of its work in the field of the educational motion picture.

The place of the industrial film in education is seen as far greater than that which it fills at present, and adherence to a set of standards would enable it to fill that place, according to Nathan Golden, chief of the motion picture division of the United States Department of Commerce, who sees industrial films as "virtually indispensable" in American education.

Saying that "the room for expansion is immense," and that "the potentialities have as yet been merely scratched," Mr. Golden points out that a "burdensome amount of advertising" has typically closed most "educational channels of distribution" for industrial films. In this respect, Mr. Golden's statement says that "the sponsor should be satisfied with credits on the main title and a minimum use of his name elsewhere."

Six other standards for the industrial film intended for school distribution are discussed by Mr. Golden, in addition to the minimizing of advertising matter.

Saying that the ideals of the educational field and the school system must be recognized in order to know the type of film which would be acceptable, Mr. Golden cites those ideals as the installation of a sense of responsibility and decent conduct towards others; the teaching of certain fundamentals; the addition of culture to knowledge, and the preservation of such American institutions as liberty in religion, politics and economics.

Another point raised by Mr. Golden is that propaganda, "whether for a tube of toothpaste or a new economic theory," has no place in the schools of America. Thus, in addition, an education film should definitely be entertaining. In this connection, it is pointed out that the use of analogies and contrasts may profitably be used to add interest.

Competent Production Needed

The use of talent, it is felt, should not be confined to either the actual workers in the industry depicted or professionals; both should play their part; the former to really represent the part, the latter for emotional representation. Writing and direction should also call for the use of skilled people, while "competence in production is most important, as the school audience has a genius for detecting faults as well as frauds."

Mr. Golden says that there is a large demand, as yet unsatisfied, for sponsored educational films, and that the demand is growing. The facilities for distribution, including visual-education libraries, philanthropic foundations and Government agencies, are adequate to handle the films.

Saying that "true education today must embrace a broad, clear comprehension of all the major factors that go to make up modern life," Mr. Golden adds that American industry is outstanding among those factors and that democracy, if it is to "stand its ground, must be based on an adequately informed public opinion." This knowledge may best be inculcated, says Mr. Golden, through visual education as presented by the factual motion picture.

Classroom Films Ready

The actual supplying of films to the schools of the country by the majors is under way, with several hundred inquiries, as well as many orders, having been received as schools are preparing to open for the fall. Teaching Film Custodians was formed weeks ago to handle the promotional and distribution activities of the school films by the majors in conjunction with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Teaching Film Custodians, a non-profit corporation, is making short films from regular theatrical pictures supplied by Columbia, Walt Disney, Educational, Loew's, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners. All of the films are at least a year old so as to be non-competitive to theatres. Rentals range from $10 per reel for half a school year to $30 for three school years. There are some 600 subjects available.

The subject matter of the pictures covers six main divisions: Art and Music; Literature and Biography; The Sciences; the Social Studies; Health, Physical Education and Recreation, and The Practical Arts and Vocations.

Other Agencies in Field

The coming school season will see a marked increase in the number of non-theatrical reels, domestic and foreign, for schools and churches.

The Religious Films Society of England, working in conjunction with GHW Productions, will distribute some of its films in this country through the facilities of the Division of Visual Experiment of the Harmon Foundation of New York, and will in turn handle some of the Foundation's films in England. The pictures to be distributed over here, all 16 mm. and in sound, include a four reel Life of William Tyndale, a two reel study of the Life of Barabas, five reels on the Life of St. Paul, seven reels on "The Holy Land from Abraham to Allenby," and a four-reel study of the life of a pastor.

In addition, the Foundation will distribute, through its own facilities or those of the Young Men's Christian Association motion picture bureau, or of the Ryerson Film Service, which handles distribution of the films in Canada, its own series of films, both religious and instructional, amounting to some 300 reels. These films are typically silent, and in 1938 consisted of 30 reels on 12 subjects, ranging from "How to Make Movies" to a study of the cooperative movement in Nova Scotia. No Biblical work has been done by the Foundation in films since 1931, when unused portions of film taken for "The King of Kings" were made into a 13 reel study of the Life of Christ, called "I Am the Way." Shown at approximately 3,500 churches to date, the demand for it is said to be increasing.

However, in cooperation with Protestant churches, a film on missionary, leprosy and medical work is now being made by the Foundation's Religious Motion Picture Division in the Cameroons and the Belgian Congo.

The Harmon Foundation was started in 1922 by the late William E. Harmon, as a non-profit corporation and family foundation for "engaging in humanitarian enterprises which give promise of rendering a constructive contribution to public well-being." In addition to the film work, the Foundation's program is divided into four main groups: The Division of Playgrounds; The Division of Student Loans; the Division of Awards for Constructive and Creative Achievement, and The Division of Social Research and Experimentation.

Officers of the Foundation are W. Burke Harmon, president; Helen G. Harmon, vice-president; Anna E. Males, treasurer, and Mary Beattie Brady, secretary. Miss Brady, who became associated with the organization in 1923, is also the Foundation's director.

Began in 1925

The Foundation's work in films started in 1925 with one or two reel subjects on New Testament themes, encouraged by Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts. These were intended for use in Sunday evening services, which, it was felt, could be made more vital and interesting with the additional of visualization as an integral part of the service. The films were thought of by the Foundation as "only a vehicle in the hands of the minister," and the Foundation was not interested "in building up attendance, but only in aiding inspiration and worship through the medium of films."

Distribution difficulties encountered in the use of regular film channels led to the start of the Religious Motion Picture Foundation, the work of which, it was hoped, would be taken over eventually by some interdenominational organization.

Recently started was the Religious Film Cooperative, in Atlanta, Georgia, which will cooperate with the Foundation. The Cooperative was started by W. Wells Alexander of The Distributors' Group (which handles projectors, visual education material, etc.), and E. H. Stevens, with the backing of a church group. It will cooperate with the International Council of Religious Education, and will handle a group of religious films on a cost basis for those using them.

It is felt by the Foundation that the films it makes are "equally valuable for Church and lay group; each reads its own meaning into them." Some of the recent films, in addition to those already mentioned, which are typically 16 mm silent pictures directed by Kenneth F. Space, include "Children in Search of God," "The Unwelcome Guest," "In Hallowed Paths," "Ngono and Her People," "Nurses in the Making," "The Lord Helps Those," "Know Your Typewriter," "We Are All Artists," "Glimpses of Modern China," "Japan and Her Problems," and "The Child Explores His World."

RATING OF FILMS BY SCHOOL METHOD

E. B. Radcliff, film critic of the Cincinnati Enquirer, is now rating films by the report card method. The ratings are tabulated in columnar form, and the "marks" of A, B, C and D assigned. A footnote explains the alphabetical ratings as Excellent, Good, Fair and Poor. Addition of plus and minus signs are used where intermediate ratings might apply. Mr. Radcliff calls the system "Movie Report Card."

MEXICO MAY CANCEL 4% EXPORT FUND TAX

Another Tax on American and Foreign Films Threatened, Also Limitation of Showings

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

The Ministry of Finance is considering the abolition of the absentee tax, an impost of four per cent on all money sent out of Mexico. This tax has been in effect for several years and has been costly to distributors and other foreign businessmen. The levy was established with the intent of keeping as much money in Mexico as possible.

Abolition of the tax, it is contended, will attract more foreign capital and serve to improve things generally. The Ministry is expected to act on the proposition shortly.

New Tax in Prospect

At the same time another tax on the exhibition of American and other foreign films is in prospect as a result of lobbying Mexican producers who argue that such regulation would be the most effective method of aiding domestic production.

Advancement of plans for the organization of a state-controlled bank to finance the Mexican film industry has been attained with the appointment of a committee by the industry to work toward this end with the Government.

Mexico now has 701 film houses in active service, according to a survey of exhibitors. These theatres include two large and modern provincial houses that have just opened, the Cine Coliseo, 5,000 seats, in Puebla City, owned by the Iglesias Brothers, and the Cine Ideal, 4,000 seats, in Salvatierra, Guanajuato State.

Mexican distributors of French pictures are worrying about the $52,000 they paid Gallic producers in advance for distribution rights in Mexico. War has suspended production of films the Mexicans contracted for. Among the films thus contracted are "Le Corsaire," starring Charles Boyer, for which $6,000 was posted; Danielle Darrieux's "Batement de Coeur," $4,000, and Simone Simon's "Cavalgate de Amour," $2,500.

Revenue Would Go to Production

Producers backing the exhibition tax say that the present revenue from import duties on films—now $3.35 per net kilogram on those in English and all other foreign languages, and $1.35 the kilogram for those in Spanish—is not sufficient to justify Government subsidies.

The local Municipal Government has started its annual check-up on the box office of all film houses, work that continues until the end of the year, to gauge the amount of taxes the exhibitors shall pay in 1940.

With aid of the government of California, Mexico is arranging to present her side of the oil controversy in the form of a motion picture, according to an official Mexican government announcement. Charles A. Page, private secretary of the governor of California, is in Mexico City preparing for the picture, which, the announcement says, will involve Paul Muni, Ralph Bates and George Stevens. The statement asserts that a $30,000 fund has been raised to finance the film which is intended to "counteract the calumnious and perfidious campaign against Mexico that some American oil companies are waging."

Work on the picture is expected to get underway soon. The Mexican phases of it are to be handled by Lic. Agustin Arroyo Ch, chief of the government's press and publicity department.

Mexican picture censors reviewed 118 films during July—84 American, eight German, six Mexican, six French, five Spanish, three Egyptian, two Russian, two Argentine, one Italian and one Czechoslovakian. Only one, a French film, was banned on the ground that it contains some "immoral scenes." Changes were ordered in 14 others.

Industry Facing New Tax Threat

Already faced with a $2,000,000 accumulated sales tax bill on film rentals in Ohio, claimed in a taxpayers' suit, the motion picture industry faces further serious threats from a series of new taxes which would apply directly or indirectly, if passed, reenactment of the old 10 per cent admission levy presenting the most damaging possibilities.

Industry Fights Suit

Exhibitors and distributors are fighting the Ohio suit, which contests a ruling of the State Tax Commission exempting film rentals from the state 3 per cent sales tax. The levy is on gross sales. If the decision is against the Tax Commission, the state will collect taxes which have been in default since the law went into effect three years ago.

Although no one within the state will be exempt from new direct and indirect taxes, those levies directly affecting the theatre would include reinstatement of the former 10 per cent admission impost. Exhibitors now pay 3 per cent on gross receipts. Various other taxes including a new sales levy of at least three per cent are contemplated.

On the basis of incomplete returns, tax collections in Ohio increased $10,000,000 for the first nine month of this year, compared with the corresponding period of 1938, according to William S. Evatt, state tax commissioner. Admission tax collections for the period rose from $1,110,000 in 1938 to $1,193,000 for three quarters of this year.

New Florida Taxes

License fees for the year which began on October 1st in Tampa, Fla., have been sharply increased. Formerly theatres paid a standard rate of $150. The standard is now $175 for showing pictures and graded up according to the number of seats and admission price. The basic rate is for theatres with less than 1,000 seats and admissions not over 20c. The tax is $750 on theatres over 1,400 seats that charge over 20c admission. These licenses are for Tampa only. All theatres must pay $450 in addition for state and county licenses. Port St. Joe has enacted a two cent tax on each theatre ticket. At Defuniak a three cent levy on tickets selling for 15c or more has been imposed.

N. H. Egress Ruling

New Hampshire theatres come under the new egress ruling announced by the State Board of Health: "All ground-floor outer exits from buildings shall give free and unobstructed egress to the street, through an alley, yard or court, or through a fire resistive passage at least four feet in width, with at least six inches additional width for each 50 persons accommodated in such buildings above 300."

Wisconsin Tax Threat

Although the Wisconsin legislature has adjourned, an 18-member interim committee will arrange a tax program for presentation to a special session scheduled next month. This action was taken because of a $21,000,000 budget deficit for the biennium.

Louisiana Compromise Seen

The film exchanges controversy in Louisiana over arbitrarily assessed personal property taxes seemed on its way to a settlement this week as the state tentatively agreed to accept a plan offered by the exchanges upon which to tax the film in their vaults.

Under the present suggestion, film would depreciate progressively over a year's period and then have a fixed value of 30 cents a reel, excepting newsreels which become obsolete after the first month. The rate base is one to three months, $15 a reel; three to six months, $7.50; six to nine, $3.75; nine to 12, $1.67. Newsreels in the first month are assessed at $15.

To Consider Tax Revival

From Ontario Government sources it is learned that the return of the amusement tax will be dealt with at the next session of the Provincial legislature, in January. It is believed the tax may be collected as a percentage of box office receipts, certified reports of which would be required by the Government for assessment purposes.

Fight Tax Assessments

Claiming excessive assessments totaling $215,000 on three New York properties, Twentieth Century-Fox has filed writs of certiorari in New York supreme court asking the court to order reductions. Properties affected are 452 West 54th Street, 434 West 56th Street and 830 Tenth Avenue, assessed respectively for $330,000, $445,000 and $815,000 for 1939-'40.

Dismissal of a writ of certiorari for a reduction of $480,000 on assessments of the Astor, Bijou and Morosco theatres for 1933 and 1934 was asked this week by the City Tax Commission in an answer filed in New York supreme court. The answer claimed that assessments of $2,840,000 for 1933 and $2,590,000 for 1934 were a fair evaluation and that the application of the Astor-Bijou-Morosco Theatres Realty Corporation for a court reduction was improper.

Subpoena Tax Records

Tax records of the Henry Lazarus Theatres, Inc., which operated the Center, a downtown house, and the Coliseum, a neighborhood house, in New Orleans, have been subpoenaed in connection with a "tax assessment reduction racket."

The books of the theatre corporation were ordered brought into the open hearing which is being held on charges of incompetence in office brought against the New Orleans district attorney, Charles Byrne, by seven members of the grand jury.

Attorneys for the grand jurors who brought the charges of incompetence against the district attorney, claim the corporation paid 50 per cent of the amount of the tax reduced to persons obtaining the reduction.

The only public referendum in Luzerne County, Pa., in the November election will take place in Forty Fort on the question of whether or not Sunday motion pictures will be permitted. The question was placed on the ballot after a petition, bearing the signatures of 300 residents of the town, was presented to the Forty Fort council and, in turn, to election officials. At present the town has only one theatre, the new Forty Fort, of which Alexander Alexander is manager. A score of other Pennsylvania communities will also vote on the Sunday film question at the November election.

Historical Melodrama

The John Wayne and Claire Trevor of "Stage Coach" and the George Sanders of the "Saint" series join up here with the Brian Donlevy of "Beau Geste" to provide exhibitors with a plenitude of exploitation material. They are engaged this time in a highly melodramatic incident that took place in the Pennsylvania area some 16 years before the Declaration of Independence was signed, specifically a conflict between the settlers and the Red Coats regarding distribution of English-made weapons and rum to the Indians.

The story, a most unfamiliar variety of product and quite welcome in this era of history-in-the-making, is by Neil H. Swanson, the screen play by P. J. Wolfson, who also produced the picture. William A. Seiter directed.

It is a swift, actionful, robust and sometimes raucous adventure film, a production made-to-order for the juvenile trade and satisfactory for adults. It may be remarked, incidentally, that the Red Coats are depicted as somewhat stupid in their rigid obedience to orders, somewhat bland in their reactions to pressing circumstances, but not venal or vicious or vindictive at any time and, finally, as virtuous in their swift rectification of early errors.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, where the picture followed the melodramatic "Rio" and preceded the current edition of "The March of Time," audience reaction indicating approval.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

On Your Toes

(First National)

Musical Comedy

Vera Zorina, who captivated Broadway when she appeared on the stage in "I Married an Angel" in 1936, bids fair to capture the imaginations of those along the Broadways of America in this sparkling screen version of the story of a Russian ballet troupe.

The score of this screen musical, by Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, as is that of MGM's "Babes in Arms," also now on Broadway, is marked by the brand of tuneful melody which has created a secure place for the Rodgers-Hart combination in American popular music. Outstanding is the sequence titled "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue", both musically and as a comedy high point when presented as a satire on the Russian ballet.

Matching the score are the performances turned in by Zorina, whose camera presence is as natural and graceful as her dancing, directed here by a her husband, George Balanchine, Eddy Albert, as the young vaudeville hoofer anxious to be a composer, and Leonid Kinskey, as a Russian man of all work, musically speaking, also contribute to the kind of entertainment which should be good for extended playing time.

In the story, such as there is, and no more is needed, Eddy Albert, as "Phil Dolan, Jr." composes a number which, after much delay, is performed as a ballet routine by a Russian troupe, thanks largely to the efforts of Zorina. In the process, the ballet is lampooned and some first class comedy is enacted.

The camera work is on a par with the remainder of the production; especially noteworthy are the shots of the actual dancing as a serious ballet is performed.

Those High Grey Walls

(Columbia)

Human Interest

The customary prison melodrama ingredients are here, yet the production is unlike any to be found in a carload of prison melodramas. It is a human interest story of an unassuming country doctor of big heart towards his fellow citizens. He runs afoul of the law by administering to a wounded criminal and harboring him without notifying the authorities. He is sent to prison. Accused of murdering a patient in the prison hospital, he is cleared by the inmates, who point out the murderer. But what probably pleases the country doctor most is that he has helped the prison doctor, who buried himself in the penitentiary because a girl died in childbirth through his carelessness. The climax comes when a convict's wife, on a visit to the prison, is about to become a mother.

Walter Connolly as the country doctor brings conviction to a role especially suited to him and Onslow Stevens, the young prison doctor, handles his role in capable fashion. Supporting players include Paul Fix, Bernard Nedell, Iris Meredith and Oscar O'Shea. Charles Vidor directed from a screen play by Lewis Meltzer which was based on a story by William A. Ullman, Jr.

20,000 Men a Year

Topical Aviation

The exploitation value of the title is backed by an action story that has much to interest juvenile audiences. Although not a propaganda picture, "20,000 Men a Year" takes its title from the Government's plan to train that many university and junior college students yearly as a military aviation reserve, and the theme shows one way in which the plan is successfully developed. The producer, Sol M. Wurtzel, and Alfred E. Green, the director, concentrated attention on thrill action and comedy and played down love interest. Frank Wead, long experienced in preparing aviation stories, wrote the original in a way that gives it authenticity, and screen playwrights Lou Breslow and Owen Frances added the necessary theatrical touches.

For names the cast has Randolph Scott, Preston Foster and Margaret Lindsay.

Fired from his air transport job for disobeying orders, "Brad Reynolds" finds operating a one-plane airdrome no gold mine and is about to surrender it to the mortgagee when the government's plan is announced, his port selected a training site and he named instructor. Taking student "Howell" who is afraid to fly, in personal charge, "Reynolds" has him in the air when an accident happens and the frightened lad bails out. Cracking up the ship, "Reynolds" gets another, into which climbs young "Rogers," whose sister, "Ann," has forbidden him to fly. After some breakneck flying, the rescue pair find "Howell" hanging on a cliff and "Reynolds" is injured saving him, and so "Howell" has to pilot the plane out of an almost impossible take-off back to the school. The finale shows a sky full of young aviators flying planes.

The idea on which "20,000 Men a Year" is founded is the principal showmanship angle. It makes possible exploitation contacts with institutions in which the plan will go into operation. Likewise, it affords opportunity for contacts with aviation organizations, airports, flying clubs as well as patriotic and preparedness groups.

Bad Little Angel

(MGM)

Oldfashioned Melodrama

Although no point has been made of it, this wholesome story about a little girl who believes in God is a particularly appropriate item for exhibition in connection with observation of the cinema's 50th anniversary. The time is roughly 1880 and the plot and moral are of the plain, direct variety then in favor. Staging, costuming, dialogue and performance are in strict conformity with the manner of the period, the total effect exerting emotional appeal powerful in sharp contrast to that of most modern narratives now on the screen.

Dorothy Yost's screen play, based on a book by Margaret Turnbull, tells in simple form the story of an orphan who runs away from an orphanage, taking her dog along, finds refuge in a small town family's modest home and, becoming enmeshed in domestic and economic crises, solves each of her problems and those of all concerned, by opening a Bible at random and bringing her index finger down at passages of Scripture which supply needed guidance. The town moneybags becomes a benefactor, the town drunkard reforms, and all concerned are benefited by her faith.

Virginia Weidler is splendid as the orphan, clinching her right to stardom, while Gene Reynolds gives distinguished aid as the boy who befriends her. Guy Kibbe, Henry Hull and Reginald Owen play heavily underlined character roles with full fidelity to tradition. Ian Hunter and Lois Wilson handle straight portrayals smoothly. Elizabeth Patterson is extremely effective in a brief appearance.

To producer Albert E. Levoy and director William Thiele, for keeping the production true to the melodramatic traditions of the era represented while giving it benefit of every technological grace the art has developed in half a century, all honour. Their film is a fine thing to have in distribution at this or any time, a family film of extraordinary merit.

The Cat and the Canary

(Paramount)

Thriller Diller

Paramount here has solved neatly for itself, exhibitors and customers the heretofore perplexing problem of what to do with Bob Hope, admittedly one of the funniest comedians who ever faced a camera, yet never until now the sure-fire laugh getter on the screen that his following knew him to be in fact.

By dipping back into the yesteryears for this tried and truthworthy mystery thriller and placing Hope in it with leave to explode a full equipment of incidental gags at will, the company has achieved a film as full of laughs as chills, giggles as shrieks, an all-purpose picture appropriate for exhibition at any time and place.

This time, too, Hope has been provided with top quality support and polished production, the latter by gifted Arthur Hornblow, Jr. He is beneficiary likewise of the knowing direction of Elliott Nugent, who acted the play when it was a stage hit and knows its points accordingly. Walter DeLeon and Lynn Starling set a new mark for themselves by combining the Hope gags with the dialogue of an originally unhumorous subject so adroitly as to benefit both.

Paulette Goddard is the girl in the case, giving nice accounting of the assignment, while Elizabeth Patterson and Gale Sondergaard furnish additional profitable performances on the distaff side. John Beal and Douglass Montgomery are pleasantly present in the secondary male roles, with George Zucco adding a telling though brief characterization.

It's a nice piece of product to exploit and enough like the original play to satisfy those who know it, while thrilling as if new those who do not.

Beware Spooks

(Columbia)

Farce Comedy

The prime exploitation value of "Beware Spooks" is Joe E. Brown and the star's record more or less designates the type of theatre in which the show should enjoy greatest favor. Second for showmanship as well as audience interest is the comedy, geared to farce.

The story, designed for Brown by the screen play writers Richard Flournoy, Albert Duffy and Brian Marlow, from a play by Flournoy, and built for the star by director Edward Sedgwick under Robert Sparks' production supervision, is a unique thing in which the creators tossed rules out the window.

What happens is a ludicrous exposition of "out of the frying pan, into the fire." Fired from the force because he inadvertently permitted killer "Eastman" to escape and aided crook "Bruno" in staging a holdup, ex-rookie copy "Gifford" goes on his honeymoon with "Betty Lou." At a summer resort he picks up "Bruno's" trail in typical Brown comedy fashion. "Bruno" is dead when "Gifford" catches up with him in a fun house, but bigger game is discovered when "Eastman" is found lurking there. Then come about two reels of the wildest nonsensical action as "Gifford" and "Eastman," fighting all the time, chase each other through spooky rooms, over and around all the trick devices, before the cop delivers the outlaw.

Ten Days in Paris

(Columbia-Asher)

Espionage and Romance

The third of Irving Asher's pictures for Columbia substantiates a widely held belief that, given a free hand, he can't go wrong. Here is every bit of the production polish and entertainment sheen of the previous two films—and a good deal more. Though it has a slightly topical note, being concerned with a spy gang's nosiness about the Ligne Maginot, the picture is refreshing fare for all grades of audience.

It lacks front rank names, but Rex Harrison, in his first starring role, is a delight.

The picture boasts an ingenious story. An original by Bruce Graeme has been neatly adapted by John Meehan and James Curtis. It concerns a young Englishman who loses his memory in a plane crash and finds himself mistaken for a master spy. The yarn unfolds, first in lighthearted and then in thrilling fashion, his adventures as a French countess' chauffeur-butler and his ultimate efforts to prevent a bombing outrage on an ammunition train. These passages may be in the line of the older fashioned hokum, but they are expertly handled and have real action punch about them.

Tim Whelan's direction is effective, and with Paris locations and a studied attention to French and military detail the setting never loses a thread of conviction.

Karen Verne, Asher's "discovery," is as easy on the ear as on the eye. Robert Rendel and C. V. France likewise register effectively.

Shown in London in Columbia's pocket trade show theatre, the film gripped its audience throughout.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Danger Flight

(Monogram)

Aviation Adventure

It is evident that, from time of planning through the cutting and editing, the producers considered only those who follow the daily adventures of cartoonist Hal Forrest's "Tailspin

Tommy" as the ultimate audience for "Danger Flight." They designed it for those who go for exciting heroic entertainment whether it be a Western, mystery or adventure.

Inspired by the exploits of the famous "Tailspin," the airport neighborhood lads form a flying club of which a scoffer, "Whitey," becomes a member. Of all his jobs, flying a payroll through a storm is "Tailspin's" most dangerous assignment. Crooks, headed by his brother "Duke," hoodwink "Whitey" into helping them decoy "Tailspin" into a trap so they may grab the money. "Whitey" does as all kids like to imagine themselves doing: he guides help to the rescue.

With plenty of aerial action with real and toy planes, the picture moves with cartoon speed. What the series has done previously is its recommendation.

The Witness Vanishes

(Universal)

"Crime Club" Chiller

A greater surprise than the bloody business unfolded in this "whodunit" puzzle piece is the depiction of personality facets of gentlemen of the press. For item one, a quartet of chiseler-scribes gain control of a newspaper by committing its owner to an insane asylum. Point number two has the unfortunate editor pictured as a lunatic more bent on the mass murder of his former associates than on making a scoop. A Scottish journalist is endowed with a maze of detective and disguise talent.

This Crime Club contribution may hold some interest for thrill seekers. Those who prefer their mystery plots arranged logically may find themselves in a quandary, but the picture has four murders to handle and so must keep to a mayhem schedule of offering a victim every 15 minutes. As to the identity of the witness, that may prove to be a bigger puzzler than the action.

Edmund Lowe and Wendy Barrie play the leads. Except for a heavy demise scene, Mr. Lowe preserves a smooth and flip appearance. Miss Barrie is nice to look at and plays a mighty brave little girl.

Intertwined with all the dark doings is a thread of romance between "Joan Marplay," daughter of the escaped newsman, and "Noel Stretton," the handsome columnist.

The full house audience at the Rialto theatre, Broadway's leading cinematic "Chamber of Horrors," took the picture in its seasoned stride without over-enthusiasm over the exercise.—J. F. C.

March of Time, No. 3

(RKO Radio)

The Farm Situation

Early last spring, March of Time sent a camera crew into the farm lands of the United States to make a comprehensive study of conditions in comparison with a few years back. The result of this study is shown in the latest edition of the March of Time, "Uncle Sam—The Farmers." At the outbreak of the first World War, farmers taking advantage of the boom prices that were being paid for their crops ruined their lands and suffered later from dust storms and floods. In recent years the Department of Agriculture and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration have stepped in and helped the farmer bring his land back into condition and are protecting him from making the same mistake again at the outbreak of the latest war, the reel purports to show. It is an interesting subject that will be appreciated by urban patrons as well as those whose business is farming.—Running time, 20 minutes.

(Paramount British)

Documentary

Compiled from the files of the Paramount British News library and backed by a pugnaciously punctilious commentary, this topical documentary seeks to record the development and condition of Britain's contemporary army. Flashes from the 1914-18 War, and the "Peace" of Versailles, glimpses of Britain's Aldershot Tattoo, studies of her war recruiting campaign and of the training of her citizen Army and the cadets of Sandhurst, grim glimpses of large scale Army maneuvers in which artillery, infantry and mechanized units play equal parts, all make up 2,500 feet of by no means uninteresting chronicle. The commentary expresses Britain's war point of view, but the commentator sounds somewhat unctuous. Aimed primarily to coincide with the national state of mind, the film for neutral countries should have booking value as a close hand view of Britain's military machine. Despite the title there is nothing particularly humorous about the film, which for the most part is graced with good photography.—Running time, 28 minutes.

The Monroe Doctrine

(Vitaphone)

Historical Featuret

"The Monroe Doctrine" is one of Vitaphone's historical color featurets. It is a vivid exposition of the events leading up to the Monroe Doctrine and what the doctrine since has meant to this country. Well acted by a competent cast, the subject has entertainment interest as well as educational value. The characters portrayed include James Monroe, Henry Clay, Daniel Webster, John Quincy Adams, James K. Polk, Millard Fillmore, Grover Cleveland, and William H. Seward from the United States; King Ferdinand of Spain and Washington ambassadors of European and South American countries. The actors include Grant Mitchell, James Stephenson and Sidney Blackmer. A slight thread of romance has been incorporated. The subject is well worth the playing. Directed by Crane Wilbur.—Running time, 16 minutes.

World's Fair Junior

(Vitaphone)

Broadway Brevity

This is one of Vitaphone's kiddie revues in which a youngster acts as master of ceremonies and introduces a variety of kid acts. The youngsters decide to build a world's fair and put on a show of their own. More than a score of youngsters take part in the program, which includes singing, tap dancing, acrobatic numbers and other specialties. Skippy Curle is the master of ceremonies.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Drunk Driving

(MGM)

Crime-Does-Not-Pay

This latest Crime-Does-Not-Pay subject is a powerful lesson against driving after drinking. John Jones, salesman, celebrates a promotion and has a slight accident. This does not stop him. As he speeds his wife and mother to a roadside cafe, there is a collision. A farmer and his wife in a truck are killed, as is Jones' mother-in-law. The farmer's child becomes an orphan; John Jones' wife loses both legs. No details are spared to drive home the danger of "Drunk Driving." The local police, hospital, school and government authorities might cooperate with the theatreman and make sure that the public sees this short.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 68

(Universal)

Oddity

Comprising many strange items, the latest in the Oddities series is up to the standard of the "Stranger Than Fiction" subjects. A collection of pipes, some more than a century old, is displayed. Willie Swan, a Negro of Baton Rouge, La., is known the world over for his ability at making hunting horns, while at Alexander, N. Y., a farmer owns a calf that is also half deer. An eighty year old woman in Colorado has built her own mausoleum and spends many hours a week there to become accustomed to it. Old license plates are utilized for roof shingles on one home and barn in Springer, Okla., while in New York there is a beauty parlor for men only. T. D. Rockwell, of Portland, Ore., has had his name tattooed on his leg in every civilized language on earth and also some dead languages.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Information Please, No. 2

(RKO Pathe)

Stumping the Experts

The board of experts of the "Information Please" radio program, John Kieran, Frank P. Adams and Oscar Levant with the addition of Gene Tunney as guest expert in this second of the Pathe series, continue to answer with aplomb the questions propounded by Clifton Fadiman. The answers are not always according to Hoyle as the experts' personalities come to the fore, but their quotient of correct answers continues high. The film series is as informal as the radio series. It all adds up to entertainment plus. Produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Captain Spanky's Showboat

(MGM)

Our Gang: Troupers

The Gang forsakes its kiddie ways for the time being and mounts a juvenile stage to offer an adult attempt at play production along the "ten-twent'-thirt'" style of melodramatics. Incidental stage sabotage is offered the child thespians by the bully Butch, whose grievance this time is that he seems to be a frustrated songbird. The offering that the midget mummers are doing is a well tried entertainment getter and concerns in alternate moments of thrills and tears the novel tale of the mortgage which is due, a lovely heroine who offers to marry the villain to save the old folk and their homestead, and a neck to neck horse race that settles all the problems. Darla is the heroine, Spanky as the black mustached and designing menace and Alfalfa in the role of the grey-haired pappy enter into the spirit of the occasion. There are moments for Darla and Alfalfa to do their song and dance specialties. Further fun is offered by behind the scene glimpses of how the snow scenes and horse racing sequences are handled. Both the play and the play within a play are slickly run off to make this one of the most amusing Gang enterprises to date.—Running time, 11 minutes.

BROADWAY STAGE STILL AT LOW EBB

The Broadway stage, heart of the legitimate drama in this country, was no better off in the season just passed than in the year before, either from gross quantity or quality viewpoints, continuing along at about the same level as in 1937-38, which witnessed a season of the fewest plays produced in 18 years—a total of 110, the same number as in 1938-39. Some indication of the relation of this to other years can be gleaned by the 286 produced in 1929-30, year of the "crash" and the 302 each of 1926-27 and 1927-28.

The figures are from The Billboard's annual survey of the Broadway theatre, which runs back 19 years. In the first year of the survey, there were 242 productions.

The number of hits in the past season was 24, the same number as in the two previous seasons, but the 72 per cent of total failures in 1938-39 was two per cent less than in 1937-38 and four per cent less than in 1936-37.

One of the greatest changes to take place in the past year was the jump in musical productions, to 31, from the 12 of 1937-38, also the drop in dramatic plays from 98 two years ago to 79 in 1938-39.

Other statistics gathered by The Billboard for the 1938-39 season were: Percentage of failures (dramatic), 77 per cent.; percentage of failure (musical), 53 per cent.; average length of runs (all), 85 days; average length of runs (dramatic), 80 days; average length of runs (musical), 106 days, and number of productions that closed within five weeks, 49.

A review of the legitimate stage of Broadway over a 19-year span, statistically, starting with the 1921-'22 season, follows:

Chicago Circuits Add "Book Night" Promotion

Consolidated Book Publishers' "Book Night" promotion for theatres has been extended by Balaban and Katz to most of its neighborhood houses in Chicago and has been adopted by the Chicago circuits of Reinheimer, Van Nomikos, A. D. Lasker, Joseph Stern and Harrison-Goodman, following other circuits elsewhere, including Schine in up-state New York and Ohio; Fox West Coast, in California, and Randforce, in New York, Brooklyn and Long Island.

Consolidated, with headquarters in Chicago, has set up cooperative merchandising campaigns embracing local newspaper advertisements, coupons, heralds, trailers, posters, window cards and recordings for street ballyhoo in sound trucks.

Standard American Encyclopedia, in 15 volumes, is the first set to be offered patrons, one volume a week, and will be followed by the University of Knowledge series, then a set of World's Great Literature.

Alliance Acquires Four

The Alliance Theatre circuit, Chicago, successor to the Gregory circuit, has acquired the Garver Theatre circuit in Terre Haute, Ind. The theatres are the Orpheum, Swan, Idaho and The Virginia.

De Forest Joins CBS Radio School Board

Dr. Lee De Forest, radio pioneer, has joined the board of consultants of Columbia Broadcasting System's "School of the Air." Dr. De Forest will be an advisor to the air school on matters of science, especially radio technology. He is credited with 300 inventions in the fields of wireless telegraphy, radio telephone, wire telephone, sound-on-film talking pictures, high-speed facsimile, picture transmission and television. "Noiseless recording" positive prints in talking pictures and "glow light" recording of sound on film are among the innovations attributed to him.

UNIVERSAL NET PROFIT $1,200,000
RKO 6 MONTH LOSS CUT TO $68,070

U's Earnings for Three Quarters, $989,995; Atlas Applies to Amend Agreement on Dividend Payments

Gains in financial operations were noted this week for both Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and Universal Pictures.

Wall Street estimated a $1,200,000 net for Universal for the year ending on November 2nd.

RKO's trustees cited reductions in losses to $68,070 for the first six months of 1939, compared with the $480,176 loss sustained in the same half year in 1938.

Both companies also reported several outstanding productions completed.

RKO Theatres Net, $482,650

The reduction in the RKO net loss was revealed in the semi-annual report of the Irving Trust Company, RKO trustee, to the United States district court in New York City.

The reduction was obtained, according to the report, after all taxes and provision for $382,594 interest, but before providing for the current dividend of $148,900 on 45,543 shares of Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred stock.

RKO's theatre subsidiaries gained a net profit of $482,650 for the first six months of this year, compared with $416,478 for the same period last year.

The Irving Trust Company report observed that theatre attendance and admission prices were lower this year than last, but that fixed charges and operating expenses were also less, making possible the greater net profit.

RKO's picture subsidiaries for the period had a net loss of $756,668, after accrual of interest on indebtedness to RKO in the amount of $538,691. Last year, for the same period, the net loss was $1,135,522, after a similar accrual of $526,262 interest.

The picture company's receipts declined considerably this year, the report said, but it added that reduction in operating costs and other expenses more than offset this.

Pathe News Net, $49,881

Pathe News had a net profit of $49,881, compared with a net profit of $117,574 for the same period last year.

RKO's total income for this year's first six months was set at $26,322,046, divided as follows: $13,393,263, film rentals and sales; $11,501,158, theatre admissions; $1,427,624, rents and other income.

The company's expenses for the six month period of this year were $24,881,208. $11,862,193 of this was for film sales and service.

The indebtedness of RKO and subsidiaries during this period was reduced by $1,045,751, the report said. Interest on indebtedness was paid to the sum of $590,270.

Since the receivership was instituted in 1933 the fixed indebtedness of the company has been reduced by $10,874,223, the report claimed.

A. Christensen, vice-president of the Irving Trust Company, declared that, while RKO receipts were poor in July and August, those in September and early October have increased considerably.

Invited to Hollywood by RKO's president, George J. Schaefer, to view "the most pretentious group of films ever produced by the company during a single time period," Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of distribution of RKO Radio, and S. Barret McCormick, publicity and advertising director, arrived Monday.

Seven of the pictures, approximating an investment of $7,000,000, will occupy the attention of the eastern executives during their visit.

The seven features are "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," from Victor Hugo's novel, with Charles Laughton starring; "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," the Max Gordon-Harry Goetz production starring Raymond Massey in a screen version of Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize play; "Pinocchio," Walt Disney's second full-length animated feature; "Allegheny Uprising," Claire Trevor and John Wayne; "That's Right, You're Wrong," with Kay Kyser, band leader, and Adolphe Menjou; "Vigil in the Night," co-starring Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley under the producer-director guidance of George Stevens, and "Swiss Family Robinson," first of a series by The Play's the Thing Productions, headed by the author-producer team of Gene Towne and Graham Baker.

Adding another independent producer to Radio's list, Mr. Schaefer closed with Lee Garmes for the production of "And So Goodby," story by Mildred Cram and Adele Comandini.

TAX COLLECTIONS INCREASE $338,000

Reflecting a general upturn in the amusement industries, September collections from the federal tax on admissions jumped $338,000 over the August level, to $1,852,256, it was reported this week by the Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington.

The September total, comparing with $1,513,468 of August and $1,668,827 of September, 1938, was the greatest recorded since December of last year.

Receipts for the first quarter of the current fiscal year thus showed $187,271 above the corresponding period a year ago, $4,899,997 against $4,712,703, but for the first nine months of the current calendar year were slightly under 1938, with $14,056,201 against $14,059,465.

Nearly 60 per cent of the national increase was reported from the Third New York District, where collections jumped $209,000, from $336,191 in August to $545,092 in September.

The improvement was entirely in admissions, which increased from $287,463 to $503,762. Declines were shown in collections from free or reduced rate admissions from $3,950 to $3,411, in tickets sold by brokers from $4,346 to $3,422, and admissions to roof gardens and cabarets from $40,431 to $34,380.

See Large Universal Gain

Universal's profitable showing for the final quarter of this year indicated, to Wall Street observers, a possible net profit of $1,200,000 for the fiscal year ending November 2nd.

The earnings for the first three quarters of this year were set at $989,995. In the final quarter, August and September's operations showed a profit, and it was expected that October operations also would net a profit.

The predicted net profit was after allowances for year-end adjustments.

The company is releasing seven new pictures in the next three weeks, as follows: "Little Accident" and "The Tower of London," Oct. 27th; "The Road Back," "Call a Messenger" and "Legion of Lost Fliers," Nov. 3rd; "First Love" and "One Hour to Live," Nov. 10th.

Atlas Amending Agreement

The Atlas Corporation, which owns one-half of RKO and has $40,000,000 of other stock and bond holdings in other lines, has applied to the New York Stock Exchange for permission to amend its agreement relating to dividend payments. At the present time, only $750,000 of the company's over $20,000,000 capital surplus can be used for dividends.

The corporation's application states that it "should not be denied the right to use this surplus for the payment of dividends on its common stock, so long as there remains sufficient coverage to protect the holders of the 6 per cent preferred stock."

Columbia Cuts Dividend

Columbia Pictures Corporation's board of directors, on Oct. 19th, declared a dividend of 34⅜ cents per share "on account of the regular quarterly dividend of 68¾ cents per share due at this time on the $2.75 convertible preferred stock."

The dividend was declared payable on November 15th to stockholders of record at the close of business on November 1st. Said the dividend announcement:

"The decision to pay only one-half of the regular perferred dividend at this time is due largely to the disturbed European conditions which, if they continue, may adversely affect motion picture earnings."

Studio Executives Honor Darryl Zanuck at Dinner

Actors, writers, directors, producers and studio executives, to the number of 200, gathered Wednesday evening at the Masquers Club in Hollywood to honor at dinner Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox vice-president in charge of production, for valued service in behalf of the professions represented, for "good fellowship" and for donating to the Motion Picture Relief Fund the sum of $7,440, gross receipts of the Hollywood premiere of "Hollywood Cavalcade" at $10 the admission.

William Collier, Sr., was named master of ceremonies by the committee under the chairmanship of Edward Earle, veteran actor. Scheduled to speak were Judge Edward Brand, Louis B. Mayer, Samuel Goldwyn, Mervyn LeRoy, James Roosevelt and Hy Gardner, former Broadway columnist.

The honor guest list: Burton Fitts, district attorney; William Goetz, Charles Laughton, Harry Joe Brown, Frank Capra, John Ford, Mark Hellinger, Edgar Bergen, Jack Benny, Morton Downey, Russell Swan, Dalies Frantz, Gene Fowler, Lucien Hubbard, Al Jolson, Orson Welles, Ed Sullivan, Mario Chandlee, Edward G. Robinson, and producers and directors from the Zanuck studio.

PROPAGANDA FILM INJECTED INTO BRITISH INDUSTRY BY NEW MINISTRY

Government's Information Department in Important Role; Producers and Unions Renew Quota Retention Demand

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Whatever may become the ultimate fate of British film production as currently established and understood, there seems little doubt that in the not far distant future its Government relationships will extend beyond the confines of the Board of Trade, the Treasury and the Home Office to yet another State Department, the newly created Ministry of Information.

More Propaganda Films Ahead

On the cards, though scarcely yet in a concrete state, is the certainty that production of films mainly if not always blatantly propaganda will be sponsored by the Ministry. Plans already are being advanced for the making of films for various Government departments through the new Ministry.

The aim of these films naturally will be the propaganda of the British viewpoint and the chronicle of British activities in neutral countries, though also at home. A Film Section is, as already recorded in these pages, in active being under the directorship of Sir Joseph Ball. Though production has not actually been launched, the Film Section already in five weeks has made some mark on the industry here.

Relations Improved

The recent dispatch of newsreel cameramen to France, the greater dissemination of British newsreels abroad, the facilitating of transport and communications for British producers making appropriate films, the easing of the censorship machinery so that the trade becomes virtually its own censor, and the general brisk-ening of the relations of Whitehall and Wardour Street, all considered essentials in a country at war, are already to the credit of Lord Macmillan's Ministry, if more specifically that of Sir Joseph Ball's department.

The Ministry of Information was planned before the September, 1938, crisis, with the objective not only of directing the flow of news and propaganda from this country during war but of oiling the machinery of contact between the various Government departments and the press, radio and films. A film department was a natural corollary, and fell to the leadership of Sir Joseph Ball. Its work has been directed mainly towards improving and easing the relationship of the various Government departments with the industry, though it is more directly defined by officials within the Ministry as having concentrated upon breaking down the mental and bureaucratic barriers of Whitehall. Every Ministry is in contact with it, and for statements, reports and communiques each Whitehall department automatically uses it as the mouthpiece.

Wider Use Sought

The ambitions of the Ministry's Film Section include the greater use of the screen at home and abroad by the various Whitehall departments for purposes of propaganda. It is intended that the Ministry officially will commission films, documentaries, dramatic or otherwise, for the War Office, the Air Ministry, the Home Office, and so on. Such subjects as the social and domestic work of Government sections, air raid precautions, evacuations, medical services and transportation of food are but a few of those that might be, and probably will be, covered. Such films would be made by outside units, being commissioned by the Ministry on behalf of the various Government bodies.

Obviously the Ministry would not organize distributing machinery, using the normal trade channels for that purpose.

News Films Speeded

Meanwhile considerable work has been done in regard to the British news film. Thanks to the film department's pressure, the speed of distribution of British news films and the quality of the news has been intensified. Machinery has been put in motion to expedite the importation of negatives and the exportation of finished negatives and positives to neutral territories. Cameramen representing all the British newsreel units, in some cases accompanied by sound trucks, have now gone to France with official blessing.

Though not directly chartered by the Ministry of Information, a number of films have been commissioned by the British Council, a semi-official body which operates with finances voted by the Foreign Office. Obviously such films must have direct Ministry approval and will be used as propaganda at home and aboard.

Minor functions of assistance to the film trade which the Ministry is called upon to perform include recommendations to the Ministry of Mines to grant petrol concessions to producers performing what they conceive to be National Service.

Ostensibly Voluntary

Under the Ministry of Information, though operating apart from its Film Section, comes the machinery of censorship. The "security censorship" is ostensibly a voluntary censorship imposed on itself by the trade through its own body, the British Board of Film Censors. The "voluntary" censorship is now imposed on newsreels. According to Lord Winterton, Paymaster General, the staff of the BBFC has been reinforced by the Ministry of Information and the Board acts under its instructions. Objection has been raised by the newsreel organizations and by the labor unions to the censorship of newsreels by members of the BBFC. The Association of Cine Technicians, for instance, pleaded that the trade body was entirely unsuitable for this work. The presence of five members of the Ministry staff at the BBFC, headquarters would seem by now to be considered adequate safeguard.

British producers and labor union representatives met again with members of Parliament and renewed their demands that the British distributor and exhibitor quotas be retained by the Government.

New pleas were made for the abolition of restrictions on blind and advance booking, and for the institution of 12-month registration periods, on the ground such a move would stimulate film financing.

The winding up of Imperator Films Productions, Ltd., and Herbert Wilcox Productions, Ltd., both under Herbert Wilcox, was formally announced this week.

A letter to creditors said that as a result of the outbreak of war and the uncertainty of production it had become necessary to discontinue activities.

Mr. Wilcox is now in Hollywood where he is to direct Anna Neagle in "Irene."

Luminous paint used to pick out publicity displays, to illuminate vestibules, decorate ushers and provide direction lines to theatres, may help British picture houses solve one of the blackout problems.

At the Regal, Marble Arch and the Scala, Croydon, experiments have been so successful that other houses, notably in the West End, are likely to follow suit.

A loan up to 60 per cent of the total negative cost of British production from a sum set aside from the amusement taxes has been suggested to Sir Joseph Ball by Stephen L. Courtauld, Reginald P. Baker and Michael Balcon. The loan would constitute a first lien, with a low rate of interest and would be repayable from the picture's gross. Those favoring the plan think it might draw British players home from Hollywood.

WANT "FROZEN" CASH SPENT IN ENGLAND

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association will demand that all money retained in England as a result of the expected restrictions on remittances to the United States by American film distributors be spent within the film industry in Britain.

It is understood that the exhibitor organization is planning to ask safeguards against foreign theatre investments (presumably American) considered likely to restrict British exhibitor activities.

Goodwill Mission to U. S. Contemplated by French

France is contemplating sending a goodwill mission to the United States, consisting of Charles Boyer, Georges Carpentier and Jean Borotra, noted tennis player.

In the meantime, the film business there is in turmoil, caused by the war. American film revenue has been cut to almost nothing. The newsreels can't get any pictures except those which are handed out by the Government Bureau of Propaganda, and only after the censors have given their approval. Newsreel companies with their own organizations, therefore, are seriously affected.

Rushing of American cameramen to France to replace manpower which has gone off to war has proved futile because the French Government is not issuing permits to such men. Two of these, Arthur Menken of Paramount and Neil Sullivan of RKO-Pathe, are still waiting for their working permits to photograph the front. Mr. Menken recently moved to Brussels.

There has been a report just published in Paris that Bernard Nathan, former head of Pathe-Natan, now serving a sentence for embezzlement, is being released in order to join the fighting forces. Mr. Nathan served in the World War. His brother, Emil, is now at the front. Many employees of American companies also are in the service. Latest to enlist is Souhami, former head of Paramount in Paris.

U. S. Film Critics Select Governors

A temporary board of governors was named last weekend by the U. S. Film Critics to serve until the first convention. At a meeting in Detroit the committee selected Hollywood as the location for the convention which is scheduled for late in February or early March.

Jimmy Starr, motion picture editor of the Los Angeles Herald-Express, was chosen chairman of the committee which he will appoint to handle the convention details. The board of governors and their districts are: 1—New York and New Jersey, not appointed yet; 2—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, Prunella Hall, Boston Post; 3—Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia and District of Columbia, Harold W. Cohen, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette; 4—North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, Eddie Cohen, Miami News; 5—Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky, Boyd Martin, Louisville Courier Journal; 6—Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas, Harry Martin, Memphis Commercial Appeal; 7—Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Buck Herzog, Milwaukee Sentinel; 8—Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, Keith Wilson, Omaha World-Herald; 9—Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Merle Potter, Minneapolis Times-Tribune; 10—Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado and New Mexico, John Rosenfield, Dallas Morning News; 11—Washington, Oregon, Wyoming, Montana and Idaho, Herbert Larson, Portland Oregonian; 12—California, Nevada, Utah and Arizona, Jimmy Starr, Los Angeles Herald-Express; and 13—Canada and Nova Scotia, Rolly Young, Toronto Globe and Mail.

One of the projects will be an annual poll to determine the best performances of an actor and actress of the year.

Merle Potter, Minneapolis Times-Tribune, who has directed a similar poll for the last three years, will be in charge.

"Censor" Group Picks Leader

Following its emergence as another "pressure group" the American Humane Association last week appointed Richard C. Craven of Albany, New York, to head its drive to censor the industry's treatment of animals. Mr. Craven officially is named Western Regional Director of the Association. He will open offices in Hollywood.

Eric Hansen, general manager of the Association, announced the appointment to the office which was created at the national convention of Humane Associations, held in Albany the week of September 14th. Mr. Hansen at the time submitted a report critical of the motion picture industry's treatment of animals, after a study following protests made by humane societies in connection with "Jesse James."

"I think," Mr. Craven said, "that they (the studios) will be only too pleased to negotiate with one man, representing the whole humane movement, rather than a large number, representing separate organizations."

Altec Service Corporation has signed with the Lincoln Theatres, Inc., and the King Coal Theatres, Inc., of Marion, Va., for a renewal of contracts on six theatres and service for two additional houses.

Bluebook School

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

[Based on the Second Revision of the Sixth Edition, Bluebook of Projection]

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 1

Bluebook School Question No. 1 was: What is feed-back? Reverse feed-back? Interelectrode capacitance? Oscillation?

The following made answers of outstanding excellence: J. R. Prater, W. E. Limmroth; J. A. Zachritz, L. E. Thomas and R. S. Johnson. I believe, however, that Mr. Prater has a bit the best of it. He says.

"Feedback is the condition existing in amplifier tubes when changes in plate voltage, which were caused by corresponding changes in grid voltage, are 'fed back' to the grid again, either through the capacitance existing between plate and grid inside the tube, or through the external circuits.

"Reverse feedback is the intentional delivering to the grid of an input tube, a portion of the amplified signal from an output tube of the same amplifier, in such a way that the phase of the 'feedback' signal is opposite to that of the normal input signal. In this way, instead of the feedback causing oscillation, it opposes the normal input signal and thus reduces sound volume.

"Since the purpose of an amplifier is to increase sound volume, it would seem that the use of reverse feedback would result only an a waste of power. However, in addition to amplifying the input signals, all amplifiers generate a considerable amount of spurious harmonics, consisting of both even and odd multiples of the input frequencies. These harmonics cause distortion and harshness in the sound output, and it is desirable to remove as much of them as possible.

Even harmonics can be automatically cancelled by using push-pull amplification, but reverse feedback is the only means of cancelling both even and odd harmonics. Reverse feedback accomplishes a very useful purpose whenever it reduces the strength of the harmonics more than it reduces the strength of the true signal.

"Inter-electrode capacitance is the capacitance which exists inside a vacuum tube between any two elements (or 'electrodes') which are connected to opposite sides of the same electrical circuit.

"Oscillation is the condition existing when an amplifier tube converts its d.c. plate power into a.c. of one single-frequency (which may be within or above the audible range) regardless of what the frequency of the applied input signal may be. Oscillation is caused by feedback from plate to grid, which allows an already amplified signal to be applied again to the grid, resulting in still further amplification.

Four questions have now been submitted. Here is another:

Question No. 5

For what reasons is it essential that projectionists have information concerning details of all equipments employed in professional projection, and how may such information be obtained?

What detailed information is necessary before a projectionist will be able to operate successfully a theatre sound system?

Pittsburgh Opens 'Allegheny' Film

"Allegheny Uprising," RKO's film of pre-Revolutionary days in Pennsylvania and starring Claire Trevor and John Wayne, will have its world premiere at Pittsburgh on November 3rd.

Cornelius D. Scully, mayor of Pittsburgh, the Allegheny Centennial Committee of One Hundred, and a number of civic organizations had requested the premiere.

The showing at the Loew's Penn theatre will mark the opening of the Allegheny Centennial Celebration. The onetime city of Allegheny is now part of Pittsburgh.

Claire Trevor will make a personal appearance on opening night and an NBC-Blue Network broadcast from 8 to 8:30 P.M. through KDKA will be made from the stage. Charles Kurtzmann, manager of the Penn theatre, is handling the arrangements in collaboration with Joe Feldman, RKO theatre publicity man, and Sherman Gregory, manager of radio station KDKA.

The theatre of 3,600 seats has been sold out at $2.50 a ticket to the members of the Old Allegheny Centennial committee. The radio station is joining the premiere with the dedication of its new transmitter. Thirty-five mayors are expected for the premiere.

"Mohawk" Openings Set

"Drums along the Mohawk," Twentieth Century-Fox's 14-reel color film, will open in five Mohawk Valley cities on November 2nd, eight days ahead of general release. The pre-release openings will be at the Palace, Albany; Proctor's, Schenectady; Rialto, Amsterdam; Glove, Gloversville, and the Olympic, Utica. Players will be brought on from Hollywood. There will be a dinner attended by state officials in Albany the night before the opening.

"Gone with the Wind" Opening

Selznick-International's "Gone with the Wind" will have its world's premiere on December 15th at Loew's Grand in Atlanta. The picture will open in New York at the Capitol on December 21st. MGM plans a special sales conference in November to set policies on the picture.

Stanley Renews Vaudeville

The Warner Stanley, Pittsburgh, renews its vaudeville-pictures policy this Friday, with Eddie Cantor and his radio show. Other tentative acts include Hal Kemp and band, Horace Heidt and band, and a personal appearance of Ann Sheridan.

Oklahoma City Leads Drive

The Oklahoma City exchange of Twentieth Century-Fox was in first place last week in the Sidney R. Kent Seventh annual sales drive. George Friedel is head booker at that exchange.

Joseph Villella, program manager of station KQV, Pittsburgh, is organizing a vaudeville unit for performers who have appeared over that station and for acts not suitable for broadcasting.

Clark Rodenbach, motion picture critic on the Chicago Daily News for many years, has resigned. Clarence Bulliet now handles film reviews.

The Motion Picture Associates of New York have set November 25th for their annual dinner and dance.

Variety Clubs Hold Elections

The Variety Clubs of America, headed by John H. Harris as national chief barker, have begun their annual local Tent elections. New or reelected officers have been named for another year in some 10 of the Tents. A new Tent, number 22, has been formed in Oklahoma City and has been granted a state charter of incorporation.

Sidney Lust was elevated to chief barker of the Washington, D. C., Variety Club at the annual election held in the Willard Hotel there. Other officers elected are Hardie Meakin, first assistant chief barker; Edward Fontaine, second assistant; Sam Galanty, treasurer, and Nate Golden, secretary. Ray Bell remains as executive secretary.

Schieber a Chief Barker

C. Harry Schieber has been elected chief barker of the Columbus Variety Club. Virgil Jackson and Lou Holleb were named first and second chief barkers, respectively, and J. F. Luft, treasurer. P. J. Wood was reelected secretary.

The Kansas City Variety Club has elected Jay Means as chief barker to succeed George Baker. First assistant is Charles E. Gregory, second assistant is Jerry Zigmond, secretary is Arthur Cole and treasurer is James States. Cole and Sam Abend were elected delegates to the national convention of Variety Clubs in Dallas next April. Frank Hensler was elected national canvassman. The club has set its annual ball for November 10th at Pla-Mor.

Pittsburgh Banquet Sunday

The Pittsburgh Variety Club has elected C. J. Latta chief barker. Other officers elected are C. C. Kellenberg, first assistant; Burtis Bishop, second assistant; Al Weiblinger, secretary, and M. M. Shapiro, treasurer. Harry M. Kalmine and Harry Feinstein have been named national convention delegates. Installation of officers will be held Sunday at the William Penn Hotel at the 11th annual banquet.

The Reverend Edward Flanagan of Boys Town, Nebraska, and Mr. Latta will be guests at the Pittsburgh banquet. Father Flanagan, recipient this year of the national Variety Clubs' first Humanitarian Award, will address the banquet as will James Roosevelt, Senator James J. Davis, former Governor Harold Hoffman of New Jersey and others.

The Cleveland Variety Club elected Nat L. Lefton chief barker, succeeding Nat Wolf. The new crew or directors are: Duke Clark, first vice-president; Lester Zucker, second vice-president; Frank M. Boyd, secretary; I. J. Schmertz, treasurer; Bert M. Stearn, Dave Miller, Jerome M. Friedlander, Eddie Miller, A. M. Goodman and Manny Landers, and the past chief barkers, Mr. Wolf, M. B. Horwitz, Nat Holt and Frank Drew.

The Cincinnati Variety Club reelected Arthur Frudenfeld chief barker. James J. Grady and Andy Niedenthal were named first and second chief barkers, respectively. Ralph Kinsler was reelected dough guy and Saul M. Greenberg succeeds Joe Kolling as property master.

The Omaha Variety Club elected Morris Cohn chief barker for 1940, succeeding H. J. Shumow. Other officers are: E. R. Cummings, first assistant; Sam Epstein, second assistant; Meyer Stern, treasurer; Edward Shafton, secretary, and the board of directors includes the officers and D. V. McLucas, Eugene Blazer, Ted Mendenhall, Walt Green, John Gillin and Mr. Shumow.

The Philadelphia Variety Club has elected Jay Emmanuel chief barker. Other officers are David Weshner, first assistant; David Supowitz, second assistant; John Monroe, secretary; Ben Amsterdam, treasurer, and Harry Ball, fixer.

The Detroit Variety Club has elected a new board of directors consisting of Jack Saxe, treasurer; David Newman, William Carlson, Lew Wisper, Harold C. Robinson, John Howard, William Flemion, Barney Kilbride, Edgar E. Kirchner, Charles C. Perry, and William Hurlbut. Mr. Carlson and Mr. Perry were elected delegates to the national convention. Mr. Perry was also elected national canvassman.

The Variety Club of Oklahoma City, Tent No. 22, has been granted a charter of incorporation by the secretary of the State of Oklahoma. Incorporators are L. C. Griffith, Horace Falls and Sol Davis. In a current membership drive 37 new members were accepted bringing the total membership to 75. The formal opening of the club headquarters was held last week in the Black Hotel.

The Buffalo Variety Club has reelected Robert T. Murphy chief barker. Other officers are Sidney Lehman, first assistant; Kenneth G. Robinson, second assistant, and W. E. J. Martin, secretary and treasurer for the fifth consecutive year.

Committee Being Formed

Thirty-three newspaper writers, authors and news commentators are understood to have accepted invitations to be members of the National Humanitarian Award Committee of the Variety Clubs of America. The second annual award will be made at the Sixth Annual Convention of the Variety Clubs of America at the annual meeting to be held early next year in Dallas to the person who is selected as contributing the most outstanding service to humanity. Rev. E. J. Flanagan of Boys Town, 1938 winner, will serve on the committee to make the award this year.

The Variety Post of the Pittsburgh American Legion reelected Harry M. Kalmine, commander; C. C. Kellenberg, adjutant; James G. Balmer, finance officer; Father James Garrahan, service officer and chaplain; Dr. L. G. Beinhauer, first vice-commander and Joe Hiller, second vice-commander. The chairman of the executive committee is I. Elmer Ecker, Dr. A. I. Wise and Brian McDonald were added to the committee.

The Milwaukee Variety Club Auxiliary has scheduled a midnight Variety Follies at Fox's Palace theatre on Dec. 2nd.

The Cinema Club of Cincinnati, a recently formed organization of film and other salesmen serving the industry, is organizing a welfare fund for use of its members. Rudy Knopfle is president.

The Cinema Club of Kansas City, young film men's organization sponsored by the Variety Club, will have its first social function of the season, a Hallowe'en party Tuesday at Variety clubrooms.

Actors Guild Radio Show to New York

Motion picture stars now appearing on Broadway will be given an opportunity to perform on the Screen Actors Guild—Gulf radio program when it moves to New York in November or December. Young and Rubicam, Inc., which handles the Gulf account, is making arrangements in New York.

MGM Wins Safety Award

"Drunk Driving," MGM short subject of the "Crime Does Not Pay" series, has won for the company the Motion Picture Safety Committee's 1939 award. Leslie Simonson, Chicago's traffic engineer, presented the trophy to Art Schmidt of the New York Loew theatre department at the National Safety Congress convention in Atlantic City, October 18th.

Conrac Appears With a Counter

A new corporation, Conrac, Inc., has been formed to manufacture an electrical device for the counting of patrons entering a motion picture theatre. L. W. Conrow and G. L. Carrington are the president and vice-president, respectively, and Harry M. Bessey is secretary-treasurer. These officials are members of the board, together with Fred G. Adams, Louis S. Allen, P. C. Kemp and Gilbert L. Kerr.

Conrac will manufacture the Conrac Attendance Register, a device by which a theatre entrant passes through two or more pencil beams of projected light, while the register counts persons entering the door, it does not count persons leaving through the same door; the register keeps a locked and sealed record, said Mr. Conrow.

The Gay Days of Victor Herbert

(Paramount)

Musical Biography

The music will be outstanding among the exploitation values in "The Gay Days of Victor Herbert."

The story framework follows a theatrical world theme, and at the same time is a family story. A promising singing star and a girl protege of Herbert marry. Both climb the ladder of fame, but when professional jealousy arises the wife retires from the stage. During the years, as the mother ekes out a slim existence for herself and daughter, the husband fails to live up to his early promise. Then Herbert persuades his old star to return to the stage. On the night of her return performance, she is unable to go on and her daughter is substituted. The girl is panic stricken, but the down-and-out husband, passing the theatre, anxious for one last look at his wife, enters to see the child's terror. Donning a costume, he sings with her and a new star is born. In consequence the family is reunited.

The picture, produced and directed by Andrew Stone from a play by Russel Crouse and Robert Lively which Stone and Lively adapted, will feature Walter Connolly in the title role. The members of the family are Allan Jones, Mary Martin and Susanna Foster, a 14-year-old miss. Jerome Cowan, Judith Barrett and John Garrick head the supporting cast.

Release date: To be determined.

Years without Days

(Warner Bros.)

Crime Drama

"Years without Days" is based on Warden Lewis E. Lawes' book, "20,000 Years in Sing Sing." The story was produced as a picture by First National in late 1932. Then Spencer Tracy and Bette Davis were starred. While this version, the screenplay for which was prepared by Robert Lord and Courtney Terrett, will stick to the fundamental drama of the book, some minor changes have been made in theme development and action to fit the talents of John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Jerome Cowan, Pat O'Brien and Burgess Meredith, the principals.

It is the story of a New York thug who was sent to Sing Sing prison and soon reacts favorably to humane treatment. Refusing to participate in a break, he is given a day's reprieve to visit his sweetheart, injured in an auto crash. He learns a pseudo friend has been making advances to her—there is a fight and the chiseler is killed. The convict is torn between the desire to escape and keep his promise to the warden to return. He eventually gives himself up and during the trial both the girl and the convict plead guilty to the murder charge, but the cards are stacked against the jailbird and he goes to the chair for a crime the girl committed.

"Years without Days" is being directed by Anatole Litvak, who among other films has made "The Sisters" and "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" for Warner Brothers.

Release date: To be determined.

The Farmer's Daughter

(Paramount)

Comedy

Comedy which stems from the trials and tribulations of a play producer endeavoring to stage a summer show in a barn will be the entertainment and commercial essences of "The Farmer's Daughter." Between what happens as he tries to assuage the ruffled feelings of his temperamental leading lady while the star falls in love with a farmer's daughter as the cows and other barnyard denizens cannot be prevented from interfering, the producer is driven to the verge of nervous prostration. A summer storm lifts the roof off the barn, but as the panic-stricken animals run wild, the farmer's daughter, who has been rehearsing with the hero, puts the show on.

Associate producer William Thomas seems to have rounded up a troupe of players who will put the show across in the amusing way it has been visioned. Heading the cast as the farmer's daughter is Martha Raye, with Charles Ruggles appearing as the producer. Leading man and real and make-believe romantic hero is Richard Denning, one of Paramount's Golden Circle set. William Frawley will be the press agent whose head is stuffed with exploitation ideas and Gertrude Michael is the temperamental professional star. The competent supporting cast for the film will include William Duncan, Ann Shoemaker, Benny Baker, Wanda McKay and Wilfred Roberts.

Release date: To be determined.

First Love

(Universal)

Romance

In her brief but spectacular career, Deanna Durbin has been featured in five pictures, from comparative childhood to adolescence. "First Love" will mark the transition from adolescence to young womanhood. Still retaining her personal simplicity, she will be seen in an up-to-date variation of the Cinderella story. She's an orphan for whom her relatives have no time, envied by her cousin, befriended only by the servants. But she gets her first kiss and her first fellow.

Once again Miss Durbin will be guided by Joe Pasternak, who has produced all her pictures, and Henry Koster, who directed "Three Smart Girls," "100 Men and a Girl" and "Three Smart Girls Grow Up." Credit for the screen play has been given Bruce Manning, who had a hand in the preparation of four previous Durbin pictures.

The supporting cast will feature Helen Parrish, with Miss Durbin in "Mad about Music" and "Three Smart Girls Grow Up"; two newcomers, Robert Stack and Lewis Howard, also Eugene Pallette and Leatrice Joy, a star of the silents who is returning to pictures. Additionally the cast will include June Story, Charles Coleman and Frank Jenks.

Miss Durbin has four singing numbers, "Home, Sweet Home," "Amapola," a medley of Strauss waltzes, and "One Fine Day," aria from "Madame Butterfly."

Release date: October 20, 1939.

Invisible Stripes

(Warner Bros.)

Crime Drama

The subject is what happens to convicts when they have completed their prison terms and endeavor to become members of the society which refuses to accept them. One ex-convict wants to go right, the other never could be anything but wrong. Their adventures involve a third party, the brother of the one who had good intentions but found the lure of easy money a greater temptation than he could resist. Society can do nothing with these men, but the two know how to pay each other off.

In the picture, two of the foremost exponents of crime on the screen, George Raft and Humphrey Bogart, will be featured, and William Holden, the hero of "Golden Boy," will have much to do. They will be supported by Tully Marshall, Flora Robson, Lee Patrick, Paul Kelly, Marc Lawrence, outstanding in "Housekeeper's Daughter," Jane Bryan, Joseph Crehan and Henry O'Neill.

The director, Lloyd Bacon, has been in charge of many of Warners' most vivid melodramas.

The importance of the love interest has not been ignored. As a matter of fact, "Invisible Stripes" has two love stories, one of which ends happily and the other tragically.

Release date: To be determined.

Green Hell

(Universal)

Adventure Melodrama

While the entertainment idea is not new, it is one that in the past has provoked unique public response. It is a weird, tense and action-packed picturization of blood-curdling adventures of a little band on an archaeological expedition into the jungles of the upper Amazon River. And amid the horror stemming from the jungle fear, a love story is worked out.

The production is the initial picture for Harry Eddington, who in his two decades as an agent has handled the affairs of many of the screen's biggest stars. It is being directed by James Whale, whose record includes "Journey's End," "Hell's Angels," "Frankenstein," "Old Dark House" and "The Man in the Iron Mask."

"Green Hell" will provide exhibitors with a list of wellknown screen names. Topping the cast are Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., now in "Rulers of the Sea," and Joan Bennett, often starred in Wanger pictures and presently in "Housekeeper's Daughter." In support will be seen John Howard, a fixture in many Paramount films, Alan Hale, George Bancroft, George Sanders, two newcomers, Vincent Price and Gene Garrick, Francis McDonald, Ray Mala and Peter Bronte.

Release date: To be determined.

"Typhoon." The picture will be a color production and that there should be no mistake about what the title means, the big action spectacle in the film will be a howling typhoon that engulfs islands, uproots trees and does other great destruction.

Locale of the excitement will be the South Seas. From a literary standpoint, the sustaining story will have to do with how a simple child of nature helped effect the regeneration of a white man who had gone the way some white men of a sort do when they venture into exotic tropical countries. The plot is based on an original story by Steve Fisher for which Allen Rivkin did the screen play. Louis King, who has lately concentrated on the "Persons in Hiding" and "Bulldog Drummond" productions, is the director.

With Miss Lamour starred, the featured role has been assigned to Robert Preston, who counts appearances in "Union Pacific" and "Beau Geste" among his best screen accomplishments. The supporting cast includes Lynne Overman, J. Carroll Naish, Paul Harvey, Chief Thundercloud, Jack Carson and Al Kikune.

Release date: To be determined.

That's Right, You're Wrong

(RKO Radio)

Hollywood Satire

It might be sufficient to know, from a strict showmanship standpoint, that "That's Right, You're Wrong" will be something distinctly different, the picture of a picture that never was made. A great band leader and his musicians are signed to make a picture. He doesn't want to be an actor; his players do, and they go Hollywood in a big way. The screen play proves unsuitable, members of the band get into all sorts of trouble, studio politics has its innings, and so do fun, action, romance and music.

The picture will feature Kay Kayser, who, with his "College of Musical Knowledge" over the NBC Red Network, has won an immense following. With Kayser will be the four featured members of his band, Ginny Simms and Harry Babbitt, soloists, and Ish Kabibble and Sully Mason, comics. The screen personalities are Adolphe Menjou, Lucille Ball, May Robson, E. E. Horton, Hobart Cavanaugh, Dennis O'Keefe, Moroni Olsen and Roscoe Karns.

The original story, written by director David Butler and William Conselman, was adapted by Conselman and James V. Kern. Five or six new song numbers, as well as several of Kayser's favorites, will be featured. Butler is no new hand at directing music films, as attested by "East Side of Heaven," "You're a Sweetheart" and "Sunny Side Up."

Release date: November 24, 1939.

City in Darkness

(20th Century-Fox)

Charlie Chan

"City in Darkness" probably will have more topical exploitation value than any of the score or more preceding "Charlie Chan" pictures. The locale is Paris in the fall of 1938 when the Munich crisis menaced the peace of Europe. Paris is blacked out at the time of the mysterious murder that brings "Charlie Chan" into action. He helps break up a ring of spies and munitions bootleggers, saving a girl from the murderous vengeance of international plotters and fostering a romance.

Sidney Toler again will be seen in the leading role. The girl he helps is Lynn Bari, and the boy whose romance he promotes with her is newcomer Richard Clark. Six persons are suspected of complicity in the murder as well as the cabal which endangers France. In lining up the characters, associate producer John Stone chose half a dozen of the most prominent screen killers. It is estimated that the six suspects in the picture, Harold Huber, C. Henry Gordon, Douglas Dumbrille, Noel Madison, Dorothy Tree and Pedro de Cordoba, have "killed" about 300 persons in their collective screen careers. Other names are Leo G. Carroll, Lon Chaney, Jr., who is now in "Of Mice and Men," Louis Mercier, Adrienne d'Ambricourt and Frederik Vogeding.

The director, Herbert I. Leeds, has among his previous credits "The Return of the Cisco Kid."

Release date: Dec. 1, 1939.

Escape to Paradise

(RKO Radio - Sol Lesser)

Romantic Adventure

"Escape to Paradise" will be the eighth production in which Sol Lesser has starred Bob Breen. While the basic plot will be dramatic, its development will run the range of adventure, romance and comedy, and to these will be added music and dancing.

The setting is an imaginary South American country. The theme will have to do with how a mischievous native lad helped effect the regeneration of a playboy American. A love story, of course, is woven into the plot.

Naturally, as in all young Breen's pictures, music will be featured. In solo and chorus the youngster will be heard in six numbers. The dance numbers which will make for picturesque spectacle will reproduce gala fiesta sequences with 200 dancers.

The remainder of the cast is headed by Kent Taylor, now in "Sued for Libel," "Three Sons" and "Five Who Came Back"; Marla Shelton, who is perhaps best known for her parts in Wanger's "Stand In" and "Vogues of 1939"; Joyce Compton, again delineating a dizzy blonde, and Pedro de Cordoba.

Credit for the screen play has been given to Weldon Melick. Direction is the responsibility of Erle C. Kenton who, for the great part of his career, has handled more melodramatic material.

Release date: To be determined.

Hart Resumes Law Practice

Vincent G. Hart, former assistant to Joseph I. Breen, Production Code Administration, in the New York office and associated with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America for 10 years, has resumed the general practice of law and will be associated with Norman C. Nicholson and Lewis M. Lawton, 9 Rockefeller Plaza, New York.

Capital Talks About Publicity For "M-Day"

The United States Government has been planning the mobilization of the nation's resources, manpower and military, keeping pace with international developments of the past two years, in the event this country becomes involved, on some future day, described officially as "M-Day," and meaning just that. Not known, of course, are most of the details of the closely guarded secrets of the who and what and where.

Apparently cognizant of experiences in the last World War, when "war propaganda" bureaus were not developed to the high-powered stage to which they are employed today both by the "totalitarians" and the "democracies" abroad, various of the Government agencies in Washington have been for months moulding a kind of "Committee on Public Information" through which every conceivable kind of war-time propaganda, information and inspired campaigning would be sent through every conceivable medium of public expression: the press, films and radio, billboards, posters, public speakers, exhibits, patriotic, religious and welfare organizations, mail, telegraph, telephone and cable.

The Committee on Public Information of the last war, as headed by George Creel —motion pictures were in a sub-division, in charge of Charles S. Hart, is the model for what two Washingtonians now consider would be the blueprint for government public and press relations in the event of armed conflict. The Washingtonians are James R. Mock, of the Library of Congress staff, and Cedric Larson, of the National Archives, who describe both the old CPI and the new one which would follow in the event of war, in their new book: "Words That Won the War" (Princeton University Press: $3.75).

Blueprint author is the Joint Army and Navy Public Relations Committee, a planning unit formed late in 1937. The Public Relations Administration they propose would be similar to, though broader than the Creel Committee. It would: 1) Coordinate government publicity; 2) Combat disaffection at home and enemy propaganda at home and abroad; 3) Organize all existing propaganda channels for war; 4) Formulate and administer rules of censorship—in each of which the motion picture would, presumably, play no small part. MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on February 4, 1939 (pages 29-30, reported, quoting U. S. Army officer: "We have in the motion picture the most facile and realistic medium of transmitting ideas and training."

The Government's plans for mobilization-day provide for "the most effective censorship that could be imagined," said U. S. Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Demo., Mo.) on Tuesday during arguments in the Senate over neutrality legislation.

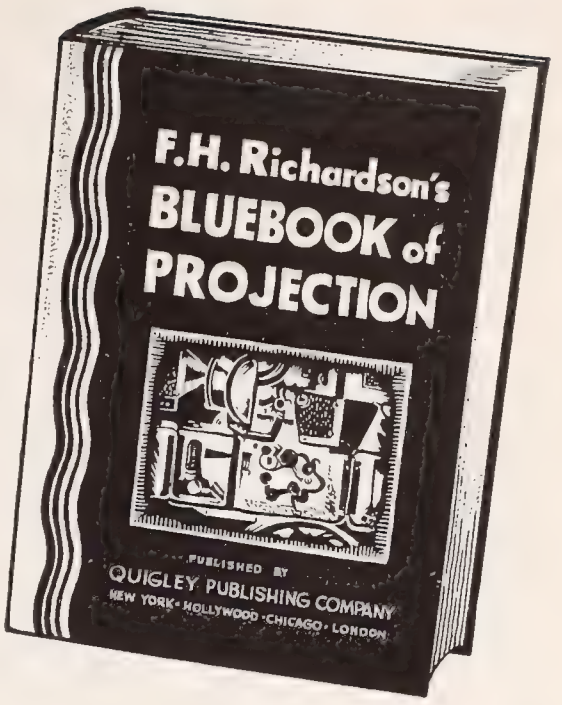
In the first World War the first real junction of the screen and war affairs came through the American Red Cross. The Red Cross had to grow tremendously and it had to get to the public fast. It started a Bureau of Pictures and sought to reach the public with "publicity" films in a hurry. The pictures were shown mostly at meetings. They were miscellaneous collections of foreign and domestic pictures pertaining to the war. In his "Million and One Nights," history of the motion picture, Terry Ramsaye said, "They were not theatrical products in any sense, which is another way of saying they were amateur pictures without entertainment and a punch." In any "national emergency," the United States intends to see to it that no such situation exists as in 1917-1918, when militaristically and otherwise this country found it necessary to arm in a hurry.

On April 14, 1917, for the first World War, George Creel was appointed chairman of the U. S. "Committee on Public Information." Continuing Mr. Ramsaye's account on the event, Mr. Creel's was the "difficult assignment to be at once and the same time something of a censor and very much of a press agent for the war."

Meanwhile the motion pictures made by the Signal Corps, which were the only American war films available, were going to the Red Cross. Their only important distribution was through the Red Cross bureau of pictures to the news-reels. "The films were haphazardly made, haphazardly distributed and presented in the same way."

Charles S. Hart, then an executive of the Hearst magazines organization, was drafted into the service of the Committee on Public Information and assigned by Mr. Creel to look into the matter of motion pictures. Mr. Hart reported shortly that Red Cross distribution was not giving America a proper pictorial message. It was not meant to be a criticism of the Red Cross, because that organization was not a propaganda organization. It was a mere incident of the jumbled makeshift rush of war moves.

In March of 1918, nearly a year after America's entry into the war, a meeting of Red Cross officials, headed by George Murnane, a New York banker, and the heads of the Creel organization was held at 10 Jackson Place in Washington, headquarters of the Committee on Public Information. As a result of that session the pictorial activities of the war were turned over to Mr. Creel. The Division of Pictures of the Committee on Public Information, resulted. Establishing offices in New York, Mr. Creel's Mr. Hart set about trying to connect the flow of war pictures available from the Signal Corps, and other sources, with the established channel of distribution to the theatres, the motion picture industry.



A curious problem existed. The government could hand a story to the news association and it got wide circulation. If the government handed out a free motion picture, many felt nobody would see it. The government, therefore, was forced into the motion picture business, as a business, through the Division of Pictures of the Committee on Public Information, charging rentals for the films intended to "sell America." Statistically the history of the Government in the war-time business takes about four lines, as reported in "A Million and One Nights," as follows:

Films	Theatre Bookings	Film Rentals
Pershing's Crusaders	4,189	$181,741
America's Answer	4,548	185,144
Under Four Flags.....	1,820	63,946
Official War Review.....	6,950	334,622

And there were some 18,500 theatres operating in those silent-film days of the industry, in which the "Official War Review," most widely circulated of the war publicity films, got little more than one third of the total available circulation. In any new "national emergency," it is not expected that any rentals will be charged theatres, what with the advanced stage of the business, and it is expected that the circulation will be far greater, what with the greater efficiency and centralization of the industry.

GN Receivership Move Is Fought

Grand National attorneys on Thursday were to file a petition in U. S. district court in New York for an order to show cause why an order appointing a temporary receiver for the company should not be vacated and set aside. The appointment order, which followed a petition by three creditors, was returnable Friday before Samuel Mandelbaum, federal judge.

The petition was filed by Hap Hadley, 1560 Broadway, named creditor for $730; Passantino Printing Company, Inc., 250 West 49th Street, for $192 and Keystone Photo Engraving Corporation, 244 West 49th Street, for $272.

The charge is made in the petition that Grand National "with intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors" concealed or conveyed to persons unknown to petitioning creditors the sum of $5,000. In addition, the company is charged with a preferential payment of $3,000 to E. W. Hammons, president of the company, or to his relatives while the company was insolvent and with intent to prefer the recipients over all other creditors.

The order, appointing Simon H. Rifkin temporary receiver for Grand National, had been signed by Judge Mandelbaum Wednesday on application of Mr. Hadley.

Saul E. Rogers, Grand National counsel, said on Wednesday that the show cause order to be argued on Friday also would petition dismissal of the bankruptcy action. The order, he said, will deny the allegations of the creditors and will contend that Grand National is a solvent corporation with more than $250,000 of assets.

Meanwhile Mr. Hammons returned to New York from Washington Wednesday after having negotiated an increase to $450,000 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan to Educational, the parent company. He said the confirmation of the loan is expected in a week, after which Educational will advance finances to Grand National to take care of current debts and for its reorganization.

Mistrial in Charlotte Suit

The $250,000 copyright infringement suit of Legette against Loew's, Inc., involving the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer short subject, "The Bravest of the Brave" and the plaintiff's book "Marshal Ney: a Dual Life," was declared a mistrial in Charlotte, N. C., this week when presiding Judge E. Y. Webb was informed a juror was ill and unable to continue. The jury was dismissed.

File Paramount Suit

Paramount Pictures, Inc., and Paramount Distributing Corporation were named defendants this week in a suit filed in New York supreme court by Benjamin Roman which seeks $250,000 damages charging breach of contract. Mr. Roman claims a contract gave him exclusive rights to distribute reissues of the Paramount films, "Morocco" and "The Spoilers," in New York and northern New Jersey.

Contract Suit Settled

The suit of Superior Talking Pictures and Stage and Screen Productions for $5,000 damages charging breach of contract against Principal Film Exchange has been settled and discontinued in New York supreme court.

Order Investigation of Majestic Television

John J. Bennett, New York State attorney general, on Tuesday ordered an investigation into Majestic Radio and Television Corporation stock after being notified that the Curb Exchange had suspended trading in the security. The suspension was ordered when the Curb Exchange received notification Tuesday morning from the board of directors of the company that it was temporarily unable to meet its debts.

Walter P. Chysler, Jr., was granted an option to buy 225,000 shares of the company capital stock September 22nd on or before October 23rd at $1.125 cents a share. It was said that the option had not been taken up.

Stockholders Seek Order To Question RCA Officers

An application for an order directing James G. Harbord, David Sarnoff, Owen D. Young, Gerard Swope, Cornelius N. Bliss, Paul D. Cravath, Bertram Cutler, Edward W. Harden, De Witt Millhauser, Edward J. Nally, Andrew Robertson, Harold Smith and officers of Radio Corporation of America, General Electric Company and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company to testify before trial was filed this week in New York supreme court by eight RCA stockholders.

The stockholders in their suit claim the transfer of a large block of RCA stock to General Electric and Westinghouse for an invalid consideration.

Dismiss Providence Suits

Two suits charging false imprisonment against E. M. Loew, Inc., operator of the Olympia theatre in Providence, were dismissed this week in superior court there. It was charged that theatre officials detained two sisters last January until they signed statements releasing the theatre of responsibility for injuries to one of them when she fell on a stairway.

Whiteman Files Appeal

An appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals has been filed by Paul Whiteman from a ruling of Vincent Leibell, federal judge, in a test suit which bars Mr. Whiteman from licensing the broadcasting of his records without the consent of the manufacturer, RCA Manufacturing Company, Inc.

Set Kane Trial

Trial of the $25,000 breach of contract suit of Samson Raphaelson against Robert T. Kane has been set for November 14th in New York supreme court. The plaintiff claims the violation of a contract employing him for 10 weeks as a writer at $2,500 weekly.

Sam Harrison, Play Manager, Dies in East

Sam Harrison, theatrical company manager, died in New York last Sunday. Mr. Harrison worked from 1907 to 1930 for Florenz Ziegfeld and Klaw & Erlanger at the New Amsterdam theatre. He was best known for his management of the "Follies." But he had been connected with many other hit shows including, "Rosalie," "Whoopee" and "Sally."

Mr. Harrison was technical advisor on the motion picture "The Great Ziegfeld" and assisted William Anthony Maguire with the script and remained in Hollywood when the shooting was in progress to give advice on problems related to Ziegfeld. Mr. Harrison was one of Ziegfeld's close friends, trustee for his daughter and counselor for his widow, Billie Burke.

Cass F. Staley

Cass F. Staley, 69, vaudeville performer known for his musical blacksmith act, died in Rochester on October 21st.

OBITUARIES

Zane Grey, Writer, Sportsman, Dies

Zane Grey, who re-created the West to an estimated 50,000,000 readers of his 54 books, died in Altadena, Cal., on October 23rd. Mr. Grey had sold 38 stories which were made into motion pictures.

Mr. Grey's most successful book, "Riders of the Purple Sage," had sold a million and a half copies by 1934. Between 1930 and the present time Twentieth Century-Fox bought 14 of his stories, Paramount 20. RKO-Radio and Columbia have each filmed Grey's writings.

Zane Grey stories that were filmed were all westerns. Harry Sherman's company now is shooting his "The Light of Western Stars." Among the motion pictures written by Mr. Grey are: "Lone Star Ranger" (Fox-1930); "Purple Sage" (Fox-1931); "The Thundering Herd" (Paramount-1934); "Thunder Mountain" (Fox-1935); "Desert Gold" (Paramount-1936) and "Thunder Trail" (1937).

Zane Grey was born in Zanesville, Ohio, on January 31, 1875. He studied dentistry at the University of Pennsylvania and in 1896 began to practice in New York; but turned to writing as a profession and wrote almost continually since 1904. Three books will be published posthumously.

Ned Holmes, Early Publicity Man, Dead

Ned Holmes, one of the originators of motion picture exploitation, died in San Francisco October 21st. For the last four years he was West Coast exploitation manager for Warner Brothers, with headquarters in Los Angeles. Although in his late sixties, Mr. Holmes was active until his death.

Paul Rainey's African Hunt pictures in 1912 was one of the first pictures handled by Mr. Holmes. He established First National's exploitation department and trained S. Charles Einfeld, Warner advertising and publicity director, and others. Mr. Holmes was employed by William Fox in the middle 1920's. He was publicity manager for Fox Film and later was scenario editor at the studio and was connected with the production of "Seventh Heaven."

Mr. Holmes began his career as advance man for Colonel William Cody and his "Buffalo Bill's Rough Riders" 40 years ago. Col. Cody introduced him to Charles A. Dana, publisher of the New York Sun, and Holmes joined the staff. During his long career Mr. Holmes handled various forms of entertainment, including opera, drama and sports. He was advance man for Sarah Bernhardt, handled Jack Dempsey's first tour and a number of shows, his last stage assignment being Leslie Howard's tour in "Hamlet."

The funeral was held Monday in Hollywood.

Eileen Douglas Dies

Miss Arlina D. McMahon, known on the stage and radio as Eileen Douglas, died in New York October 23rd at the at the age of 35. She appeared on Fred Allen's radio program and had directed many radio programs. She was born in New York, a daughter of John R. McMahon, newspaper man. Her mother was well-known as a writer under her maiden name. Marguerita Arlina Hamm.

FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS AND HOW THEY GREW: Edith Fellows—Don't underrate "Five Little Peppers." I tied up with the local Junior High class and really went to town. Tell your high school principal about this one and give him a percentage for selling tickets and they will love this show. It is right up their alley. Running time, 75 minutes. Played October 3.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

KONKA, THE WILD STALLION: Fred Stone, Rochelle Hudson—One hour of top entertainment that will really surprise your audiences. A good show in all respects, with a horse in the leading role. One of the best of its kind we have run. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TEXAS STAMPEDE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Satisfied an average Saturday night audience. Played September 23.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THERE'S THAT WOMAN AGAIN: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce—Very pleasing comedy to disappointing business. Played October 4-5.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

First National

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Grand picture, nice story, nice action, nice stars, nice business to extended runs. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

NO PLACE TO GO: Fred Stone—Small picture which pleased on Pal Night. Running time, 57 minutes. Played October 10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent—Good picture and good business. This is a tear jerker and the ladies came out crying. Will appeal to women only. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 8-9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent—This is the first time that I have ever played Bette Davis. She is without doubt one of the best actresses on the screen. "The Old Maid" is tops, but not for small towns. The farmers don't come in for this kind, so it didn't pay off to me, but it gives a small town theatre a lot of prestige to play one like this. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 1.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent—A wonderful show that is entirely too heavy and sad for our small town audiences. For you who can use heavy drama, this picture should be tops. For us who go strong for action and lighter pictures, it will do only average and perhaps not that good. It certainly it not worth percentage in our situation. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Grand National

SIX-GUN RHYTHM: Tex Fletcher, Joan Barclay—Exhibitors playing westerns can cash in on a very good box office attraction by booking the above picture together with its star, Tex Fletcher, in person. I played the picture twice, the second time in conjunction with the star in person, and unhesitatingly recommend this combination to all exhibitors using westerns. The picture is good, and with Tex Fletcher widely known as "The Lonely Cowboy" of radio station WOR, will positively compel you to dust off the SRO sign. You can reach Tex at Harrison, N. Y. Running time, 57 minutes. Played September 22-23.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connelly—We tied up with a large manufacturing concern who makes overalls and gloves from a neighboring city 18 miles away. We ran three shows the first night, two the second night; with five manufacturers shut down in your town, we feel that this picture was a natural for a small town.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HARDYS RIDE HIGH, THE: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney—A most enjoyable screen presentation that should do business in any situation. We played this picture on our fifth anniversary and feel we gave our customers the anniversary treat.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LADY OF THE TROPICS: Robert Taylor, Hedy Lamarr—Lamarr is beautiful, Taylor is good, picture is weak. The honors all go to Joseph Schildkraut for an excellent performance. Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 1-3.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

STRONGER THAN DESIRE: Virginia Bruce, Walter Pidgeon—You can't go wrong on this one. It is directed by Leslie Fenton, who played a bit part in "Boys Town" and stole the whole scene. Metro has something in Fenton and his work in "Stronger Than Desire" proves his ability as a director. If you have a big "special" coming up that don't look good, this one can substitute. Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 4-5.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan — Swell Tarzan picture that brought the farmers to town. Photography excellent.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

THESE GLAMOUR GIRLS: Lew Ayres, Lana Turner, Jane Bryan, Anita Louise—The worst of critics went for this one, and for good reasons. It is tops. The picture is full of comedy, music and the real truth. A story of the Blue Bloods and a taxi dancer, and they all fall for the taxi dancer. So will you, when you see Lana Turner. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 8-10.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

THESE GLAMOUR GIRLS: Lew Ayres, Lana Turner, Tom Brown—A swell little picture that is different, so different that it is truly refreshing. Miss Turner's first starring picture that builds her up for her next one, "Dancing Co-Ed." Do not be afraid of this and it may play the best days in the week for a short run. Running time, 79 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell—Good picture and good business. Don't be afraid of it, as it has lots of comedy and the men will like it, too. Running time, 134 minutes. Played October 11-12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

GRACIE ALLEN MURDER CASE: Gracie Allen, Warren William, Ellen Drew—As screwy as they come and the Allen fans won't be let down. No good at our box office. Running time, 70 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Binnie Barnes, "Rochester" (Eddie Anderson)—Best picture Benny ever made and it's really swell. That goes for Rochester, too.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Binnie Barnes, Edward Arnold, Rochester—This is the best one Benny has made. Really, though, the colored boy steals the show. Although the best, it drew the least. 'Nuff said. Running time, 82 minutes. Played September 20-21.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR LEGS: Betty Grable, Jackie Coogan—The title pulled them in, but, boys, were they let down. Just a fair picture. Running time, 65 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Bob Hope, Martha Raye—A good comedy that seemed to please the general run of patronage. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 11-12.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Bob Hope, Martha Raye—Very good comedy that was enjoyed by all. Running time, 80 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

RENEGADE TRAIL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—Played this to my smallest crowd. This series has been very good for me but this one certainly flopped. Story very weak. Can't see why when a company has something good they don't at least try to keep it. Played September 8-9.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural patronage.

SILVER ON THE SAGE: William Boyd, George Hayes—A good "Hoppy," as usual, but they don't put any more silver in our box office than the cheaper westerns. Running time, 64 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

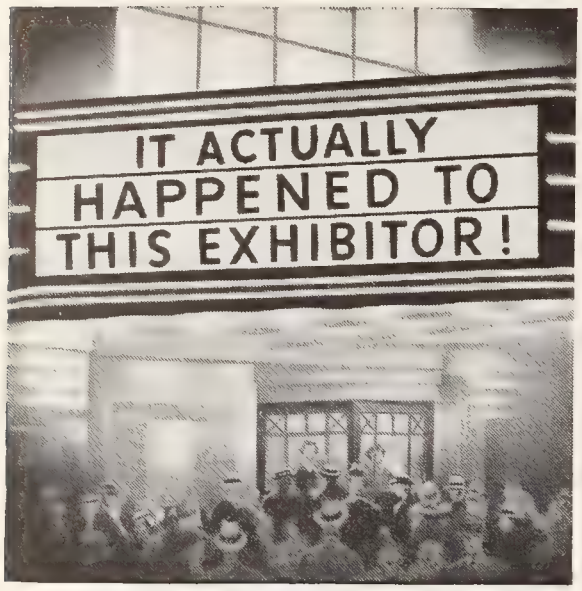
UNDERCOVER DOCTOR: Lloyd Nolan, Heather Angel—Pleased generally on Bank Night. Running time, 61 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

ARIZONA KID, THE: Roy Rogers, George Hayes—Lovers of outdoor operas received this one very favorably. A good average western. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

CALLING ALL MARINES: Donald Barry, Helen Mack, Warren Hymer—A good timely subject dealing with espionage agents in the United States. Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 8.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

KANSAS TERRORS, THE: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo)—Pleasing western with plenty of action. This new trio was very well received by the cash customers. Running time, 55 minutes. Played October 8.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.



MOUNTAIN RHYTHM: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Good old Gene. A small town exhibitor's weekend friend. He always has had an exceptionally good following. This was a very pleasing picture. A word of prayer for those responsible for such a fine western star.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CAREER: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley—Edward Ellis is always good and so is Anne Shirley. This picture pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 79 minutes. Played September 27-28.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

LOVE AFFAIR: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—Irene Dunne was born just a few miles from here and the local folks just lay a little claim to her because she is a Hoosier. She is always a good draw, no matter how often played. "Love Affair" is one of her best, so they all said, and that was enough for me. Running

Helps Exhibitor Move Equipment to New Location

LITTLETON, N. H.—"When we decided to move our theatre operations in Colebrook, N. H. from the former location at the Halcyon Theatre to the new Jax Theatre, we only gave ourselves from Tuesday afternoon to Thursday afternoon.

"When you consider the headaches involved in moving all the complicated machinery a theatre contains in so short a time, and that we announced our opening at the Jax for the Thursday matinee at 2 P.M., you can realize how worried I was.

"Not only did the Altec inspector, Jennings, do a fine job of supervising, but he rolled up his shirt sleeves and helped our men in every way throughout the entire change over. When he saw how worried I was about opening on time, he quietly assured me we would be ready with both perfect sound and projection.

"As Jennings promised, we opened in perfect shape at the time we announced."

Throughout the country, Altec inspectors have won the respect and friendship of exhibitors, managers and projectionists because of their willing cooperation in matters "over and above the contract."

time, 89 minutes. Played October 4-5.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

THEY MADE HER A SPY: Sally Eilers, Allan Lane—An exciting story that pleased. In spite of rain, we did very well at the box office. Played September 30.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WAY DOWN SOUTH: Bobby Breen, Alan Mowbray, Ralph Morgan—Opinion was divided. Business good in spite of hot weather. Played September 16.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BOY FRIEND: Jane Withers—Played with "Wife, Husband and Friend." These are old. I had to play or pay for them. I knew they were no good. What do you think? Jane Withers, one of my favorite stars, pulled them in and I did a nice business.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT TREAURE ISLAND: Sidney Toler, Cesar Romero—Just a program picture. No kicks, no complaints and no business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played October 13-14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ESCAPE, THE: Kane Richmond, Amanda Duff, Henry Armetta—A good programer for "B" houses. I have had better from the independent companies. Running time, 61 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL: Randolph Scott, Nancy Kelly, Cesar Romero, Binnie Barnes—The days of yesteryear again walk to new victories in "Frontier Marshal." An excellent star-studded cast, including Cesar Romero as "Doc Halliday." Cesar Romero turns in a splendid performance that Fox should well be proud of. This picture should be classed with the best of outdoor films. Running time, 74 minutes. Played October 6-7.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

MR. MOTO TAKES A VACATION: Peter Lorre, Joseph Schildkraut—Like the other Mr. Moto's, interesting and enjoyable. Running time, 68 minutes. Played September 29-30.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

MR. MOTO TAKES A VACATION: Peter Lorre, Joseph Schildkraut—"Mr. Moto Takes A Vacation" just like all the rest both in quality and story. Played with "Quick Millions."—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

QUICK MILLIONS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—"Quick Millions" is the best Jones Family ever produced. You'll enjoy it. I don't mean the towns that don't know the difference, but in any he-man's town. Played with "Mr. Moto Takes A Vacation."—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

RETURN OF THE CISCO KID: Warner Baxter, Lynn Bari, Cesar Romero—Very satisfactory and business was up to normal. Played October 7.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee—Good musical that pleased. Thanx, Fox. —C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, George Bancroft—A very timely picture which we played on the weekend as a single bill, and were very gratified with our box office receipts.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple—The little girl just don't do it any more. As for the picture, it's only fair. Running time, 80 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Binnie Barnes—See report on "Boy Friend."—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Marjorie Weaver, Alice Brady—A very good picture, but the folks just don't go for pictures of this type. Who profits with 'em anyway?—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—If there's any story America don't want to see, it's this. We are so sick of war; the only thing we all would like is a good sock at Hitler or Stalin; but this is one of those awkward English productions, beautiful in color, a spectacle of the Nile, battles between the British and the Fuzzy Wuzzies, well backed by a typical country life found only in England, and as well done as any I have seen from the other side. Oh, if the English would only learn to laugh, perhaps they might make us laugh once in a while. I'm willing to try and like them.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

Universal

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT (Re-Issue): Lew Ayres—Play up that uncensored angle. Never mind the picture. It's uncensored, and that's what counts. I checked back and as near as I can find, "All Quiet" was originally 138 minutes long. Uncensored by war or military authories, and reissued, it runs a little over 90 minutes. So the situation is clarified. "All Quiet" has apparently shrunk so in footage there was little left to censor. The full imports of many of the scenes that made "All Quiet" a great piece of anti-war propaganda have been decidedly dulled by the rabble rousing voice of a Hollywood commentator, whose attempted assistance in the clarification of the points brought out by the action results not only in an insult to our intelligence but does not refrain from revealing Hollywood's dislike of the Nazis. In fact, when the voice of Hollywood concerns itself with bringing the film more or less up to date and drawing comparisons (its only fairly legitimate excuse for being on the sound track), it immediately undertakes a little propaganda of its very own, which may prove slightly distasteful to the long-suffering theatre managers, who must face the public. The acting, especially that of Lew Ayres, is remarkably poor, and the technical efforts, of course, appears slightly amateurish in the face of our present improvements. However, "All Quiet on the Western Front" is, as it was then, a great motion picture. Played October 5-6. —C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corporation, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

BLACK BANDIT: Bob Baker, Marjorie Reynolds—Below average western as far as the western fans were concerned. Running time, 55 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

I STOLE A MILLION: George Raft, Claire Trevor —Good "B" product that gets by nicely. Running time, 77 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

I STOLE A MILLION: George Raft, Claire Trevor —Gave fair satisfaction to small business. Played September 27-28.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUYS IN SOCIETY: Mischa Auer, Mary Boland, Edward Everett Horton—Just a fair picture. Business nothing to write home about. Enjoyed by those who saw it. We believe these types of pictures are losing their box office appeal.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SUN NEVER SETS, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Basil Rathbone, C. Aubrey Smith—The picture didn't "set" so well, either. Running time, 96 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—A very pleasing production that pleased fair sized audience. Sandy delighted both young and old. Played September 20-21.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Warner Brothers

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven—While the picture proved to be interesting, mainly because of its timeliness (and we say this regrettingly), most of our patrons with critical minds (and believe you me, they can be critical) were of the opinion there was too much repetition; many of the characters were difficult to understand. Errol Flynn was characterized as being a superhuman, and the over-abundance of alcoholic beverages did not seem reasonable. However, all praised the excellent acting of each and every character, with special citation going to David Niven and Basil Rathbone.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland—We ran this a little late, but better late than never. If you have not run it, it is well worth the time. Running time, 89 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

HORRORS OF WAR: Had to pull this picture one day early. Let us down terrifically. Running time, 57 minutes. Played October 7-9.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BIG FISH: Special Sport Thrills—Very good, with plenty of excitement all the way. Marlin fishing. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

COMMUNITY SING SERIES: We cannot get our folks to sing, but they seem to enjoy these single reels. Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

JITTERBUG KNIGHTS: Color Rhapsodies—Very poor. Nothing to it. Running time, 6 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LUCKY PIGS: Color Rhapsodies—Just an average cartoon.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

NOT GUILTY ENOUGH: Broadway Comedies—We played this twice. Plenty of good laughs.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS SERIES: Very well received. As popular a single reel as in on the market. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

TECHNIGUE OF TENNIS: Special Sport Thrills—Very interesting sport subject.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WE WANT OUR MUMMY: Three Stooges—Stooges are tops in entertainment with us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALFALFA'S AUNT: Our Gang—"Our Gang" always are well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PENNY'S PICNIC: Peter Smith Specialties—If the people in your local district get a wild notion to go camping and pack a lot of tinware, it's a good bet they have been "Penny's Picnic." Excellent; don't pass it up. Filmed in color. Running time, 9 minutes. —Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

SEAL SKINNERS: Captain and the Kids—They seemed to enjoy this very much.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RKO Radio

MICKEY'S PARROT: Walt Disney Cartoons—Disney makes the cartoons. There's no use of arguing. A theatre without them is the same as no salt on your meat.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GOLDEN CALIFORIA: Magic Carpet Series (Lowell Thomas)—Above the average Carpet reels. Made the mistake of not coloring this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

FASHION FORECAST: Autumn Styles—Very well received. Ladies enjoyed it immensely.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FASHION FORECAST, NO. 2: Fashions (In Color) —A beautiful reel and would be much better if it were only possible to eliminate the voice of Ilka Chase. Photographed in the best of color. Running time, 9 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

HOUSEWIFE HERMAN: Terry-Toons—Just seven minutes too long.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

LAND OF CONTENTMENT: Magic Carpet Series (Lowell Thomas)—Just a fair subject. Running time, 7 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: This News, which is issued twice each week, is, beyond a doubt, the best newsreel in the industry. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

OWL AND THE PUSSYCAT, THE: Terry Toons—Here is a cartoon I will have to admit is clever. Has good music and color.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

TWO HEADED GIANT: Terry Toons—Good cartoon in color. Will please the kids.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

PLUTO'S JUDGMENT DAY: Mickey Mouse—Will do in a pinch. Running time, 9 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

DAVE APOLLON AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—As good a band reel as you can see. Tops in anybody's language. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE: Color Parade—Just a filler. Shelve it. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOBO GADGET BAND: Merrie Melodies—An entertaining Merrie Melody which seemed to have a particular appeal to our boys. Should please any audience. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

IT'S THE McCOY: Clyde McCoy and his Orchestra—Our most popular orchestra here. It has feature attraction.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LONE STRANGER AND PORKY, THE: Looney Tunes—Although this was considered one of the best black-and-white cartoons for 1939, we felt disappointed. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PORKY'S PICNIC: Looney Tunes—We have had a lot better. Vitagraph had better get a new series if they want something that will make a hit. Running time, 6 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

POW WOW: Technicolor Specials—Good one-reeler in color. Shows Navajo Indian at home and a good rodeo with thrills.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ROBBIN' GOOD: Vitaphone Varieties—An expose of gambling. Interesting enough to show what a sucker one can be in a public gambling house. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Inc. Small town patronage.

SOPHOMORE SWING: Broadway Brevities—A good short for those who enjoy modern dancing. There is music, dancing and comedy enough to please most any audience. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SWINGTIME IN THE MOVIES: Broadway Brevities—A very outstanding two-reeler.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WISE CRACK: Looney Tunes—Good black-and-white cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Luis Enrique Perez, Republic's distributor in Venezuela, is constructing a theatre in Caracas to be called the Cinelandia and which will seat 1,000. The opening is planned for January with a Republic film.

Leif-Erik Bech Issues Norwegian Film Annual

Leif-Erik Bech, Norwegian film journalist, has assembled, edited and published the Norsk Filmregister for 1939. The year book lists the domestic productions of 1937 and 1938 and foreign importations from 1936 to 1939, including American films, and their production credits. In the case of foreign films both the Norwegian title and the original title are given. Distributing companies in Norway handling both domestic foreign pictures with a listing of their product are included in the year book. The annual also contains portrait stills and production stills, both domestic and foreign.

Walsh To Direct Republic's "Command"

Republic on Wednesday announced that Raoul Walsh has been signed to direct "The Dark Command," the first of its four new top budget pictures. The picture is to start in about two weeks and will cost $750,000. Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Brian Donlevy and Charles Bickford will star.

Paramount-Post Toasties Drive

Paramount and Post Toasties have completed plans for a national co-operative campaign which will use 800-line newspaper advertising in leading cities. The stars of Paramount's "$1,000 a Touchdown," Martha Raye and Joe E. Brown, will be featured in the advertisements which will promote both the picture and the breakfast food.

Levin Dead

Charles S. Levin, 73-year-old partner with Matty Radin in the operation of the Cameo theatre, died Wednesday in a fall from the elevated floor of the Bush Building next to the theatre on 42nd street, New York.

Mr. Levin was formerly secretary and associate general manager with William Fox in Fox Theatres Corporation.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THE "KNOW HOW"

The story is told of the manager in a metropolitan deluxe operation whom circumstances forced into a lesser situation where he had to do his own ads. Accustomed to the services of an adman, the lad was hard put to it to take over these duties in the new spot. It appeared that he hadn't gotten around to learning the fundamentals especially having to do with the preparation of mats and sichlike.

It isn't an usual story, of course. But it is a quite possible one. More than one manager doing a sound job of what he is expected to do is not completely at ease with all processes of advertising. By which no finger-pointing is indicated. Considering the varying classifications of theatres and theatre duties, every manager everywhere is not called upon to be an ad expert. But every theatreman who regards himself as conscientious, who is ambitious to add to his equipment, should strive for a fairly intimate knowledge of theatre operation fundamentals which importantly include advertising technique. As Jim Nairn says in his article about it on a following page:

"A manager should have at least a working knowledge of what a newspaper mechanical department can and cannot do. He should also know how mats are made and how to mark his copy and mats to insure the best results."

The birth of this important contribution came about at the last Famous Players - Canadian managers convention where was distributed an illustrated booklet entitled "From Layout to Theatre Page", authored by the same Nairn, F. P. - C. circuit ad head, and an immediate best seller, according to the reception from the conventioneers. It told nothing new but what it did was told completely, concisely, from "A" to "Izzard". The word soon spreading, demand overtook supply. To save the day, Jim generously burnt midnight oil, abridged the manual only to meet Round Table space limitations—and here it is.

The eagerness with which theatremen accept advices on fundamentals from members competent to talk indicates a healthy yearning to learn all there is to know about how to do things too often taken for granted. It is obvious that there will be as many requests for the Nairn article as there were for the Kuehn series on personnel training and other meaty contributions on the "a, b, c's" of exhibition.

What is to be termed a short but thorough course in unexcelled showmanship is contained in the complete record of the Poli New England Theatres New Season Hit Parade and Golden Jubilee campaign, now received at these offices. Vigorously backed by headman, Harry Shaw, and publicity director, Lou Brown, carried through in conjunction with Loew-men in every situation, the drive rates a flock of extra bows for all concerned. It is estimated that well over one million people viewed the Motorcade, the featured promotion of the entire project, reported in detail here some weeks back.

SHOWMANSHIP CUTS IT DOWN

Visiting in these parts as a delegate to the annual National Safety Congress, that Dallas-man, Louie Charninsky, came on by to pay his respects and to talk some about the helpful job being done by the Texas theatremen to cut down traffic accidents. Under the personal supervision of civic-minded Interstate heads, Karl Hoblitzelle and R. J. O'Donnell, whom Louie represented at the congress, the circuit is waging a consistently vigorous campaign in every theatre through every manager. Admonitory trailers are run regularly as are all appropriate shorts. Wherever possible, caution is stressed in advertising and traffic education carried on especially at Saturday kid matinees. According to Charninsky, results are encouraging. Dallas traffic accidents continue to lessen.

Traffic drives are as old as the first horse and buggy. There isn't much left to romance about. Fortunate are those communities where that little is in the hands of theatremen who infuse these projects with a selling persuasiveness that marks their best boxoffice efforts.

The homey clank of the kitchen radiator these nippy mornings serves notice that campaigning for Thanksgiving Days—both of them—and Christmas will soon be the order of the day.

Round Table In Pictures

Reproduced at right is part of the Wilkes-Barre football fans who cheered as two convict bally men advertised Manager John Galvin's opening of "Mutiny in the Big House" at the Penn Theatre. The bally men were escorted by two policemen as they paraded with the band between halves of a championship game between local high schools. Boys also covered the downtown area ahead and during run.

Seven-foot image of "The Man in the Iron Mask" was displayed in the lobby of Loew's Valentine in Toledo by Wally Caldwell. Green eyes operated on a flasher supplied the animation. Figure, which was mounted on rollers was stationed in front of theatre during run.

Sandbags were used by W. B. Pratt to transform the lobby of the Paramount Theatre in Atlanta for "All Quiet on the Western Front", with barbed-wire fence at the back. On either side of boxoffice were swords, trench knives and steel helmets, while in front was machine-gun nest and shell. Note 24-sheet atop marquee. . . . Tying-in with the annual Red Cross relief drive, Ed Fitzpatrick at the Poli in Waterbury, Conn., for "The Rains Came" had a number of 30 by 40 posters made up plugging the drive and the marvelous work done by relief groups after the earthquake-and-flood scene in the picture. Posters were planted in banks, newsstands, building lobbies and Red Cross headquarters.

Above shows Lew Ayres and Ann Rutherford engrossed in reading giant postcard signed by patrons of the Century Theatre in Minneapolis as advance publicity engaged in by Charlie Zinn for "Calling Dr. Kildare". Photo was blown up and used for lobby display in addition to being planted in local dailies.

Below may be seen Division Manager Sol Schwartz of the RKO Theatres with Mme. Silvercruys whom he induced to talk from the stage of the 58th Street Theatre during the run of "Nurse Edith Cavell". Mme. Silvercruys, who was a nurse in a Brussels hospital when Edith Cavell was executed, told of true incidents which occurred just prior to and after the execution. Lobby easel also plugged the stunt.

Gorilla impersonator locked in a cage paraded streets of Bombay to herald that picture's opening at the Regal Theatre. Street bally was arranged by J. J. Unwalla, publicity manager for Fox there. Side of car was bannered with title, cast, playdates, etc.

Girls with imprinted banners shown above standing in lobby of the Boyd in Philadelphia were also used by Maurice Gable to distribute "Babes in Arms" buttons to pedestrians. Aggregation was also driven about town in bannered car.

The Weather "Unusual" in L.A.? Blame It On Tom—Not the Climate

Ever since he brought snow to Los Angeles in the summertime, as ballyhoo buildup for a date, Tom Soriero has been honin' for another occasion to mess up the weather in that climate-conscious community. The long-awaited opportunity came about with the Round Tabler's campaign for the "The Rains Came" at the United Artists, and had to do with an artificial rain that fell and fell—even without the approval of the Chamber of Commerce.

Soriero placed a 25-foot sprinkler with holes in it considerably above the marquee and extending out about nine feet so that the downpour would drain into the street gutter. The height was to induce an illusion of rain, and since the marquee lighting made it difficult to distinguish the source, patrons leaving the show believed they were in the midst of a shower. So much so, reports Soriero, that many of them wanted taxis until the "unusual weather" was explained.

The wetness was turned on from opening time until the boxoffice closed, and as further buildup, Tom dressed the stunt with giant lettered beach umbrellas in the lobby, put lettered raincoats on his usherettes who made a great show of walking under the downpour.

Newcomers Are Welcomed On "Here I Am a Stranger"

Through the cooperation of all downtown hotels, Morris Rosenthal of the Majestic, in Bridgeport, Conn., arranged for the distribution of small envelopes addressed to "A Stranger in Our Midst," containing copy on "Here I Am a Stranger." Special herald utilizing the President's Thanksgiving proclamation was tied in with the new season hit and classified page of the Times-Star carried a banner head using the title of the picture and tying it in with "Here I Am a Stranger—Will I find my furnished room?"

For "All Quiet on the Western Front," Rosenthal secured a five-foot map of European countries and inserted colored pins to show the Allies and Germany's military positions and Navy and Airplane bases. Morris further tied up the local paper to keep the map up to date, paper playing the stunt up prominently in news stories with reproduction of the display. Fronting the map were sand bags, aerial bombs, rifles, helmets, gas masks, machine guns and grenades.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Phillips and Gooch Report Football Gags

As a goodwill builder, Manager Carmon Phillips of the Lea Theatre, in Eunice, New Mexico, invites all members of local winning football teams to be guests at his house, night of game. In addition Phillips started the ball rolling with the result that other merchants came through with eats, drinks, etc., which were made available to the winners at the respective stores, so that the lads had a sort of progressive dinner before attending the show. Athletic instructor introduced the team from stage and the ticket tieup is plugged in theatre lobby, advertising truck and in the school proper.

Manager Francis Gooch, the Uptown, in Bath, Maine, was invited as one of two outside speakers to speak at a rally for the high school. Giving that old pep talk to the boys, Gooch finished up by offering five guest tickets to each player who made a touchdown during the season. Talk and offer made stories in local daily.

Mayor Issues Proclamation For Macris' Anniversary

To usher in Diana Theatre's first anniversary week and the current showing of "The Women," Jim Macris in Medina, New York, secured the cooperation of Mayor J. P. Slack, who issued a proclamation urging readers to show their appreciation by attending the show. Scene cuts from the picture were used in the dailies week ahead and letters of appreciation from local prominents printed. Through tieup effected with the Lions Club, Ad Club, Junior Chamber of Commerce and other organizations tickets were sold a week ahead.

Handbills were dropped from airplane at noon when school was being dismissed, merchants cooperated by generous use of window displays, theatre's ballyhoo truck heralded the opening and three-sheets were spotted strategically on all highways leading into the city.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Bannan Distributes Extras To Sell Preview Pictures

Pulled every Saturday night on which a picture is previewed, is the distribution of "extras" to sell George Bannan's attractions at the Van Wert, in Van Wert, Ohio. With the local paper donating 1000 papers, the theatreman overprints the first page in red with copy calling attention to the opening, title, cast and playdates. Newsies calling out "Extra, extra, biggest event in years coming to the Van Wert," distribute 700 papers in town and 100 each in three towns within a radius of 10 miles.

Due to the merchandising possibilities of the title "The Women," Bannan based his campaign on cooperative newspaper advertising and window displays. Full page was secured using a scene from the picture in each ad, with streamer across top reading "Tomorrow is Van Wert's shopping day for 'The Women.'" In order to get shoppers out early, five passes were given to small advertisers and 10 to large advertisers. These were given to the first shoppers who inquired about merchandise advertised on the "The Women" page.

The 'What's What' About Display Ads On the Next Page

(1) Although the main plug in this 200 lines on 2 col., is shared by Zorina in the picture and Hal Kemp on the stage, the Warner ad men also found reason to build up "On Your Toes" at the New York Strand for metropolitan familiars by reference to the authors and producer of the original play; the last play in which the star appeared. Earlier screen success of Eddie Albert is similarly referred to.

(2-3). Finding some definite male opposition, locally, to his date on "The Women" at the Laroy, Portsmouth, Ohio, Manager J. Knox Strachan overcame this reaction and favorably with two trick layouts, both 70 lines of 2 col. These were run two days ahead of a Sunday opening, in the same issue, each ad referring to the other in a line of copy at the bottom—one for women, the other for men.

(4) To strike on some unusual way of introducing "Mr. Smith" at the W&V Colonial, in Allentown, Pa., an inter-office communication between Walter Vincent and Manager Charley Bierbauer was reproduced in 190 lines on 3 col. Headed "Inside Stuff," a take-off on a popular local newspaper column, the copy included all the essential points having to do with stars and directors, theatre and date.

(5) Following a sustained advance campaign stressing the recent personal appearance of the stars at the theatre, this zippy 135 lines on 3 col., from Howard Dietz was used day ahead to sell "Babes In Arms" at the New York Capitol. The simplicity of the cartoon line-cuts and effectively used white space contributed to this climax-ad that tied up the week's campaign.

(6) Comparison of this 135 lines on 3 col., for the "Mr. Smith" with the one immediately to its left shows two different selling angles in different situations. The Music Hall layout and copy makes much over Frank Capra in stressing his contribution to the picture and his long line of past successes. That was done to capitalize upon the director's metropolitan popularity, copy noting that all of these pictures had been Music Hall datings.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Plants Ad in School Edition

Moving into the special "back to school" edition of the Albertan, Manager Pete Egan at the Palace, in Calgary, planted his theatre and forthcoming attractions ad up front. Aimed directly at the children, flyer across top read "motion pictures never played such an important role in education as they do today," this followed by plugs for pictures with direct appeal to the younger element.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON

Director—Capra

Running time—130 minutes

Cast—Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Claude Rains, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Thomas Mitchell, Beulah Bondi

General Release Date—October 19, 1939

Available for—Colonial, Allentown, State, Harrisburg; Embassy, Reading, Embassy, Johnstown.

Remarks—MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON is, to all of our minds, about the best picture we have ever seen. I think it will do twice as much business as GOODBYE MR. CHIPS did and on account of its being an American story and filled with the things that thrill an American, MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON becomes in the minds of Americans a better picture than CHIPS.

The picture is something on the type of MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN, except MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON is more serious and we think a far better picture.

You cannot advertise MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON too strongly if anyone misses MR SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON they have missed the treat of their lives.

The Newspaper Display Ad, from Layout to Theatre Page

Fundamentals of Mechanical Operations Outlined by Canadian Member

by JAMES R. NAIRN
Advertising Director, F. P.-Canadian Corp.

Like the majority of large circuits, Famous Players Canadian Corporation maintains a Home Office advertising and publicity department. One of the most important of this department's assignments is the preparation of newspaper advertisements. The ads are primarily designed for Toronto theatres and other key spots. In addition campaigns are made up for the use of the circuit, on all major pictures.

In preparing the advertising, the department follows the general procedure of other such organizations. Visuals or layouts are first sketched and copy written to fit the designs. Copy is set by a typesetting firm and proofs pasted into place on the layouts. Halftone illustrations are prepared by having "velox" prints made of the photographs and the final retouching is done on the "velox," thus insuring proper reproduction. A thorough explanation of this process was given in a comprehensive article in MOTION PICTURE HERALD in July 22 issue by E. V. Dinerman, of RKO Midwest Theatres.

Advertising mats, however, play the most important part in the average manager's campaigns and it is the purpose of this article to deal more fully with these rather than the original engravings from which they are cast.

Cautions Against Poor Reproductions

Nothing can ruin an ad more surely than a poor reproduction of a mat, yet even a quick check-up of tear sheets representative of theatres of all sizes shows a serious percentage of poor and sometimes downright bad reproductions.

It is often the fault of a manager that a poor illustration appears in his ad. True, he did not manufacture the mat, but if he knows his job he can prevent, in the vast majority of cases, the use of mats that will not give him 100 per cent quality.

Many managers make the serious mistake of clipping an illustration from the press book, ordering the mat by number and then turning it over to the newspaper confident that the reproduction will be as good as that in the press book. No more serious mistake could be made. Press books are generally illustrated by direct reproductions from the original engravings—not stereos cast from mats. Defects in plates from which mats are made rarely show up in the press book.

What the Manager Should Know

Two faults are to be found on occasions in the original engravings prepared for film distributors. The chief fault is that sometimes the engravings are not etched deeply enough. It is possible to make a good mat from a "shallow etched" engraving. A mat, no matter how carefully made, is certain to lose something of the original quality of the engraving and unless a cut is etched to a depth of no less than five-thousandth of an inch, it is doubtful whether a good mat can be pulled from it. Another fault with some press book ads is that the screen in the engraving is too fine. These finer halftones make a grand looking press book, but fill in black when reproduced on newsprint.

It is against these two major faults and the additional possibility of not getting a good job in his newspaper plant, that a manager must be constantly on guard.

After a manager has laid out his schedule of space in advance he should order the mats he selects from the exchange as early as possible and take them to the foreman of the stereotyping room of his newspaper at once. Here this expert can cast the mat and immediately determine whether it will make a satisfactory reproduction or not. If he is even doubtful as to the mat's quality, the advertiser is well advised to scrap it and get another illustration. A type ad is a thousand times more effective than a bad illustration and the only sure way to determine its quality is to have it cast up in advance.

If ever a weekly pass to a theatre is justified it is when it is planted with the head of the stereo room of a newspaper. The manager who hasn't met this important individual might be well advised to make his acquaintance at once.

A manager should have at least a working knowledge of what a newspaper mechanical department can and cannot do. He should also know how mats are made and how to mark his copy and mats to insure the best results.

In the first place, a layout is essential for the guidance of both the compositors and the stereotypers. Copy of illustrations should be cut from the press book and pasted down on a layout sheet indicating the exact position the mats are to occupy in the ad. Copy should then be written in on the layout after the outline of the ad size has been indicated.

Illustrated here is a large mat (Example A above)—much larger than the average theatre can afford to use. Suppose, however, a smaller ad is wanted (Example B, next page), combining several illustrations from the large ad. An advertiser decides to use, for example, the heads of Laurence Olivier and Valerie Hobson and Ralph Richardson, who are the most important elements in the ad, together with the line "The Year's Laugh Hit" and the title "Clouds Over Europe." He'd find, unless he went the right way about it, that he would hit some serious mechanical snags.

MORE ON AD MAKING

Send Whole Mat Together

Notice in the space enclosed by rules and marked (1) that he would get the heads of Olivier and Hobson all right, but in doing so he would cut into Richardson's head—ruining it. This is because of at least a half inch all around a line of copy or illustration must be left in order to allow that part taken from the mat to be properly cast. If he cuts out the head of Richardson (enclosed in space marked 2) he would spoil part of the title line because the necessary half inch border must be taken care of. The same is true of the title marked 3.

Only by sending the whole large mat (A) to the newspaper can the ad B be made up without spoiling the mat. At the newspaper plant the whole mat could be cast and the mechanical department saw out the sections needed without damaging the other portions of the mat.

To get the best results always make a layout of an advertisement (see example B) and take it to the newspaper together with the whole mat or mats from which the illustrations are to come. The newspaper experts can then remove and trim the necessary illustrations to conform with the layout. Never, under any circumstances, should a mat be cut by the advertiser.

What Happens to the Mat

Let's take a trip into the mechanical department of the average newspaper and see the journey a mat takes from the time it is handed in until it appears in the newspaper.

A matrix, commonly called "mat" (C, previous page), is mould of an advertisement, or engraving, made of specially manufactured soft cardboard, a sort of papier mache, which is soft when it is used but becomes hard when dried.

The important thing for an advertiser to remember is that a mat must not be trimmed close to the type or picture. A margin must be left.

Note the wide margins all around it. See how deeply the cardboard has been pressed into the type and into the engravings.

After an advertisement has been set up it is locked tight in a steel chase (steel frame) and placed under a heavy steel roller. The papier mache cardboard is then rolled down into the type, then pulled off and allowed to dry for a few minutes.

Note the wide margins allowed by the mat maker around the advertisement. This is important to remember. For example, if a manager is going to use only the man with the umbrella over his nose (Example B), and new reading matter for the rest of the advertisement, he should send newspaper the whole mat. If, however, just a mat of the man's face is available, he should be sure that there is at least a half inch margin all around the illustration, because, in casting up the mat strips of steel have to be placed on three sides of the picture to hold the hot lead that has to be poured into it.

The stereotyper has now taken the mat, pasted a strip of newspaper on one end of it which will guide molten lead straight down to the face of the mat. Strips of steel are placed at each side for the same purpose, to keep the molten lead from spreading out on the sides. When this work is completed, the stereotyper pulls down the steel cover (D, previous page), and clamps down into position. This operation determines the thickness the metal cast will have.

The stereotyper pours molten lead into the casting box to make the cut for the newspaper. Beside him is the melting pot, filled to the top with hot lead. Into this he dips a ladle, then pours the sparkling, silvery metal down on the mat. It takes about half a minute to solidify. Then he opens up the casting box and pulls the mat away from the lead while it is still hot.

Trimming and Renting

The flat lead plate now goes into the hands of the man operating the sawing table. A powerful, fast-revolving circular saw cuts through lead (E, previous page), trimming the cast to exact size. After the sawing is done, any raw edges are filed smooth, and the plate is now ready for the final touches.

The plate goes to the finishing operation (F, previous page), routing out spaces between pictures and reading matter, which appear white in the newspaper. If this were not done there might be some smudging in the white spaces. This takes considerable time and requires a steady hand and clear eyesight. It is during this operation that words, or parts of illustrations that are not wanted are deleted. When this work is finished the plate is passed over to the men who make up the pages of the newspaper and it finally goes to its proper place.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Harris' Friday, the 13th Gag

Teaser gag used by Loew's publicist Milt Harris on the recent Friday, the 13th, for the date of "The Real Glory" was the distribution of small envelopes front of which bore copy "Friday, the 13th, may be your lucky day." Inside was small card stamped with lucky number. To those holding cards with numbers corresponding to list displayed in windows of chain druggist, guest tickets were awarded.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Bids Golden Wedding Couples

To usher in the motion picture industry's Golden Jubilee, Round Tabler E. E. Bair at the Valentine, in Defiance, Ohio, garnered some additional publicity for the event by advertising that all couples married 50 years or more would be his guests at a special show. Through the cooperation of one of the dailies, coupon was run in paper, which readers were invited to fill out and send in. Stories run by paper included appropriate tiein copy to the effect that when these same couples were first married the motion picture was in its infancy.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.
